The Mission of Duke University

The founding indenture of Duke University directed the members of the university to “develop our resources, increase our wisdom, and promote human happiness.”

To these ends, the mission of Duke University is to provide a superior liberal education to undergraduate students, attending not only to their intellectual growth but also to their development as adults committed to high ethical standards and full participation as leaders in their communities; to prepare future members of the learned professions for lives of skilled and ethical service by providing excellent graduate and professional education; to advance the frontiers of knowledge and contribute boldly to the international community of scholarship; to foster health and well-being through medical research and patient care; and to promote a sincere spirit of tolerance, a sense of the obligations and rewards of citizenship, and a commitment to learning, freedom, and truth.

By pursuing these objectives with vision and integrity, Duke University seeks to engage the mind, elevate the spirit, and stimulate the best effort of all who are associated with the university; to contribute in diverse ways to the local community, the state, the nation, and the world; and to attain and maintain a place of real leadership in all that we do.

— Adopted by the Board of Trustees on February 23, 2001
The information in this bulletin applies to the academic year 2013-2014 and is accurate and current, to the extent possible, as of July 2013. The university reserves the right to change programs of study, academic requirements, teaching staff, the calendar, and other matters described herein without prior notice, in accordance with established procedures.

Duke University does not tolerate harassment of any kind. Sexual harassment and sexual misconduct are forms of sex discrimination and prohibited by the university. Duke University has designated Dr. Benjamin Reese, Vice-President for Institutional Equity, as the individual responsible for the coordination and administration of its nondiscrimination and harassment policies. The Office of Institutional Equity is located in Smith Warehouse, 114 S. Buchanan Blvd., Bay 8, Durham, NC 27708. Dr. Reese’s office telephone number is (919) 684-8222 and his e-mail address is ben.reese@duke.edu.

Questions or comments about harassment or discrimination can be directed to the Office for Institutional Equity, (919) 684-8222. Additional information, including the complete text of the harassment policy and appropriate complaint procedures, may be found by contacting the Office for Institutional Equity or visiting its website at: www.duke.edu/web/equity/.

Duke University recognizes and utilizes electronic mail as a medium for official communications. The university provides all students with e-mail accounts as well as access to e-mail services from public clusters if students do not have personal computers of their own. All students are expected to access their e-mail accounts on a regular basis to check for and respond as necessary to such communications, just as they currently do with paper/postal service mail.

Information that the university is required to make available under the federal Clery Act is available by visiting the Records Division, Duke University Police Department, 502 Oregon Street, Durham, NC 27708, or by calling (919) 684-4602. See http://duke.edu/police/news_stats/clery/index.php for more details.

The Family Educational Rights & Privacy Act (FERPA), 20 U.S.C § 1232g; 34 CFR Part 99, is a federal law that guides the release of students’ education records, of which disciplinary records are a part. For additional information about FERPA, see http://www.ed.gov/policy/gen/guid/fpco/ferpa/index.html.

Duke University is accredited by the Commission on Colleges of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools to award baccalaureate, masters, doctorate, and professional degrees. Contact the Commission on Colleges at 1866 Southern Lane, Decatur, GA 30033-4097 or call (404) 679-4500 for questions about the accreditation of Duke University.

Inquiries about Duke Law School may be made by calling (919) 613-7020 or (919) 613-7006. Queries about admissions, financial aid or other aspects of Duke Law School’s programs, may also be sent via e-mail to admissions@law.duke.edu. Please also see Duke Law School’s website at http://law.duke.edu.

Altruism combined with realism; knowledge of fundamental principles and capacity to apply them; courage to insist on the right and patience to achieve it; understanding of the timidity of the weak; fearlessness of the domination of the powerful; sympathy for the mistakes of the indiscreet; caution of the craftiness of the unprincipled; enthusiasm for that which is fine and inspiring; reverence for that which is sacred; these are some of the attributes of great lawyers.

The Distinction of Duke

Duke University School of Law

The mission of the Duke Law School is to 1) prepare students for responsible and productive lives in the legal profession by providing the most rigorous possible education within a collaborative, supportive, and diverse environment, and 2) provide national and international leadership in improving the law and legal institutions through research and public service.

In carrying out this mission, the faculty recognizes that the most effective legal education entails more than teaching legal rules, which are countless and subject to frequent change and reinterpretation. The best lawyers are those whose intellectual discipline, creative problem-solving skills, critical thinking, and sound judgment can be adapted to new fields and unanticipated circumstances. In addition to analytical skills, lawyers require a strong ethical compass, leadership abilities, strong professional skills, and a commitment to engaging in the world and using their training to make it better. Duke Law School helps students develop all of these capacities in a context that is both collegial and intellectually demanding.

The faculty also recognizes that research and service should relate to the improvement, and better public understanding, of law and legal institutions. It is committed to diverse research approaches, methodologies, points of view, and to interdisciplinary collaboration.

Leadership in Interdisciplinary Research and Teaching

Duke Law is a national leader in interdisciplinary legal education. Many faculty members have joint appointments, close research, or teaching arrangements with other schools and departments at Duke, including The Fuqua School of Business, the Sanford School of Public Policy, the Nicholas School of the Environment, the School of Medicine, the Pratt School of Engineering, Duke Divinity School, women’s studies, and the political science and history departments in the Trinity College of Arts & Sciences. Faculty from a number of these and other schools and departments have secondary appointments at the law school.

Duke Law School has been a pioneer in dual-degree programs. Typically, between 20 and 25 percent of its JD students now enroll in another degree program at Duke (including the school’s own LLM program in International and Comparative Law and its new LLM in Law and Entrepreneurship)—among the highest of any top law school.

An important reason for the cross-disciplinary strength at Duke Law School is the commitment of central university resources for interdisciplinary research, teaching, and faculty appointments. The proximity of the law school building to other schools and departments, such as the Sanford School of Public Policy and The Fuqua School of Business, aids interdisciplinary collaboration.

An Integrated Approach to Community and Leadership

Many law schools claim to have strong communities, but Duke's claim to this distinction is supported by substantial outside recognition. Duke Law School has become a national model in its cultivation of a strong and diverse community, one deliberately designed to build and reinforce specific leadership skills and professional values. A distinctive tool in this regard is a highly visible statement of principles for developing student lawyering skills beyond the classroom known as the “Duke Blueprint to LEAD (Lawyer Education and Development).” The Duke Law Blueprint sets goals for students that emphasize teamwork, problem-solving, positive vision, stress reduction, ethical reflection, managing constructive change, and negotiating individual success within a commitment to the success of a larger organization or institution. Blueprint values are reinforced in every aspect of student life, from first-year student orientation, to career and professional development panels, leadership retreats, and student-faculty collaborations in both curricular and extra-curricular projects.

Duke’s excellence in promoting leadership and professionalism through its integrated approach to student life has been recognized by a number of national awards from the American Bar Association. These include the Gambrell Award in 2005 for the best law school program in professionalism, the 2004 award for the best law school student government, and the 2005 award for the top student bar association president. More recently, the ABA cited the school’s student culture as among the strongest in the nation.

This collegial environment is due in large part to the close interactions between faculty and students. Faculty are highly accessible and collaborate with students on scholarship, conferences, pro bono work, and community service projects. Students report high satisfaction with the quality of the community and their relationships with one another and with the faculty.

Law in the Service of Society

Duke Law faculty scholars routinely integrate their theoretical knowledge and their teaching with finding solutions to real problems facing lawyers, judges, and public institutions. Many Duke faculty came to the academy with extensive practical experience in government, private practice, or public interest positions. They are often engaged in such activities as Supreme Court advocacy, testimony at congressional hearings, and media commentary. Faculty are involved in law reform initiatives on matters as diverse as tax reform in Russia, constitutional reform in emerging democracies, intellectual property rules for “orphan works,” access to medicines by developing countries, grand jury reform, drug safety system improvements, and review of wrongful criminal convictions. Duke law faculty have served as project reporters for the American Law Institute (ALI), on ALI advisory committees, and in leadership positions on influential bodies such as the Advisory Committee on Rules of Civil Procedure for the Judicial Conference of the United States, the Federal Courts Study Committee, the Advisory Committee on Criminal Rules, and panels of the National Academy of Science. Several have served in key public service posts with government agencies such as the Department of Justice and the US Patent and Trademark Office and within the armed services. At Duke a premium is placed on advancing theoretical and empirical knowledge that improves legal institutions and is accessible and useful outside academia.

To that end, the school stresses experiential learning. The Duke in DC program combines a full-time externship in Washington, DC, with a rigorous course focused on topics relating to legislative policy and government regulation. Other programs also emphasize the development of lawyering skills, including domestic and international externships, top-quality moot court programs, and a legal writing program that is among the strongest in the nation. Duke Law School’s clinics offer invaluable real-world experiences to students and critical legal aid to the community. Students are able to deepen their practical knowledge, strengthen their problem-solving and lawyering skills, and begin to develop professional identities through the Duke Legal Clinics, which include the AIDS Legal Project, the Appellate Litigation Clinic, the Children’s Law Clinic, the Community Enterprise Clinic, the Environmental Law and Policy Clinic, the Guantanamo Defense Clinic, the Start-Up Ventures Clinic, and the Wrongful Convictions Clinic. The International Human Rights Clinic will begin operation in the spring 2014 semester. Advanced clinic students frequently engage in policy research and advocacy.

Technology Leadership

Duke Law School is recognized for its commitment to technological innovation. All regular classrooms and the library are equipped with cutting-edge technologies, supplemented by building-wide wireless connections. Duke Law faculty experiment with multimedia teaching materials, including an innovative documentary series on Supreme Court cases and a video case book for the first-year contracts course. These efforts have positioned the law school to develop new initiatives in continuing legal education for alumni and others, as well as products with potential uses in undergraduate education. Duke Law School is also a leader in its commitment to electronic publishing programs and open access to legal information.
Internationalization

Duke is home to one of the strongest international and comparative law programs in the country. Its full-time faculty includes experts in public international law, international trade law, global capital markets, international intellectual property law, international investments, sovereign debt, comparative corporate governance, US foreign relations law, global environmental law, international criminal law, and global health. The program is highly regarded both for its broad scope and high level of activity.

Through this highly interdisciplinary program, the international and comparative law faculty routinely engage in scholarly collaboration, faculty workshops, and conferences with schools and departments across campus. Students studying international and comparative law also routinely take classes outside the law school. Much of Duke’s distinction in this field can be credited to the interdisciplinary character of the university overall.

Duke’s strength in international and comparative law is further reflected in the extensive variety of degree programs it offers. Its JD/LLM program gives US law students an opportunity to earn a specialized degree in international law. Duke also has a competitive program for foreign students seeking an LLM degree in US law, as well as an SJD program for foreign students who wish to earn a US doctorate in law. Unlike some schools, Duke fully integrates its foreign students in the curricular and extracurricular life of the school. Its summer institutes in transnational law in Hong Kong and Geneva are among the best summer programs offered by any law school. Additional activities and resources for students include a student-edited journal dedicated to international and comparative law (the Duke Journal of Comparative and International Law), an active student International Law Society, and a clinic assisting military defense teams for detainees at Guantanamo Bay. The law school, through its Center for International and Comparative Law, also regularly brings in speakers to address topics relating to international and comparative law and sponsors conferences focused on this area of study. Recent seminars focusing on international human rights topics have included field research in Israel, Ghana, Haiti, and Brazil, and the school will launch an International Human Rights Clinic in the spring 2014 semester.
Law School Faculty

Presented here are faculty holding academic appointments in the Duke Law School.

Matthew Adler, Richard A. Horvitz Professor of Law and Professor of Economics, Philosophy and Public Policy, substantive areas of expertise include administrative law and constitutional law. Prior to joining the Duke Law faculty in July 2012 he was the Leon Meltzer Professor of Law at the University of Pennsylvania School of Law. He has been a visiting professor at Bar-Ilan University, Columbia University, Duke, the University of Chicago, and the University of Virginia.

Adler's scholarship focuses on three areas: policy analysis, risk regulation, and constitutional theory. He is the author of numerous articles and several books, including New Foundations of Cost-Benefit Analysis (Harvard, 2006; coauthored with Eric Posner); and Well-Being and Fair Distribution: Beyond Cost-Benefit Analysis, which systematically discusses how to integrate considerations of fair distribution into policy analysis (Oxford 2012). Adler is an editor of Legal Theory, the leading journal in the area of law and philosophy. His edited volume, The Rule of Recognition and the US Constitution (Oxford 2009; edited with Ken Himma) is an innovative work at the intersection of jurisprudence and constitutional theory, which discusses the applicability of H.L.A.'s notion of a “rule of recognition” to the US legal system.

Adler holds a BA and JD from Yale University, where he was a member of the Yale Law Journal. He also received an M. Litt. in modern history from St. Antony’s College at Oxford University, where he was a Marshall Scholar. He clerked for Judge Harry Edwards of the US Court of Appeals for the DC Circuit in 1991-1992 and for US Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor during the 1992-1993 term. Adler practiced litigation at Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison in New York prior to joining the University of Pennsylvania law faculty in 1995.

Katharine T. Bartlett, A. Kenneth Pye Professor of Law, served as dean of Duke Law School from 2000 to 2007. She teaches family law, employment discrimination law, gender and law, and contracts, and publishes widely in the fields of family law, gender theory, employment law, theories of social change, and legal education. She has the leading casebook (with Deborah Rhode) in the area of gender law.

Bartlett served as a reporter for the American Law Institute’s Principles of the Law of Family Dissolution (2002), for which she was responsible for the provisions relating to child custody. For her work on this project, she was named R. Ammi Cutter Chair in 1998.

Bartlett earned her degrees at Wheaton College, Harvard University, and the University of California at Berkeley. Before coming to Duke, she was a law clerk on the California Supreme Court and a legal services attorney in Oakland, California. She has been a visiting professor at UCLA and at Boston University, a scholar in residence at New York University School of Law and Columbia Law School, and a fellow at the National Humanities Center in Research Triangle Park, supported by the Rockefeller Foundation. In 1994, she won the University Scholar/Teacher of the Year Award at Duke University.

Lawrence G. Baxter, William B. McGuire Professor of the Practice of Law, focuses his teaching and scholarly research on the evolving regulatory environment for financial services and beyond. He also has published extensively in the areas of US federal and state administrative law; domestic and global banking and regulation; comparative law; jurisprudence; criminal law (United States and Australia); legal writing; constitutional law (non-US) and professional training and responsibility. He blogs about regulation, law, and public policy at www.theparetocommons.com.
Baxter rejoined the Duke Law faculty in 2009 as a visiting professor of the practice of law; he previously was on the governing faculty from 1986 to 1995. He began his academic career at the University of Natal in South Africa, where he held tenure from 1978 to 1984. In 1995, Baxter joined Wachovia Bank in Charlotte, North Carolina, serving first as special counsel for strategic development and later as corporate executive vice president, founding Wachovia’s Emerging Businesses and Insurance Group and eBusiness Group. He served as chief eCommerce officer for Wachovia Corporation from 2001 to 2006.

Baxter returned to Duke Law to lead an interdisciplinary program on modernizing the regulatory state, with initial focus on the regulation of financial services organizations in the wake of the financial crisis. He has taught a course on regulatory reform in the Duke in DC program and a course on banking regulation in a post-crash economy for upper-year and joint-degree students. At Wachovia, Baxter led the creation and implementation of two state-of-the-art online banking platforms and a landmark online financial services outsourcing partnership. Under his leadership, Wachovia was rated as the benchmark online financial services provider, ranking first in 2005 and 2006 in customer satisfaction for prospective and existing customers by all major ranking organizations and receiving recognition for the best designed financial services website. Since leaving Wachovia in 2006, Baxter has acted as a consultant and advisor to members of the online security industry and various Internet startup businesses in the caregiving, entertainment, social networking, and recruiting sectors.

During his academic career, Baxter has consulted with federal government agencies and promoted meaningful reforms to policies relating to financial institution supervision, enforcement and seizure, developing processes that were implemented at the congressional and regulatory level. He developed new teaching programs in US domestic and global banking regulation, reshaped an entire area of law in a country in crisis (South Africa), and authored numerous scholarly and industry works on regulation, financial services, and technology.

Sara Sun Beale, Charles L. B. Loundes Professor of Law, teaches first-year criminal law and upper-class courses in criminal justice policy and federal criminal law. Her principal academic interests include the federal government’s role in the criminal justice system, the laws defining federal crimes, and various issues of criminal procedure, including prosecutorial discretion. She is also interested in studying the factors that shape public attitudes regarding crime and how those attitudes ultimately translate into legislative changes in criminal laws and procedures.

Beale has been active in law reform efforts related to the federal government’s role in criminal justice matters. Since her appointment by Chief Justice Rehnquist in 2004, she has served as the reporter for the Advisory Committee on Criminal Rules, which drafts the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure. Beale previously served as an associate reporter for the Workload Subcommittee of the Federal Courts Study Committee (where much of her work focused on the Sentencing Guidelines) and as the reporter for a three branch federal-state working group convened by Attorney General Janet Reno to consider the principles that should govern the federalization of criminal law. Beale also served as a member of an American Bar Association task force studying the federalization of criminal law. She has argued before the Supreme Court on six occasions, representing the United States and as appointed counsel for an indigent defendant.

A member of the board of the International Society for the Reform of Criminal Law, Beale has lectured or taught in Australia, Belgium, Canada, Ireland, Japan, New Zealand, the Philippines, Scotland, Spain, and Switzerland. Beale received her BA degree in English and her JD degree, magna cum laude, from the University of Michigan. She clerked for Judge Wade H. McCree Jr. on the 6th US Circuit Court of Appeals, and served in the Office of Legal Counsel and the Office of the Solicitor General in the US Department of Justice before coming to Duke in 1979.

Stuart M. Benjamin, Douglas B. Maggs Chair in Law, specializes in telecommunications law, the First Amendment, and administrative law. He has been the Douglas B. Maggs Chair in Law since 2009, and the associate dean for research since 2005. From 2009 to 2011, he was the first Distinguished Scholar at the Federal Communications Commission.

Benjamin is a coauthor of Telecommunications Law and Policy (1st ed. 2001, 2nd ed. 2006, 3rd ed. 2012), has written numerous law review articles, and has provided testimony to the Senate as a legal expert.

From 2001 to 2003 he was the Rex G. & Edna Baker Professor in Constitutional Law at the University of Texas School of Law, and from 1997 to 2001 he was an associate professor of law at the University of San Diego School of Law.
Before he began teaching law, Benjamin clerked for 9th Circuit Judge William C. Canby and for Supreme Court Justice David H. Souter; worked as an attorney-advisor in the Office of Legal Counsel in the US Department of Justice; worked as an associate with Professor Laurence Tribe; and served as staff attorney for the Legal Resources Centre in Port Elizabeth, South Africa. He received his BA in 1987 and JD in 1991 from Yale University.

Donald H. Beskind, Professor of the Practice of Law, teaches Torts, Evidence, and Trial Practice. He devoted more than thirty years in practice to representing plaintiffs in civil cases and defendants in criminal cases before returning to the Duke Law faculty full time as a professor of the practice of law in 2010. While in private practice between 1981 and 2010 at two North Carolina law firms, he directed and taught in Duke Law School’s Trial Practice program and also periodically taught Evidence. He served as a John S. Bradway Fellow at Duke Law from 1975 to 1977, at the conclusion of which he received his LLM. He then joined the faculty, first as an assistant professor and then as associate professor and director of the Clinical Legal Studies Program.

In 1981, Beskind returned to private practice, cofounding Beskind, Rudolf & Maher where he practiced until 1993. In 1993, he joined what became Twiggs, Beskind, Strickland & Rabenau, and practiced with that firm until 2012. He now serves as co-counsel in cases with various national and local firms.

Beskind is a fellow of the International Society of Barristers, its administrative secretary and the editor of its Quarterly journal. He also is a fellow of the American College of Trial Lawyers. He serves on the Board of Governors of both national and North Carolina trial lawyer organizations, and has chaired the committees on continuing legal education for both. He was a founding board member of North Carolina Prisoner’s Legal Services and served as its president. Beskind lectures on evidentiary and trial skills topics across the United States, runs trial training programs at major law firms, and has trained solicitors and barristers in the United Kingdom.

Beskind is the coauthor of North Carolina Evidentiary Foundations (Lexis/Nexis 2008); Problems in Trial Advocacy (NITA 2011); and numerous case files used for professional training including BMI v. Minicom (Advanced, Pretrial and Basic Skills editions—NITA) and State v. Burns (NITA).

Joseph Blocher, Associate Professor of Law, studies constitutional law, the First and Second Amendments, capital punishment, property, federal courts, and law and development. Prior to his return to his hometown of Durham to take a position at Duke Law in 2009, Blocher clerked for Judges Guido Calabresi of the US Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit and Rosemary Barkett of the US Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit. He also practiced in the appellate group of O’Melveny & Myers, where he assisted the merits briefing for the District of Columbia in District of Columbia v. Heller.

Blocher received his BA, magna cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa, from Rice University, and studied law and economic development as a Fulbright Scholar in Ghana and as a Gates Scholar at Cambridge University, where he received an MPhil in Land Economy. He received his JD from Yale Law School, where he served as comments editor of the Yale Law Journal, symposium editor of the Yale Law & Policy Review, notes editor of the Yale Human Rights & Development Law Journal, participated in or directed several clinics, and was cochair of the Legal Services Organization. He was awarded the Edward D. Robbins Memorial Prize, and worked with Professor Neal Katyal of Georgetown University Law Center on Hamdan v. Rumsfeld, the successful challenge to the use of military tribunals at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. Blocher’s work has been published in the New York University Law Review, Duke Law Journal, Georgetown Law Journal, Minnesota Law Review, and other academic journals.

James Boyle, William Neal Reynolds Professor of Law, is co-founder of the Center for the Study of the Public Domain at Duke Law School. He joined the faculty in July 2000. He also has taught at American University, Yale, Harvard, and the University of Pennsylvania Law School. He is the author of The Public Domain: Enclosing the Commons of the Mind, Shamans, Software and Spleens: Law and Construction of the Information Society and The Shakespeare Chronicles, a novel about the search for the true author of Shakespeare’s works. He is the coauthor of Bound By Law, (Duke UP 2008) an educational comic book on fair use, and is the editor of Critical Legal Studies (Dartmouth/NYU Press (1994), Collected Papers on the Public Domain (Duke: L&CP 2003), and the coeditor of Cultural Environmentalism @ 10 (with Larry Lessig). In 2003 he won the World Technology Award for Law for his work on the “intellectual ecology” of the public domain, and on the new “enclosure movement” that threatens it; (a disappointing amount of which was foretold in his 1996 New York Times article on the subject). His essays include “The Second Enclosure Movement,” a study of the economic rhetoric of price discrimination in digital commerce, and a “Manifesto on WIPO.” His shorter pieces include “Missing the Point on Microsoft,” a speech to the Federalist Society called “Conservatives and Intellectual Property,” and numerous newspaper articles on law, technology, and culture. His book reviews on social theory and the environment, the naturalistic fallacy in environmentalism, and on competing approaches to copyright have appeared in the Times Literary Supplement. He currently writes as an online columnist for the Financial Times' New Economy Policy Forum. Boyle teaches Intellectual Property, the Constitution in Cyberspace, Law and Literature, Jurisprudence and Torts. He was one of the original board members of Creative Commons, which works to facilitate the free availability of art, scholarship, and cultural materials by developing innovative, machine-readable licenses that individuals and institutions can attach to their work. Boyle served as a board member from 2002 until 2009, the last year as chairman of the board. He was also a cofounder of Science Commons, which aims to expand the Creative Commons mission into the realm of scientific and technical data, and of ccLearn, which works to promote the development of open educational resources. Boyle is a member of the academic advisory board of Public Knowledge. In 2006 he received the Duke Bar Association Distinguished Teaching Award.

Curtis A. Bradley, William Van Alstyne Professor of Law and Professor of Public Policy Studies and Senior Associate Dean of Faculty and Research, joined the Duke Law faculty in 2005, after teaching at the University of Virginia and University of Colorado law schools. His courses include International Law, Foreign Relations Law, and Federal Courts. He was the founding codirector of Duke Law School’s Center for International and Comparative Law and serves on the executive board of Duke’s Center on Law, Ethics, and National Security. Recently, he was appointed to serve as a reporter on the American Law Institute’s new Restatement project on The Foreign Relations Law of the United States.

Bradley graduated magna cum laude from Harvard Law School in 1988. He then clerked for Judge David Ebel of the 10th US Circuit Court of Appeals and Justice Byron White of the US Supreme Court. After his clerkships, Bradley practiced law for several years at Covington & Burling in Washington, DC. He began teaching in 1995 at the University of Colorado School of Law, and he received tenure there in 1999. In 2000, he joined the faculty at the University of Virginia School of Law as a full professor. In 2004, he served as counselor on international law in the Legal Adviser’s Office of the US State Department. He now is a member of the Secretary of State’s Advisory Committee on International Law. He also is a vice-president of the American Society of International Law, a member of the Board of Editors of the American Journal of International Law, and a member of the International Law Association’s Study Group on the Principles on the Application of International Law by Domestic Courts.

Kathryn Webb Bradley, Professor of the Practice of Law, joined the Duke Law faculty in 2005. She is the director of Legal Ethics and the administrator for the Capstone Project. She teaches in the areas of legal ethics and family law.

Bradley received her BA, magna cum laude, with honors in Latin, and became a member of Phi Beta Kappa upon graduating from Wake Forest University in 1979. She earned her JD degree in 1988 from the University of Maryland School of Law, where she ranked first in her class and was admitted to membership in the Order of the Coif. She then served as a law clerk to Judge Frederic N. Smalkin of the US District Court for the District of Maryland and Justice Byron R. White of the United States Supreme Court.

She joined the firm of Hogan & Hartson in 1991, was made partner in 1998, and became of counsel in 2000. Bradley worked in the firm’s Washington, Baltimore, and Denver offices as a member of the litigation department. Her areas of practice, at trial and appellate levels, have included federal and state constitutional law, higher education law, health care fraud and abuse, and general commercial law.

Bradley taught Legal Research and Writing at the University of Virginia from 2000 until 2005. She previously had been an adjunct instructor of Legal Writing, Constitutional Law, and Federal Jurisdiction at the University of Maryland School of Law. Between college and law school, she was a secondary school teacher in Winston-Salem, North Carolina. Bradley holds membership in the American Bar Association and the Fourth Circuit Judicial Conference. She is admitted to practice in Virginia, Maryland, Colorado, the District of Columbia, and various federal courts.

Rachel Brewster, Professor of Law, studies and teaches in the areas of international law and international relations theory and international trade. She came to Duke Law in July 2012 from Harvard University where she was an assistant professor of law and affiliate faculty member of The Weatherhead Center for International Affairs. Brewster serves as codirector of Duke’s Center for International and Comparative Law.

Prior to joining the Harvard law faculty in 2006, Brewster served as a Bigelow Fellow at the University of Chicago Law School and clerked for Judge Phyllis A. Kravitch of the US Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit. She served as legal counsel in the Office of the United States Trade Representative in 2008.

Samuel W. Buell, Professor of Law, focuses his research and teaching on criminal law and on the regulatory state, particularly the regulation of corporations and financial markets. His current work explores the conceptual structure of white collar offenses, the problem of behaviors that evolve to avoid legal control, and the treatment of the corporation and the white collar offender in the criminal justice system. Buell’s recent publications have appeared in Law & Contemporary Problems, Duke Law Journal, UCLA Law Review, NYU Law Review, Stanford Law Review, Cardozo Law Review, and Indiana Law Journal. He is a member of the American Law Institute and has testified before the United States Senate and the United States Sentencing Commission on matters involving the definition and punishment of corporate crimes.

Buell joined the Duke Law faculty as a professor in 2010, after serving as an associate professor at Washington University School of Law in St. Louis and a visiting assistant professor at the University of Texas School of Law. Prior to his academic career, he worked as a federal prosecutor in New York, Boston, Washington, and Houston. He twice received the Attorney General’s Award for Exceptional Service, the Department of Justice’s highest honor, and was a lead prosecutor for the department’s Enron Task Force. Buell clerked for the Honorable Jack B. Weinstein of the US District Court for the Eastern District of New York and practiced as an associate with Covington & Burling in Washington, DC. He graduated summa cum laude from New York University School of Law and magna cum laude from Brown University.

Paul D. Carrington, Professor of Law. BA 1952, University of Texas; LLB 1955, Harvard University. Carrington is a native of Dallas. His professional experience includes a brief stint in private practice, another in a military law office, and occasional consultations for more than fifty years, most of them pro bono publico. Since his teaching career began in 1957, he has taught in fifteen American law schools, as well as the University of Tokyo, Albert Ludwigs Universitat Freiburg, Bucerius Law School in Hamburg, and Doshisha University Law School in Kyoto. He has been at Duke since 1978, serving as dean from 1978 to 1988. He has been active in judicial law reform efforts, particularly with regard to the jurisdiction of appellate courts, the rules of civil litigation, and the selection and tenure of judges in state courts. From 1985 to 1992, he served as reporter to the committee of the Judicial Conference of the United States advising the Supreme Court on changes in the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. He has since 1988 also studied the history of the legal profession in the United States. He teaches appeals, civil procedure, international civil litigation, and lawyers in American history. His more recent books are Stewards of Democracy (Harper Collins 1999); Spreading America’s Word (Twelve Tables Press, 2005); Reforming the Supreme Court: Term Limits for Justices (edited with Roger C. Cramton, Carolina 2006); Law and Class in America: Trends since The Cold War (edited with Trina Jones, NYU 2006); American Lawyer: Public Servants and the Development of A Nation (2012); Transnational Corrupt Practices (edited with Susan Rose Acherman, 2013).

Guy-Uriel Charles, Charles S. Rhyne Professor of Law, is the founding director of the Duke Law Center on Law, Race and Politics. He is an expert in and frequent public commentator on constitutional law, election law, campaign finance, redistricting, politics, and race. He joined Duke Law’s faculty in 2009; he previously was the Russell M. and Elizabeth M. Bennett Professor of Law at the University of Minnesota Law School.

Charles received his JD from the University of Michigan Law School and clerked for Judge Damon J. Keith of the United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit. While at the University of Michigan, he was the founder and first editor-in-chief of the Michigan Journal of Race & Law. From 1995-2000, he was a graduate student in political science at the University of Michigan.

Charles joined the University of Minnesota Law School faculty in 2000 and later served as interim codean there. He was named the Stanley V. Kinyon Teacher of the Year for 2002-2003. He has been a visiting professor at Georgetown, Virginia, and Columbia law schools. A past member of the National Research Commission on Elections and Voting and the Century Foundation Working Group on Election Reform, Professor Charles has served as the director of the Institute for Law & Politics, a Senior Fellow in Law and Politics at the Institute on Race and Poverty, and a Law School Faculty Affiliate at the Center for the Study of Political Psychology, University of Minnesota.

In the past few years, Coleman’s work has become increasingly interdisciplinary. This new focus has been fostered by her affiliations with Duke University’s Center for Child and Family Policy and Duke’s Trent Center for Bioethics, Humanities and the History of Medicine. Based in these affiliations, her most recent projects include book chapters entitled “Innovations in Child Maltreatment Prevention: Resolving the Tension Between Effective Assistance and Violations of Privacy” (2008), and “The Role of the Law in Relationships Within Immigrant Families: Traditional Parenting Practices in Conflict With American Concepts of Maltreatment” (2007); and law review articles entitled “The Case for Legal Regulation of Physicians’ Off-Label Prescribing” (with P. M. Rosoff), 86 Notre Dame Law Review (2011); “How to Draw the Line Between Reasonable Corporal Punishment and Abuse” (with K. A. Dodge and S. K. Campbell), 73 Law and Contemporary Problems 107 (2010); and “The Legal Ethics of Pediatric Research,” 57 Duke Law Journal 517 (2007).

Coleman received her juris doctor degree from the Georgetown University Law Center (1988), where she was an associate editor on the Georgetown Law Journal. She received her bachelor of arts degree from Cornell University (1982) with distinction in all subjects. Coleman practiced law for the Washington, DC, firm of Wilmer, Cutler & Pickering (now Wilmer Hale), from 1988 to 1991.

James E. Coleman Jr., John S. Bradway Professor of Law, AB 1970, Harvard University; JD 1974, Columbia University. A native of Charlotte, North Carolina, Coleman’s experience includes a judicial clerkship for the US District Court for the Eastern District of Michigan, a year in private practice in New York, and fifteen years in private practice in Washington, DC, the last twelve as a partner in a large law firm. In private practice, he specialized in federal court and administrative litigation; he also represented criminal defendants in capital collateral proceedings. He has had a range of government experience. In 1976, he joined the Legal Services Corporation, where he served for two years as an assistant general counsel. In 1978, he conducted an investigation of two members of Congress as chief counsel for the US House of Representatives’ Committee on Standards of Official Conduct. In 1980, he served as a deputy general counsel for the US Department of Education. On sabbatical from his law firm, he was a visitor at Duke Law School for the fall semester of 1989, where he taught a seminar on capital punishment. He joined the faculty full time in 1991 and taught criminal law, research and writing, and a seminar on capital punishment. He returned to private practice in 1993, but continued to teach a seminar on capital punishment as a senior visiting lecturer. He rejoined the faculty full-time in 1996. He teaches criminal law, legal ethics, negotiation and mediation, capital punishment, and wrongful convictions, and he serves as codirector for the Duke Wrongful Convictions clinic and the Duke Appellate Litigation Clinic, and director of the Duke Law Center for Criminal Justice and Professional Responsibility. He is an active member of the American Bar Association and has chaired the ABA Section of Individual Rights and Responsibilities (1999-2000) and the ABA Death Penalty Moratorium Implementation Project (2001-2006).

Coleman served as the law school’s senior associate dean for academic affairs from 2002 to 2005.

James D. Cox, Brainerdy Carrie Professor of Law. specializes in the areas of corporate and securities law. Prior to moving to joining the Duke Law faculty in 1979, he taught at the law schools of Boston University, the University of San Francisco, the University of California, Hastings College of the Law, and Stanford. During the 1988-89 academic year he was a Senior Research Fulbright Fellow at the University of Sydney. Cox earned his BS from Arizona State University and law degrees at the University of California, Hastings College of the Law (JD) and Harvard Law School (LLM).

In addition to his texts Financial Information, Accounting and the Law; Cox and Hazen on Corporations; and Securities Regulations Cases and Materials (with Hillman & Langevoort), Cox has published extensively in the areas of market regulation and corporate governance and testified before the US House and Senate on insider trading, class actions, and market reform issues. His corporations treatise won the Association of American Publishers National Book Award for Best New Professional/Scholarly Legal Book for 1995. He served as a member of the corporate law drafting committees in California (1977-80) and North Carolina (1984-93).

Cox is a member of the American Law Institute and ABA Committee on Corporate Laws and a past member of the NYSE Legal Advisory Committee, the NASD Legal Advisory Board, and the Fulbright Law Discipline Review Committee. In 2009, he was appointed to the Bipartisan Policy Center’s credit rating agency task force. In 2001 he was awarded an Honorary Doctorate of Mercature from the University of Southern Denmark for his work in international securities law.

Richard A. Danner, Senior Associate Dean for Information Services, and Archibald C. and Frances Fulk Rafty Research Professor of Law. In addition to his administrative responsibilities, Danner teaches a course on legislation, which focuses on statutory interpretation, and has taught legal research and writing. His primary academic interests are in legislation, legal education, and legal research and bibliography. He has written recently on the impacts of information technology on legal education and the profession of law librarianship, and on the effects of electronic publication on scholarly communication in law. His current research is focused on the role of forms and structures of legal information the history and development of US law. He is the author of Strategic Planning: A Law Library Management Tool for the'90s and Beyond (2d ed. 1997) and Legal Research in Wisconsin (1980), and contributions to journals in law and librarianship. He is the editor of Toward a Renaissance in Law Librarianship (1997); coeditor (with Bernal) of Introduction to Foreign Legal Systems (1994); compiler of the International Journal of Legal Information Cumulative Index 1960-2002 (2003); and coeditor (with Houdek) of Legal Information and the Development of American Law (2007).

Danner has been active in the affairs of the American Association of Law Libraries, the International Association of Law Libraries, the American Bar Association Section of Legal Education and Admissions to the Bar, and the Association of American Law Schools. From 1984 to 1994, he served as editor of AALL's Law Library Journal. He was President of AALL in 1989-90 and has chaired several AALL special committees and task forces; he served on the executive committee of the AALS from 2002 to 2004, and as first vice-president of the IALL from 2004 to 2010.

John M. de Figueiredo, Edward and Ellen Marie Schwarzman Professor of Law and Professor of Strategy and Economics, studies competitive strategy, political and legal strategy, law and economics, and the management of innovation. His research in “nonmarket” strategy examines how firms use political influence, regulatory lobbying, and strategic litigation to enhance competitive performance. His current work in the field has examined corporate legislative and regulatory lobbying behavior in telecommunications, health care, and other high technology industries.

Prior to joining Duke Law School in 2010, he was an associate professor of strategic management and associate professor of law at the UCLA Anderson School. He also has served on the faculties of the Sloan School of Management at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) and the Woodrow Wilson School at Princeton University. He was an Olin Senior Visiting Research Fellow at Harvard Law School and has served as a research associate at the National Bureau of Economic Research.

de Figueiredo holds a PhD in business and public policy from the University of California, Berkeley; a master of science from the London School of Economics; and an AB in economics from Harvard University. He has published scholarly articles in a wide range of academic and interdisciplinary journals; his recent work includes “Integrated Political Strategy” in Advances in Strategic Management: Economic Institutions of Strategy (2009) and “Financing Direct Democracy: Revising the Literature on Campaign Finance of Initiatives” (with Chang Ho Ji and Thad Kousser) in Journal of Law, Economics and Organization (forthcoming).

de Figueiredo has taught in a variety of different programs for law students, business students, and executives. He has taught a course on corporate nonmarket strategy, introducing techniques to company executives on managing the media, activists, government, and international bodies to achieve the objectives of the corporation. He also teaches competitive strategy, nonmarket strategy, technology strategy, corporate governance, and organizational change at the senior executive and board of directors level. He won the Excellence in Teaching Award for MBA teaching while at MIT, and he won four teaching awards while at UCLA.

Prior to joining academia, de Figueiredo was a strategic management consultant at Monitor Company for a number of years, where he served on a team of consultants that started the company’s Spanish practice and Madrid office.

Elisabeth D. de Fontenay, Associate Professor of Law, focuses her primary research interests in the fields of corporate law, corporate finance, and financial institutions. She joined the Duke Law faculty in 2013 after serving as a Climenko Fellow and Lecturer on Law at Harvard Law School. At Duke Law, she teaches Corporate Finance and Business Associations.

de Fontenay received her BA, summa cum laude, in economics from Princeton University, where she was a two-time All-American rugby player. She received her JD, magna cum laude, from Harvard Law School, where she was an editor of the Journal on Legislation and provided tax preparation assistance to lower-income citizens.

After graduating from law school, de Fontenay practiced as a corporate associate at Ropes & Gray in Boston, where she specialized in mergers and acquisitions, debt financing, and private investment fund formation. Her practice experience is reflected in her broad research agenda, which focuses on how market actors behave in the less-regulated spaces of the financial markets. In her forthcoming paper, “Private Equity Firms as Gatekeepers,” de Fontenay contends that private equity firms create value not just through better corporate governance, but also by acting as gatekeepers in the debt markets.

Walter Dellinger III, Douglas B. Maggs Professor Emeritus of Law, served as acting Solicitor General for the 1996-97 term of the US Supreme Court. He argued nine cases before the court, the most by any Solicitor General in more than twenty years. His arguments included cases dealing with physician-assisted suicide, the line item veto, the cable television act, the Brady Act, the Religious Freedom Restoration Act and the constitutionality of remedial services for parochial school children.

After serving in early 1993 in the White House as an advisor to the president on constitutional issues, Dellinger was nominated by the president to be assistant attorney general and head of the Office of Legal Counsel (OLC) and was confirmed by the Senate for that position in October 1993. During his three years as assistant attorney general he served as the department’s principal legal advisor to the attorney general and the president. As head of OLC, Dellinger issued opinions on a wide variety of issues, including the president’s authority to deploy United States forces in Haiti and Bosnia; whether the president may decline to enforce statutes he believes are unconstitutional; affirmative action; religious activity in public schools; whether the Uruguay Round GATT Agreements required treaty ratification, and a major review of separation of powers questions. He provided extensive legal advice on loan guarantees for Mexico, on national debt ceiling issues, and on issues arising out of the shutdown of the federal government. Dellinger returned to the Duke Law faculty in 1997.

Dellinger has published articles on constitutional issues for scholarly journals including the Harvard Law Review, the Yale Law Journal, the Duke Law Journal and has written articles for the New York Times, the Washington Post, Newsweek, the New Republic and the London Times. He spent 1988-89 as a fellow at the National Humanities Center. He has lectured at numerous American universities and at Leiden, Utrecht, and Tilburg Universities in the Netherlands, at the University of Florence and the University of Siena in Italy, at the University of Copenhagen, Denmark, at Nuremberg University in Germany, at the National University of Mexico, at the Catholic University in Leuven, Belgium and at conferences in Rio de Janeiro and Rome. He has addressed the Judicial Conferences of the DC Circuit, the Fifth Circuit, the Second Circuit and the Fourth Circuit, the American Bar Association, the Association of American Law Schools, the Organization of American Historians, the American Political Science Association, the Modern Language Association, the Federalist Society and other groups. He has been a member of the Board of Editors of The American Prospect and a member of the Executive Committee of the Yale Law School Association.

Before joining the government, Dellinger briefed and argued cases for a variety of clients, including Owens-Illinois, Inc., the State of Alaska, hospital associations and members of Congress on issues ranging from the right of hospitals to sue state officials for reimbursement, to Alaska’s taxation of oil revenues, to limits on punitive damages and other mass tort issues.

He has testified more than twenty-five times before committees of the Congress, including the Senate Budget Committee, the Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources, the Senate Appropriations Committee, and the House and Senate Judiciary Committees. Dellinger is a graduate with honors in Political Science from The University of North Carolina where he was awarded the John J. Parker Medal for Leadership and the Frank Porter Graham Award as Outstanding Senior. He graduated from Yale Law School, where he was an editor of the Yale Law Journal. For the 1968-69 term of the US Supreme Court he served as law clerk to Justice Hugo L. Black.

Deborah A. DeMott, David F. Cavers Professor of Law. BA 1970, Swarthmore College; JD 1973, New York University. DeMott spent her early years in DuBois, Pennsylvania. She served as articles editor of the New York University Law Review. She began her professional career with a judicial clerkship in a federal court in New York City, and later practiced with a large law firm in that city, until she joined the Duke Law faculty in 1975. In 1989, she received the Scholar/Teacher of the Year Award from Duke University. DeMott served as the reporter for the American Law Institute's Restatement (Third) of Agency, published in 2006. From 2000 to 2002, she held a secondary appointment as Centennial Visiting Professor in the law department of the London School of Economics. She has also taught at the universities of Sydney, Melbourne, Texas, Colorado, San Diego, the Hastings College of Law of the University of California, and at Osgoode Hall Law School, York University, Toronto. In 1986 she was a Fulbright Senior Scholar at Sydney and Monash Universities in Australia. In spring 1996 DeMott held the Hurst C. Huber Visiting Chair at the University of Florida College of Law. In spring 1998 she was the scholar in residence at the Frances Lewis Law Center, Washington and Lee University School of Law. In spring 1999 she was in residence at the University of Auckland as the New Zealand Legal Research Foundation Visiting Fellow. She is the author of a treatise, Shareholder Derivative Actions, published in 1987 and a casebook, Fiduciary Obligation, Agency and Partnership, published in 1991. Her other writing concerns corporate law, takeovers and acquisitions, and fiduciary obligation.

Diane Dimond, Clinical Professor of Law; teaches the first-year course in Legal Analysis, Research, & Writing and an upper-level seminar in negotiation. She served as director of Legal Writing from 1998 to 2013.

Dimond received her BA in political science and French from the University of Iowa in 1973, and her JD from the Harvard Law School in 1977. She began her practice of law in New York City at a major Wall Street firm in the litigation department, and after six years, moved to North Carolina, where she continued her practice in litigation, first as an associate and later as a partner, in a large firm. Her major practice area was in commercial litigation, including employment-related litigation and advice, defense of securities fraud actions, trade secrets/intellectual property suits, nuclear power plant construction litigation, personal injury insurance defense, and representation of both corporate clients and foreign governmental bodies in transnational disputes. She has had extensive experience in pretrial discovery and motion practice, lay and expert witness preparation, appellate brief writing, computerized document management, and settlement negotiations. While most of the matters she handled were filed in state and federal courts, she has also represented clients in a number of arbitration proceedings. After almost seventeen years of practice, she joined the Duke Law faculty to teach full time in 1994, and was appointed as clinical professor of law in January 2001. In 2004, she won the Duke Bar Association's Distinguished Teaching Award.

She is a member of the bars of the states of New York and North Carolina, as well as a number of federal district and appellate courts.

Maj. Gen. Charles J. Dunlap, Jr. USAF (Ret.) Professor of the Practice of Law and Executive Director, Center on Law, Ethics and National Security, served as deputy judge advocate general of the United States Air Force prior to joining the Duke Law faculty in July 2010. His teaching and scholarly writing focus on national security, international law, civil-military relations, cyberwar, and military justice.

Dunlap retired from the Air Force in June 2010 after a thirty-four-year career in the Judge Advocate Corps. In his capacity as deputy judge advocate general from May 2006 to March 2010, he assisted the judge advocate general in the professional supervision of more than 2,200 judge advocates, 350 civilian lawyers, 1,400 enlisted paralegals, and 500 civilians around the world. In addition to overseeing an array of military justice, operational, international, and civil law functions, he provided legal advice to the Air Staff and commanders at all levels.

In the course of his career, Dunlap has been involved in various high-profile interagency and policy matters, highlighted by his testimony before the US House of Representatives concerning the Military Commissions Act of 2006.

Dunlap previously served as staff judge advocate at Headquarters Air Combat Command at Langley Air Force Base in Virginia and at Headquarters Air Education and Training Command at Randolph Air Force Base in Texas, among other leadership posts. His other assignments include the faculty of the Air Force Judge Advocate General School where he taught various civil and criminal law topics. An experienced trial lawyer, he also spent two years as a military trial judge for a twenty-two-state circuit. He served tours in the United Kingdom and Korea, and he deployed for operations in the Middle East and Africa, including those in support of the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq. He also led military-to-military delegations to Colombia, Uruguay, and the Czech Republic.

A prolific author and accomplished public speaker, Dunlap's commentary on a wide variety of national security topics has been published in leading newspapers and military journals. His 2001 essay written for Harvard University’s Carr Center on “lawfare,” a concept he defines as “the use or misuse of law as a substitute for traditional military means to accomplish an operational objective,” has been highly influential among military scholars and in the broader legal academy. His latest essay on the subject (“Lawfare Today…And Tomorrow”) appears in International Law and the Changing Character of War (US. Naval War College, 2011).

Dunlap's legal scholarship also has been published in the Stanford Law Review, the Yale Journal of International Affairs, the Wake Forest Law Review, the Fletcher Forum of World Affairs, the University of Nebraska Law Review, the Texas Tech Law Review, and the Tennessee Law Review, among others. He is the author of “The Origins of the Military Coup of 2012,” originally published in 1992, which was selected for the 40th Anniversary Edition of Parameters (Winter 2010-2011). He is also the author of “Airpower” in Understanding Counterinsurgency (Thomas Rid and Thomas Keaney, eds., Routledge, 2010), and his essay on “The Military Industrial Complex” appeared in the Summer 2011 issue of Daedalus.

His article on international humanitarian law was published in 2012 in the German Red Cross in their Journal of International law of Peace and Armed Conflict, and he has a forthcoming essay ion the European Journal of International Law. His chapter on military law will appear in The Modern American Military (David Kennedy, ed., Oxford University Press, 2013), and his essay on anticipatory self-defense will be published in 2013.

Dunlap has written a number of articles on cyberwar including “Perspectives for Cyber Strategists on Law for Cyberwar” which appeared in the Spring 2011 issue of Strategic Studies Quarterly and, more recently, his piece, “Some Reflections on the Intersection of Law and Ethics in Cyber War,” was published in the January-February 2013 issue of Air & Space Power Journal.

Nita A. Farahany, Professor of Law and Professor of Genome Sciences & Policy and Professor of Philosophy, is a leading scholar on the ethical, legal, and social implications of biosciences and emerging technologies, particularly those related to neuroscience and behavioral genetics. She also holds appointments in Duke University’s Institute for Genome Sciences & Policy and the Department of Philosophy.

In 2010, Farahany was appointed by President Obama to the Presidential Commission for the Study of Bioethical Issues, and continues to serve as a member. Her recent scholarship includes “Searching Secrets,” 160 U. Penn. L. Rev. 1239 (2012) which explores the descriptive potential of intellectual property law as a metaphor to describe current Fourth Amendment search and seizure law and predict how the Fourth Amendment will apply to emerging technology. A related article, "Incriminating Thoughts," 64 Stanford Law Review 351 (2012) demonstrates through modern neuroscience applications the need to redefine the taxonomy of evidence subject to the privilege against self-incrimination. She also is the editor of The Impact of Behavioral Sciences on Criminal Law (Oxford University Press), a book of essays from experts in science, law, philosophy, and policy.

Farahany presents her work widely, including to audiences at the Judicial Conferences for the Second and Ninth Circuits, the National Judicial College, the American Academy for the Advancement of Science, National Academies of Science Workshops, the American Academy of Forensic Sciences, the National Association of Criminal Defense lawyers, the American Society for Political and Legal Philosophy, and by testifying before Congress. She is an elected member of the American Law Institute, Chair of the Criminal Justice Section of the American Association of Law Schools, on the Board of the International Neuroethics Society, and the recipient of the 2013 Paul M. Bator award given annually to an outstanding legal academic under 40.

She received her AB in genetics, cell, and developmental biology at Dartmouth College, a JD and MA from Duke University, as well as a PhD in philosophy; her dissertation was entitled “Rediscovering Criminal Responsibility through Behavioral Genetics.” Farahany also holds an ALM in biology from Harvard University. In 2004-2005, Farahany clerked for Judge Judith W. Rogers of the US Court of Appeals for the DC Circuit, after which she joined the faculty at Vanderbilt University. In 2011, Farahany was the Leah Kaplan Visiting Professor of Human Rights at Stanford Law School.

Joel L. Fleishman, Professor of Law and Public Policy Sciences. AB 1955, JD 1959, MA (Drama) 1959, University of North Carolina; LLM 1960, Yale University. Fleishman is a native of Fayetteville, North Carolina. He began his career in 1960 as assistant to the director of the Walter E. Meyer Research Institute of Law at Yale. From 1961 to 1965, he served as legal assistant to the governor of North Carolina. He then returned to Yale, first as director of the Yale Summer High School, and then as associate provost for Urban Studies and Programs. In 1969, he became associate chair of the Center for the Study of the City and Its Environment and associate director of the Institute of Social Science at Yale. In 1971, he came to Duke as a member of the law faculty and as director of the Institute of Policy Sciences and Public Affairs, now the Sanford School of Public Policy, in which position he served until 1983. He is now professor of law and public policy, and director of the Heyman Center on Ethics, Public Policy and the Professions. He also directs the Duke Foundation Research Program. His principal writings deal with legal regulation and financing of political activities as well as the regulation of not-for-profit organizations. His book, The Foundation: A Great American Secret—How Private Money is Changing the World, was published in January 2007 by Public Affairs Books. He serves as cochair of Independent Sector’s Committee on the Self-Regulation of Nonprofit Organizations.

Andrew H. Foster, Clinical Professor of Law and Director of Experiential Education and Clinical Programs. In addition to overseeing experiential learning programs at Duke Law, Foster serves as director of the law school’s Community Enterprise Clinic and teaches nonclinical courses in community development law and other substantive areas.

Prior to joining the Duke Law faculty in 2002, Foster practiced with Womble Carlyle Sandridge & Rice, where he cofounded the firm’s community development law team. He now maintains a limited private practice that is concentrated in the areas of nonprofit, affordable housing, and community development law. He represents developers, financial institutions, local governments and local, statewide, regional, and national nonprofits on a wide range of community revitalization projects.

Before becoming a lawyer, Foster held leadership positions with several nonprofit community development organizations based in North Carolina. These include the Southern Rural Development Initiative, the North Carolina Justice and Community Development Center, the Community Reinvestment Association of North Carolina, and the North Carolina Association of Community Development Corporations. In all of these positions, he worked with community-based organizations, leading private sector institutions and public policymakers to develop and implement community economic development strategies in order to increase economic opportunities for the residents of low-wealth communities in North Carolina and throughout the Southeast.

Foster is licensed to practice in North Carolina. He is a member of the American Bar Association, as well as the ABA’s Business Law Section and Forum on Affordable Housing and Community Development Law. He has held leadership positions with the North Carolina Bar Association and is active in its Business Law Section. Foster also is active in the membership of several academic associations, including the American Association of Law Schools and the Clinical Legal Educators Association. He currently is serving a two-year term on the AALS Committee on Clinic Legal Education and is on the board of directors of the Community Affordable Housing Equity Corporation.

Foster received his BA in political science, summa cum laude, from Rutgers University in 1991 and his JD in 2000 from The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, where he was a Chancellor’s Scholar and graduated Order of the Coif.

Lisa Kern Griffin, Professor of Law, focuses her scholarship and teaching on evidence, constitutional criminal procedure, and federal criminal justice policy. Her article, “Stories in Adjudication” (forthcoming in The Georgetown Law Journal) won the AALS Criminal Justice Section’s award for best paper by a junior scholar. She also recently authored “Criminal Lying, Prosecutorial Power, and Social Meaning,” which was published in the California Law Review, and “Compelled Cooperation and the New Corporate Criminal Procedure,” which appeared in the New York University Law Review. Some of Griffin’s other publications concern political corruption prosecutions, the Supreme Court’s Confrontation Clause jurisprudence, and the construction of mens rea in white collar cases. Her current projects explore the relationship between interpretations of the Fifth and Sixth Amendments in terms of the treatment of accuracy as an animating principle, and the status and significance of silence at various stages of the criminal justice process.

Griffin joined the Duke Law faculty in 2008 and was the recipient of the 2011 Distinguished Teaching Award. She is a member of the American Law Institute and has testified before the United States Congress on proposed revisions to the mail and wire fraud statutes. Prior to coming to Duke, Professor Griffin taught at the UCLA School of Law. She graduated from Stanford Law School, where she served as president of the Stanford Law Review and was elected to the Order of the Coif. After law school, she clerked for Judge Dorothy W. Nelson of the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit and Justice Sandra Day O’Connor of the Supreme Court of the United States. Griffin also spent five years as a federal prosecutor in the Chicago United States Attorney’s Office.
Mitu Gulati, Professor of Law. Gulati’s research interests are currently in the evolution of contract language, the history of international financial law and the measurement of judicial behavior. He has authored articles in journals such as the Tulane Law Review, the University of Missouri Law Review and the Maine Law Review.

Paul H. Haagen, Professor of Law and Senior Associate Dean for International Initiatives. BA 1972, Haverford College; BA 1974, MA 1976, Oxford; MA 1976, PhD 1986, Princeton; JD 1982, Yale. Haagen was born in Lancaster, Pennsylvania, and raised in Connecticut. After graduating from college, he studied history first at Oxford as a Rhodes Scholar, and later at Princeton. He was an editor of Yale Studies in World Public Order and editor-in-chief of the Yale Law and Policy Review. Since law school, he has clerked on the United States Court of Appeals and then practiced law in Philadelphia for two years before coming to Duke in 1985. Haagen has been a visiting faculty member on the law faculties of the Georg August University in Goettingen, Germany (2005), the Johannes Kepler University in Linz, Austria (2002) and the Escuela Libre de Derecho in Mexico City, Mexico (1998). He was chair of the Academic Council of Duke University from 2005 to 2007, and senior associate dean for academic affairs of the law school (1991-93, 2009-2012). He is codirector of the Center for Sports Law and Policy. His principal academic interests are contracts, the social history of law, and law and sports.

Laurence R. Helfer, Harry R. Chadwick, Sr. Professor of Law, is an expert in international law whose scholarly interests include interdisciplinary analysis of international law and institutions, human rights, and international intellectual property law and policy. He is codirector of Duke Law School’s Center for International and Comparative Law and a senior member of Duke’s Kenan Institute for Ethics.

Prior to joining the Duke Law faculty in July 2009, Helfer was a professor of law and director of the International Legal Studies Program at Vanderbilt University Law School. He also has taught at Harvard Law School, Loyola Law School in Los Angeles, Princeton University, and the University of Chicago Law School. He is a member of the Board of Editors of the American Journal of International Law and the Journal of World Intellectual Property.

Helfer has authored more than fifty publications and has lectured widely on his diverse research interests, which also include international litigation and dispute settlement, and lesbian and gay human rights. He is the coauthor of Human Rights and Intellectual Property: Mapping the Global Interface (with Graeme W. Austin, 2011), the casebook Human Rights (2d ed., Foundation Press, 2009); and the monograph “Intellectual Property Rights in Plant Varieties: International Legal Regimes and Policy Options for National Governments” (United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization, 2004). His articles have appeared in leading American law reviews, including the Yale Law Journal, the Columbia Law Review, the California Law Review, the Virginia Law Review, the University of Pennsylvania Law Review, the Vanderbilt Law Review, and Duke’s Journal of Law and Contemporary Problems, as well as in numerous peer-reviewed and international law journals.

Helfer holds a JD from New York University, where he graduated Order of the Coif and was articles editor of the New York University Law Review. He also holds a master’s degree in public administration from Princeton University, where he was a Woodrow Wilson Fellow, and a bachelor’s degree from Yale University. He served as a law clerk to Chief Judge Dolores K. Sloviter of the US Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. Before beginning his academic career, Helfer practiced with the New York law firm of Rabinowitz, Boudin, Standard, Krinksy & Lieberman, PC, focusing on international law, intellectual property litigation, and civil liberties.

Jayne Huckerby, Associate Clinical Professor of Law, joined the Duke Law faculty in 2013 as an associate clinical professor of law and inaugural director of the Duke International Human Rights Clinic.

Prior to joining Duke, she most recently served as a human rights adviser to UN Women — the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women — on women and conflict prevention, conflict, and post-conflict; gender equality and constitutional reform in post-Arab Spring countries; and the use of gender and human rights indicators in national security policy frameworks.

A native of Sydney, Australia, Huckerby received her LLB from the University of Sydney in 2002, with first class honors. She attended New York University School of Law as a Vanderbilt Scholar, focusing her LLM studies on human rights and international law. Huckerby was awarded the David H. Moses Memorial prize on graduating first in her LLM class. She was also graduate editor on the Journal of International Law and Politics, and an International Law and Human Rights Fellow at the UN High Commissioner for Refugees in Geneva, Switzerland.

After serving as a human rights officer with the International Service for Human Rights in Geneva, Huckerby joined the Center for Human Rights and Global Justice at NYU Law in 2005, serving as its research director from 2006 to 2011 and also teaching in NYU’s International Human Rights Clinic and Global Justice Clinic for two and a half years. She has also worked at the law firm Baker & McKenzie in Chicago, Sydney, and London.
Huckerby has undertaken human rights research and advocacy in the areas of gender and human rights, constitution-making, national security, human trafficking, transitional justice, and human rights in US foreign policy. She has led multiple fieldwork investigations, provided capacity-building to civil society and governments in five regions, and frequently served as a human rights law expert to international governmental organizations and NGOs, including the International Center for Transitional Justice and the Global Alliance Against Traffic in Women. She also has extensive domestic, regional (Africa, Americas, Europe) and international litigation and advocacy experience. She has written and coauthored numerous articles, book chapters, and human rights reports, and is most recently the editor, with Margaret L. Satterthwaite, of Gender, National Security, and Counter-Terrorism: Human Rights Perspectives (Routledge 2012).

Trina Jones, Professor of Law, focuses her scholarly research and writing on racial and socioeconomic inequality. She is a leading legal expert on colorism, which is the differential treatment of same-race individuals on the basis of skin color. At Duke Law, Jones teaches Civil Procedure, Employment Discrimination, and a seminar on race and the law.

Her recent work includes Shades of Brown: The Law of Skin Color, which draws upon historical and sociological materials to explain the past and continuing significance of colorism in the United States; Intra-Group Preferencing: Proving Skin Color and Identity Performance Discrimination, which examines many of the practical impediments plaintiffs face when bringing intra-group claims; A Post-Race Equal Protection? (with Barnes and Chemerinsky), which challenges the notion that the election of President Barack Obama heralds the beginning of a post-racial America; and "Law and Class in America: Trends Since the Cold War" (NYU Press, with Carrington), which examines the effects on poor people of legal reforms in a variety of substantive areas. Jones' current projects explore the use of the workplace as a site for the reproduction of "traditional" values, examine colorism from a comparative perspective, and consider the limitations of using enumerated classifications as a method for redressing inequality.

Jones joined the faculty of Duke Law School in 1995, after practicing as a general litigator at Wilmer, Cutler, and Pickering (now Wilmer Hale) in Washington, DC. From 2008 to 2011, she served as a founding member of the faculty at the University of California, Irvine, School of Law, where she directed the Center on Law, Equality and Race.

A native of Rock Hill, South Carolina, Jones received her undergraduate degree in government from Cornell University and her JD, with honors, from the University of Michigan Law School. While at Michigan, she served as an articles editor on the Michigan Law Review.

Jack Knight, Frederic Claveland Professor of Law and Political Science, is a renowned political scientist and legal theorist. His scholarly work focuses on modern social and political theory, law and legal theory, and political economy. He holds a joint appointment with Duke Law School and Duke's Trinity College of Arts & Sciences, where he teaches in the Politics, Philosophy and Economics Program. At the law school, he teaches courses on social scientific approaches to law and courts, as well as courses on the political economy of social institutions.

Knight's research focuses on the rules and norms that organize human activities in nations. In addition to study of the motivations and decisions of judges, he has examined the effects of the norm of extensive prior judicial experience as a prerequisite for service on the US Supreme Court, as well as several other aspects of how courts make decisions and how judges choose their positions in opinions.

Knight is the author of several books: Institutions and Social Conflict (Cambridge University Press, 1992), Explaining Social Institutions (with Itai Sened) (The University of Michigan Press, 1995), and The Choices Justices Make (with Lee Epstein) (Congressional Quarterly Press, 1997), which won the American Political Science Association's C. Herman Prichett Award for the best book published on law and courts. He coedited Courts, Judges and Politics (McGraw-Hill, 6th Edition, 2005) and has published numerous articles in journals and edited volumes on such topics as democratic theory, the rule of law, judicial decision-making, and theories of institutional emergence and change.

Prior to joining Duke Law in 2008, Knight was the Sidney W. Souers Professor of Government at Washington University of St. Louis, where he served as chair of the Department of Political Science and was a fellow of the university's Center for Political Economy. He also has taught at the University of Chicago and the University of Michigan and was an attorney with the Peninsula Legal Aid Center in Hampton, Virginia. He has served as a visiting professor at the International Center for Business and Politics of the Copenhagen Business School and a visiting scholar with the Russell Sage Foundation and the Max Planck Institute in Bonn, Germany. Knight holds a bachelor's degree and JD from The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and an MA and a PhD in political science from the University of Chicago.
Kimberly Krawiec, Kathrine Robinson Everett Professor of Law, is an expert on corporate law who teaches courses on securities, corporate, and derivatives law. Her research interests span a variety of fields, including the empirical analysis of contract disputes; the choice of organizational form by professional service firms, including law firms; forbidden or taboo markets; corporate compliance systems; insider trading; derivatives hedging practices; and “rogue” trading.

Prior to joining academia, Krawiec was a member of the Commodity & Derivatives Group at the New York office of Sullivan & Cromwell. She has served as a commentator for the Central European and Eurasian Law Initiative (CEELI) of the American Bar Association and on the faculty of the National Association of Securities Dealers Institute for Professional Development at the Wharton School of Business. She holds a juris doctorate from Georgetown University and a bachelor’s degree from North Carolina State University.

A visiting professor at Duke Law during the 2008-09 academic year, Krawiec also has taught law at the University of Virginia, The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Harvard, and Northwestern, where she received the 1999-2000 Robert Childress Award for Teaching Excellence.

David L. Lange, Melvin G. Shimm Professor of Law, has been a member of the faculty of the Duke University School of Law since 1971. Prior to joining the Duke faculty he worked in radio, television, and motion picture production, and as a practicing lawyer with an emphasis in media law. He acted subsequently for a number of years as counsel to a leading North Carolina law firm with an emphasis in copyright, trademarks, and unfair competition and related intellectual property matters.

At the Duke Law School he teaches courses in intellectual property, copyright, trademarks, and unfair competition, and entertainment law (including motion picture production, finance, and distribution). He speaks, writes, and lectures frequently in these fields. He has testified by invitation before Congress. He gave the 22nd Annual Donald Brace Memorial Lecture to the United States Copyright Society at Columbia Law School in 1992. He has published the third edition of a coauthored casebook in intellectual property published by West Publishing Company in 2007, and No Law: Intellectual Property in the Image of an Absolute First Amendment (Stanford University Press, 2009), which he coauthored with Duke Law Professor H. Jefferson Powell. An internationally recognized authority in his areas of specialty, he also has taught and lectured in Europe, Australia, and Asia. He has served as a pro bono consultant to the Vietnamese National Office of Industrial Property and to the National Copyright Office of Vietnam.

He is a founding member of the ABA Forum Committee on the Entertainment and Sports Industries and served on the Forum Committee’s initial Governing Board. He served as a member of the Board of Advisors to the Reporter of the American Law Institute’s Restatement (Third) of Unfair Competition. He has also served as a member of the Board of Trustees of The Copyright Society of the United States.

Margaret H. Lemos, Professor of Law is a scholar of constitutional law, legal institutions, and procedure. She came to Duke Law in 2011 from the Benjamin N. Cardozo School of Law, where she was an associate professor.

Lemos focuses her scholarship on the institutions of law interpretation and enforcement and their effects on substantive rights. She writes in four related fields: federalism; administrative law, including the relationship between courts and agencies; statutory interpretation; and civil procedure. Her articles have been published in the Supreme Court Review as well as in the New York University, Texas, Minnesota, and Vanderbilt law reviews.

Prior to joining the Cardozo faculty, Lemos was a Furman Fellow and program coordinator at New York University School of Law, a Bristow Fellow at the Office of the Solicitor General, and a law clerk for Judge Kermit V. Lipez, US Court of Appeals for the First Circuit, and for US Supreme Court Justice John Paul Stevens. She graduated summa cum laude from New York University School of Law, where she was senior notes editor of the New York University Law Review.

David F. Levi, Dean and Professor of Law, became the 14th dean of Duke Law School on July 1, 2007. Prior to his appointment, he was the Chief United States District Judge for the Eastern District of California with chambers in Sacramento. He was appointed United States Attorney by President Ronald Reagan in 1986 and a United States district judge by President George H. W. Bush in 1990.

A native of Chicago, Dean Levi earned his AB in history and literature, magna cum laude, from Harvard College. He entered Harvard’s graduate program in history, specializing in English legal history and serving as a teaching fellow in English history and literature. He graduated Order of the Coif in 1980 from Stanford Law School, where he also was president of the Stanford Law Review. Following graduation, he was a law clerk to Judge Ben C. Duniway of the US Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, and then to Justice Lewis F. Powell, Jr., of the US Supreme Court. He has served as chair of two Judicial Conference committees by appointment of the Chief Justice. He was chair of the Civil Rules Advisory Committee (2000-2003) and chair of the Standing Committee on the Rules of Practice and Procedure (2003-2007); he has been reappointed to serve as a member of that committee (2009-2012). He was the first president and a founder of the Milton L. Schwartz American Inn of Court, now the Schwartz-Levi American Inn of Court, at the King Hall School of Law, University of California at Davis. He is a member of the Council of the American Law Institute (ALI), was an advisor to the ALI’s Federal Judicial Code Revision Project, and currently serves as an advisor to the Aggregate Litigation project. He was chair of the Ninth Circuit Task Force on Race, Religious and Ethnic Fairness and was an author of the report of the Task Force. He was president of the Ninth Circuit District Judges Association (2003-2005). In 2007, he was elected a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. In 2010, he was named to the board of directors of Equal Justice Works.

Dean Levi is the coauthor of Federal Trial Objections (James Publishing 2002). At Duke Law, he teaches courses on Judicial Behavior and Ethics.

Marin K. Levy, Associate Professor of Law, focuses her teaching and research on civil procedure, judicial administration, remedies, and federal courts.

She joined the Duke Law faculty in 2009, after serving as a clerk to Judge José A. Cabranes of the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit. Prior to her clerkship, she was an associate at Jenner & Block, LLP in Washington, DC.

A 2007 graduate of the Yale Law School, Levy received an M.Phil in the History and Philosophy of Science and Medicine from the University of Cambridge in 2004. She earned a B.A. in Ethics, Politics, and Economics (concentration in Bioethics) and in English from Yale College in 2003, graduating cum laude with distinction in both majors.

Ryke Longest, Clinical Professor of Law and Director, Environmental Law and Policy Clinic, supervises students practicing in the clinic and teaches the seminar portion of the clinic.

Longest received his BA in English from The University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill in 1987 and graduated from The University of North Carolina School of Law in 1991. Prior to coming to Duke he ran a solo law practice and worked for fourteen years at the North Carolina Department of Justice. At NCDOJ, he litigated cases before administrative agencies, state courts, federal courts and appellate courts at all levels. He also drafted legislation and advised agencies on rulemaking. Longest also negotiated and led the state’s implementation of two multimillion dollar settlement agreements aimed at reducing the adverse impacts from swine farming in North Carolina.

Since coming to Duke, Longest has served as the founding director of the Environmental Law and Policy Clinic, a joint project of Duke Law School and the Nicholas School of the Environment. The Environmental Law and Policy Clinic operates as a live client clinic out of offices in the Duke Law School building. Students work under direct supervision of Longest and Supervising Attorney Michelle Nowlin.
Carolyn McAllaster, Clinical Professor of Law, is the founder and director of the AIDS Legal Project. She supervises clinic students and teaches a course on AIDS and the law.

McAllaster received her BA in German from The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 1972, and her JD from the UNC Law School in 1976. She began her practice of law in Durham with a litigation firm, and thereafter opened her own practice where she handled a variety of complex litigation in the state and federal courts. While continuing her private practice, McAllaster served as an administrative hearing officer for the North Carolina Department of Human Resources from 1981 to 1987. She undertook service as a state court arbitrator in the Fourteenth Judicial District beginning in 1987, and still continues that responsibility. McAllaster joined the Duke Law School faculty in 1988, where she has taught pretrial and trial practice and a child advocacy clinic, as well as the courses she currently teaches. She has also taught trial practice for the National Institute of Trial Advocacy (NITA), and as an adjunct member of the faculty at UNC and other law schools. McAllaster is admitted to practice in the state courts of North Carolina, the US District Courts for the Eastern, Middle, and Western Districts of North Carolina, and in the United States Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals.

McAllaster was a founder and first president of the North Carolina Association of Women Attorneys and is also a member of the North Carolina Bar Association and the North Carolina Academy of Trial Lawyers. She was appointed by the governor to serve on the North Carolina AIDS Advisory Council in 1996.

Mathew D. McCubbins, Professor of Law and Political Science, an interdisciplinary scholar whose work explores the intersections of law, business and political economy, joined the Duke Law faculty in 2013 and will be directing the Center for Law and Democracy at Duke. He holds a joint appointment in Duke University's Department of Political Science. He previously was the Provost Professor of Business, Law, and Political Economy at the University of Southern California and Director of the USC-Cal Tech Center for the Study of Law and Politics at the Gould School of Law at USC.

McCubbins will be in residence at Duke after spending 2013-2014 as the W. Glenn Campbell and Rita Ricardo-Campbell National Fellow and the Robert Eckles Swain National Fellow at the Hoover Institution at Stanford University.

An elected fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences as well as the American Association for the Advancement of Science, McCubbins also has taught at the University of Texas, Stanford University, Washington University in St. Louis, and the University of San Diego Law School. He was a distinguished professor and the Chancellor's Associates Chair in the Department of Political Science at the University of California San Diego from 1987 to 2011. He was a fellow at the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences in 1994-95.

McCubbins holds a PhD from the California Institute of Technology. McCubbins is the coauthor of six books: The Logic of Delegation (University of Chicago Press, 1991), winner of the APSA's 1992 Gladys M. Kammerer Award; Legislative Leviathan (University of California Press, 1993), winner of the APSA's Legislative Studies Section's 1994 Richard F. Fenno Jr. Prize; The Democratic Dilemma: Can Citizens Learn What They Need to Know? (Cambridge University Press, 1998); Stealing the Initiative (Prentice-Hall 2000); Setting the Agenda: Responsible Party Government in the US House of Representatives (Cambridge University Press, 2005), winner of the APSA's Leon Epstein Award; and Legislative Leviathan, Second Edition (Cambridge University Press, 2006). He is also editor or coeditor of eight additional books and has authored or coauthored more than one hundred scientific articles, book chapters, and encyclopedia entries in political science, economics, computer science, cognitive science, and biology, with one winning the Congressional Quarterly Prize for best article on legislative politics and another winning the SPPQ Award for best article on state politics. He has authored more than three dozen articles in law reviews or law journals. He has published under the nom de plume of McNollgast with his coauthors Roger Noll and Barry Weingast.

Mat served as a coeditor of the Journal of Law, Economics & Organization for eight years (Oxford University Press). He served on the Board of the Society on Empirical Legal Studies for six years. He is presently a coeditor of the Journal of Legal Analysis (Oxford University Press) is a conetwork director for the Political Science Network (PSN) within the Social Science Research Network (http://www.ssrn.com/psn/index.html).
Francis McGovern, Professor of Law, has the unusual ability to integrate practical experience, abstract thinking, and teaching. This has earned him the "triple crown" in the legal community as premier practitioner, scholar, and teacher in the field of alternative dispute resolution.

In the late 1970s and early 1980s, McGovern was among the first in the nation to write about and to use alternative dispute resolution (ADR) techniques to avoid or to improve the litigation process. Two decades later, the federal judiciary, many state courts, and institutions around the world, such as the United Nations, all seek his guidance on practical and conceptual issues in dispute resolution. His name is virtually synonymous with "mass claim" litigation—the often tens of thousands of tort claims arising out of a major disaster or major product liability issue.

As a court-appointed special master or neutral expert, he has developed solutions in most of the significant mass claim litigation in the US, including the DDT toxic exposure litigation in Alabama, the Dalkon-Shield controversy, and his current work involving the silicone gel breast implant litigation.

Seeing that these mass claims would take years to reach and proceed through trial at tremendous expense to the parties and courts, McGovern pioneered new roles for court-appointed special masters as "case managers" and "settlement masters." As a case manager, he organizes the pretrial administration of a case, and uses ADR techniques to help the parties agree on efficient discovery approaches and schedules. The role of settlement master has often required that he develop innovative ways to implement potential settlements. In the Dalkon Shield litigation, he helped organize and administer the distribution of the $2.4 billion trust established to compensate 100,000 women who had sued the maker of the device.

To facilitate his efforts, McGovern has created very sophisticated computerized models of the valuation of these massive claims. By estimating what the claims are worth to the plaintiffs or will cost the defendants, his models narrow the range of reasonable settlement amounts and help parties to settle more quickly.

Countries outside the United States now are recognizing the effectiveness of McGovern's work. Working with United Nations Compensation Commission, which was set up to ensure that Iraq compensates citizens, businesses and government agencies for losses suffered in the Persian Gulf War, McGovern is helping construct a legal framework for handling the 2.6 million claims for reparations from Iraq. He also is developing a transnational ADR center in Europe to handle torts, including silicone gel breast implants and HIV-infected blood cases that cross national boundaries.

A prolific writer, McGovern is the coauthor of two published books, Successful Litigation Techniques and The Preparation of a Product Liability Case, and two books in progress, Toxic Substances Litigation and Alternative Dispute Resolution. Both practitioners and scholars rely on his writing for its integration of extensive practical experience with conceptual analysis of fundamental problems in dispute resolution and complex litigation. McGovern's most widely known contribution to the scholarship in this area is his development of the seminal concept of "maturity" in mass torts—a concept generally accepted as critical in analysis of mass torts.

McGovern is widely sought as a teacher, but not only by students enrolled in law school. In addition to carrying a full load of classes, he has given more than fifty speeches in the past two years to academics, judges, and lawyers on issues such as international dispute resolution and an update of the law of product liability.

McGovern has been motivated in all of his undertakings, practical, conceptual and educational, by the public's decreased faith in traditional governmental systems and procedures for resolving disputes. He wants these systems, like the courts, and procedures, including litigation, to work better. Working better, to him, means operating both more efficiently and in a manner that leaves participants feeling satisfied about the process and results.

Thomas B. Metzloff, Professor of Law, is a native of Buffalo, New York. He earned his BA from Yale College in 1976 and his JD from Harvard Law School in 1979. He began his professional career with a judicial clerkship on the 5th US Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, Louisiana, followed by a clerkship with the Supreme Court of the United States. He then practiced with a private firm in Atlanta doing civil litigation matters before accepting a position at Duke Law School in 1985. He teaches civil procedure, ethics, and dispute resolution, as well as a specialized course on the American legal system for international LLM students. He has taught that course regularly at Duke's Geneva and Hong Kong summer institutes as well as at Tsinghua University in Beijing. He served as the law school's senior associate dean for academic affairs from 1998 to 2001, and currently serves as a member of the executive committee of Duke University's Academic Council.

Metzloff is also director of the Voices of American Law project. The goal of the project is interview the parties, attorneys, experts, and judges who were involved in the development of important Supreme Court cases dealing with key constitutional values (such as the First Amendment, privacy rights, property rights). The interviews are then used to create detailed documentaries that are being widely used in law schools and other educational settings to study Constitutional rights and values.

Metzloff also has conducted extensive research on the litigation system as it relates to medical malpractice disputes. For example, he conducted a major empirical study of court-ordered mediation in medical malpractice cases funded by the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation. Metzloff is active in a number of professional activities. He has served as an advisory member to the North Carolina State Bar Ethics Committee, and also served on the North Carolina Supreme Court’s Dispute Resolution Committee.

Ralf Michaels, Arthur Larson Professor of Law, is an expert in comparative law and conflict of laws. He has been a visiting professor at the Universities of Panthéon/Assas (Paris II), Princeton, Pennsylvania, Toronto, and the London School of Economics. Michaels has also held senior research fellowships at Harvard and Princeton, as well as the American Academy in Berlin and the Max Planck Institute for Private Law in Hamburg. In 2015, he will give a number of lectures on private international law at the Hague Academy for International Law.

Michaels’ current research focuses mainly on three issues: the role of domestic courts in globalization, the potential of conflict of laws as a theory of global legal fragmentation, and the status and relevance of nonstate law. He is the editor or coeditor of two special volumes of the American Journal of Comparative Law (“Beyond the State? Rethinking Private Law,” 2008, also published as a book with Mohr/Siebeck; and “Legal Origins,” 2009), as well as a book and a journal issue on conflict of laws (Conflict of Laws in a Globalized World, Cambridge University Press, 2007; and “Transdisciplinary Conflicts,” Law & Contemp. Probs. 2008). In addition, he has authored numerous articles and lectured widely on all three topics.

Michaels studied law at the Universities of Passau and Cambridge, United Kingdom.

Darrell Miller, Professor of Law, joined the Duke Law faculty in 2013 after visiting in the spring 2012 semester. He previously was a professor of law at the University of Cincinnati College of Law.

Miller entered the legal academy after five years litigating complex and appellate matters with Vorys, Sater, Seymour and Pease LLP in Columbus, Ohio. Prior to that, he clerked for Judge R. Guy Cole, Jr. of the United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Miller is a cum laude graduate of Harvard Law School where he served as notes editor for the Harvard Law Review. In addition to his JD, Miller holds degrees from Oxford University, where he studied as a British Marshall Scholar, and from Anderson University, where he was honored with the Distinguished Young Alumni Award in 2004.

Miller was honored by University of Cincinnati law students in 2009 and 2010 with the College of Law’s Goldman Teaching Excellence Award. In 2011, he received the College of Law’s Harold C. Schott Scholarship Award recognizing outstanding research and scholarly achievement; his Schott Scholarship Award Lecture was titled “The Second Amendment in Theory and Practice,” which touches on one broad focus of his scholarly agenda.

Madeline Morris, Professor of Law, is an expert in counterterrorism law and policy, international criminal law, the law of war, transnational jurisdiction, and public international law. She has served as a member of the US Secretary of State’s Advisory Committee on International Law; advisor on justice to the president of Rwanda; special consultant to the US Secretary of the Army; senior legal counsel, Office of the Prosecutor, Special Court for Sierra Leone; advisor to the special prosecutor, Republic of Serbia; expert witness on the Alien Tort Claims Act, in Sarei v. Rio Tinto; and as a witness before the US Senate Committee on Foreign Relations.

A leading expert on counterterrorism detention and military commissions, Morris has served as chief counsel to the Office of the Chief Defense Counsel for Military Commissions, US Department of Defense; consultant on the Brief for the Petitioner in Boumediene v. Bush (US Supreme Court, 2008); amicus curiae in US v. Hamdan (US Military Commission, Guantanamo Bay) and in US v. Khadr (US Court of Military Commissions Review); and as an expert witness in US v. Jawad (US Military Commission, Guantanamo Bay). In 2005, Morris founded the Guantanamo Defense Clinic, which she directs. Morris has written extensively on issues pertaining to the detention and trial of suspected terrorists; her forthcoming book, from Oxford University Press, is Terror and Integrity: Preventive Detention in the Age of Jihad.

Morris received her JD from Yale Law School in 1989, and her BA from Yale, summa cum laude, in 1986. She clerked for Judge John Minor Wisdom of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Theresa A. Newman, Clinical Professor of Law, is the codirector of the Wrongful Convictions Clinic (with Professor James Coleman) and associate director of the Duke Law Center for Criminal Justice and Professional Responsibility. She was associate dean for academic affairs from 1999 to 2008, director of the Legal Writing Program from 1994 to 1999, and general editor of Law and Contemporary Problems from 1990 to 2001.

Until recently, Newman served as president of the North Carolina Center on Actual Innocence, a nonprofit organization she helped found, which is dedicated to assisting wrongly convicted North Carolina inmates obtain relief. She has also served as a member of the North Carolina Chief Justice’s Criminal Justice Study Commission (formerly the Commission on Actual Innocence). For a number of years, until the spring of 2009, Newman also served as president of the Innocence Network, an affiliation of more than sixty organizations dedicated to providing pro bono legal and investigative services to individuals seeking to prove their innocence and working to redress the causes of wrongful convictions. She remains on the Network board.

Newman received her JD from Duke in 1988. She clerked for the Honorable J. Dickson Phillips, Jr., on the 4th US Circuit Court of Appeals for the first year after graduation and then practiced in the civil litigation group of Womble Carlyle Sandridge & Rice in Raleigh, North Carolina.

H. Jefferson Powell, Professor of Law, returned to the Duke Law faculty in May 2012 after serving as deputy assistant attorney general in the Office of Legal Counsel at the US Department of Justice and as a professor at George Washington University Law School. He previously served on the Duke Law faculty from 1989 to 2010.

Powell has served in a variety of positions in federal and state government during his career. In addition to his recent tenure as deputy assistant attorney general in the Office of Legal Counsel, which provides legal advice to the president, the attorney general and other executive branch officers, he served in the US Department of Justice in various capacities from 1993 to 2000, and in 1996, he was the principal deputy solicitor general. He has briefed and argued cases in both federal and state courts, including the Supreme Court of the United States. In the early 1990s, he was special counsel to the attorney general of North Carolina.

Powell’s academic career has included visiting positions at Yale University and The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, and he served as a professor of law at the University of Iowa prior to joining the Duke Law faculty. His scholarship has addressed the history and ethical implications of American constitutionalism, the powers of the executive branch, and the role of the Constitution in legislative and judicial decision-making, among other subjects. His recent books include Constitutional Conscience: The Moral Dimension of Judicial Decision (2008) and No Law: Intellectual Property in the Image of an Absolute First Amendment (2009), which he coauthored with Duke Law Professor David Lange.

Powell holds a bachelor’s degree from St. David’s University College (now Trinity St. David) of the University of Wales; a master’s degree and PhD from Duke University; and a master’s of divinity and JD from Yale University. He was a law clerk to Judge Sam J. Ervin III of the US Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit. He has received numerous awards and honors including, in 2002, Duke University’s Scholar/Teacher Award. “The Contracts Experience,” a video teaching tool he developed in 2002 (in collaboration with Duke Law Professor John Weistart and Georgetown Law Professor Girardeau A. Spann) received a Telly Award and an Aegis Award of Excellence. Powell currently serves as series editor of the Carolina Academic Press Legal History Series.

Jedediah Purdy, Robinson O. Everett Professor of Law, teaches constitutional, environmental, and property law and writes in all of these areas.

Purdy clerked for the Honorable Pierre N. Leval of the 2nd US Circuit Court of Appeals in New York City and has been a fellow at the Berkman Center for Internet and Society at Harvard Law School, an ethics fellow at Harvard University, and a visiting professor at Yale Law School and Harvard Law School.

Purdy graduated from Harvard College, summa cum laude, with an AB in social studies, and received his JD from Yale Law School.

Arti Rai, Elvin R. Latty Professor of Law, is an internationally recognized expert in intellectual property (IP) law, administrative law, and health policy. Rai also has taught at Harvard, Yale, and the University of Pennsylvania law schools. Rai's research on IP law and policy in biotechnology, pharmacueticals, and software has been funded by NIH and the Kauffman Foundation. She has published more than fifty articles, essays, and book chapters on IP law, administrative law, and health policy. Her publications have appeared in both peer-reviewed journals and law reviews, including the New England Journal of Medicine, the Journal of Legal Studies, Nature Biotechnology, and the Columbia, Georgetown, and Northwestern law reviews. She is the editor of Intellectual Property Law and Biotechnology: Critical Concepts (Edward Elgar, 2011), the coauthor of a 2012 Kauffman Foundation monograph on cost-effective health care innovation, and the coauthor of a casebook on law and the mental health system.

From 2009 to 2010, Rai served as the Administrator of the Office of External Affairs at the US Patent and Trademark Office (USPTO). As External Affairs Administrator, Rai led policy analysis of the patent reform legislation that ultimately became the America Invents Act and worked to establish the USPTO's Office of the Chief Economist. Prior to that time, she had served on President Barack Obama's transition team reviewing the USPTO. Prior to entering academia, Rai clerked for Judge Marilyn Hall Patel of the US District Court for the Northern District of California; was a litigation associate at Jenner & Block (doing patent litigation as well as other litigation); and was a litigator at the Federal Programs Branch of the US Department of Justice's Civil Division.

Rai regularly testifies before Congress and relevant administrative bodies on IP law and policy issues and regularly advises federal agencies on IP policy issues raised by the research that they fund. Recently, her work has focused on advising the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA) and the National Human Genome Research Institute. Rai is currently cochair of the IP Committee of the Administrative Law Section of the ABA. She also serves as a member of the Institute of Medicine’s Committee on “Understanding the Global Public Health Implications of Substandard, Falsified, and Counterfeit Medical Products.” In 2011, Rai won the World Technology Network Award for Law.

Rai graduated from Harvard College, magna cum laude, with a BA in biochemistry and history (history and science), attended Harvard Medical School for the 1987-1988 academic year, and received her JD, cum laude, from Harvard Law School in 1991. Rai's moot court team at Harvard Law School won Best Brief and Team honors at the school's prestigious Ames Moot Court Competition.

Jerome H. Reichman, Bunyan S. Womble Professor of Law, has written and lectured widely on diverse aspects of intellectual property law, including comparative and international intellectual property law and the connections between intellectual property and international trade law. His articles in this area have particularly addressed the problems that developing countries face in implementing the World Trade Organization’s Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS Agreement). On this and related themes, he and Keith Maskus have recently published a book entitled International Public Goods and Transfer of Technology Under a Globalized Intellectual Property Regime.

Other recent writings have focused on intellectual property rights in data; the appropriate contractual regime for online delivery of computer programs and other information goods; and on the use of liability rules to stimulate investment in innovation. His articles include: “The Globalization of Private Knowledge Goods and the Privatization of Global Public Goods” (coauthored with Keith Maskus), 7 Journal of International Economic Law 279-320 (2004); “A Contractually Reconstructed Research Commons for Scientific Data in a Highly Protectionist Intellectual Property Environment” (coauthored with Paul Uhlir), 66 Law and Contemporary Problems 315-462 (2003); and “Using Liability Rules to Stimulate Local Innovation in Developing Countries: Application to Traditional Knowledge” (with Tracy Lewis) in International Public Goods and Transfer of Technology Under a Globalized Intellectual Property Regime (2005).

Reichman serves as special advisor to the United States National Academies and the International Council for Science (ICSU) on the subject of legal protection for databases. He is a consultant to numerous intergovernmental and nongovernmental organizations; a member of the Board of Editors, Journal of International Economic Law; and on the Scientific Advisory Board of il Diritto di Autore (Rome).

Barak D. Richman's, Edgar P. and Elizabeth C. Bartlett Professor of Law, studies the economics of contracting, new institutional economics, antitrust, and health care policy. The Nat’l Football League, which was argued before the US Supreme Court in January 2010 and again in Brady v. The Nat’l Football League in 2011. His recent work challenging illegal practices by Rabbinical Associations was featured in The New York Times.

Richman has an AB, magna cum laude, from Brown University; a JD, magna cum laude, from Harvard Law School; and a PhD from the University of California, Berkeley, where he studied under Nobel Laureate in Economics Oliver Williamson. Professor Richman served as a law clerk to Judge Bruce M. Selya of the United States Court of Appeals for the First Circuit, and from 1994-1996 he handled international trade legislation as a staff member of the United States Senate Committee on Finance, then chaired by Senator Daniel Patrick Moynihan. His work is available at http://ssrn.com/author=334149.

Stephen E. Sachs, Assistant Professor of Law, is a scholar of civil procedure, constitutional law, Anglo-American legal history, and conflict of laws. He joined the Duke Law faculty after practicing in the litigation group of Mayer Brown LLP in Washington, DC.

Sachs’ research spans a variety of substantive topics, focusing on the history of procedural and private law and the implications of that history for public law and current disputes. His research interests include the law of judgments, sovereign immunity, the legal status of corporations, and limitations on official power.

At Duke Law, Sachs teaches Civil Procedure and Conflict of Laws.

Sachs received his AB summa cum laude in history from Harvard University in 2002, graduating first in his class and winning the Sophia Freund Prize. He was a Rhodes Scholar, graduating from Oxford University in 2004 with a BA degree in politics, philosophy, and economics. He received his JD in 2007 from Yale Law School, where he was executive editor of the Yale Law Journal and served both as executive editor and articles editor of the Yale Law & Policy Review.

James Salzman, Samuel Fox Mordecai Professor of Law and Nicholas Institute Professor of Environmental Policy. In more than eight books and seventy articles and book chapters, his broad-ranging scholarship has addressed topics spanning trade and environment conflicts, drinking water, environmental protection in the service economy, wetlands mitigation banking, and the legal and institutional issues in creating markets for ecosystem services.

A dedicated classroom teacher and colleague, Salzman has twice been voted Professor of the Year by students at Duke's Nicholas School of the Environment and received two Blueprint Awards from the law school for institutional service. He has lectured on environmental policy in North and South America, Europe, Asia, Australia, and Africa. He has served as a visiting professor at Yale, Stanford, and Harvard (as the Leo Gottlieb Visiting Professor) as well as at Macquarie (Australia), Lund (Sweden), and Tel Aviv (Israel) Universities and the European University Institute (Italy). He has given distinguished lectures at Florida State, Wyoming, Pace and Lewis & Clark (invited for 2013).

An honors graduate of Yale College and Harvard University, Salzman was the first Harvard graduate to earn joint degrees in law and engineering and was named a Sheldon Fellow upon graduation. He has both government and private sector work experience. Prior to entering academia, he worked in Paris in the Environment Directorate of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) and in London as the European Environmental Manager for Johnson Wax. His honors include election as a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society, as well as appointments as a McMaster Fellow and Fulbright Senior Scholar in Australia and as a Bren Fellow at the Bren School of Environmental Science & Management, UC Santa Barbara.

He has published four casebooks, including International Environmental Law and Policy, Foundation Press (with D. Zaelke and D. Hunter, 1998, 4th ed. 2010), the leading casebook in the field with adoptions at over 200 schools. His articles have appeared in the Stanford, California, NYU, Penn Law Review and other legal, scientific and popular journals. A national survey of environmental law professors has voted his work among the top articles of the year on six separate occasions. Salzman is active in the fields of practice and policy, serving as a Member of the Trade and Environment Policy Advisory Committee, a government-appointed body providing counsel to the EPA.
Administrators and US Trade Representative on trade and environment issues, as well as advising several environmental nonprofits.

His most recent book, Drinking Water: A History, was praised as a “Recommended Read” by Scientific American and excerpted in Natural History.

Richard L. Schmalbeck, Simpson Thacher & Bartlett Professor of Law, has served as dean of the University of Illinois College of Law, and as a visiting professor on the University of Michigan and Northwestern University law faculties. His recent scholarly work has focused on issues involving nonprofit organizations, and the federal estate and gift taxes. He also has served as an advisor to the Russian Federation in connection with its tax reform efforts. The second edition of his federal income tax casebook, coauthored with Lawrence Zelenak, was released by Aspen Publishers in 2007.

He graduated from the University of Chicago, and later from its law school, where he served as associate editor of the University of Chicago Law Review. Prior to beginning his teaching career, he practiced tax law in Washington, DC.

Christopher H. Schroeder, Charles S. Murphy Professor of Law and Professor of Public Policy Studies. Christopher H. Schroeder is director of the Program in Public Law. He holds a joint appointment at Duke’s Sanford School of Public Policy and recently served as assistant attorney general for the Office of Legal Policy (OLP) at the US Department of Justice, a post he assumed in April 2010. Schroeder’s publications include a leading environmental law casebook, Environmental Regulation: Law, Science and Policy (6th Edition, 2008), Presidential Power Stories (with Curtis A. Bradley, 2008), A New Progressive Agenda for Public Health and the Environment (2005), a project of the Center for Progressive Reform (CPR), coedited with Rena Steinzor. He has served on National Academy of Sciences and Institute of Medicine committees to evaluate the use of human intentional dosing studies by EPA and the adequacy of the US drug safety system. Schroeder has served as acting assistant attorney general in the Office of Legal Counsel at the Department of Justice, where he was responsible for legal advice to the attorney general, the executive office of the president and other executive branch agencies on a broad range of issues, including separation of powers, other constitutional issues, and matters of statutory interpretation and administrative law. He has also served as chief counsel to the Senate Judiciary Committee. He is of counsel to the firm of O’Melveny and Myers. He received his BA from Princeton University in 1968, a MDiv from Yale University in 1971, and his JD from University of California, Berkeley (Boalt Hall) in 1974, where he was editor-in-chief of the California Law Review.

Steven L. Schwarcz, Stanley A. Star Professor of Law & Business, and the founding director of Duke’s interdisciplinary Global Capital Markets Center, studies and teaches in the areas of insolvency and bankruptcy law; international finance, capital markets, and systemic risk; and commercial law. (Links to his scholarship are at http://www.law.duke.edu/fac/schwarcz/) Prior to joining the Duke faculty, he was a partner at two leading international law firms, where he represented top banks and other financial institutions in structuring innovative capital market financing transactions, both domestic and international. He also helped to pioneer the field of asset securitization, and his book, Structured Finance, a Guide to the Principles of Asset Securitization (3d edition), is one of the most widely used texts in the field.

Schwarcz has been the Leverhulme Visiting Professor at the University of Oxford, visiting professor at the University of Geneva Faculty of Law, senior fellow at The University of Melbourne Law School, and an advisor to the United Nations. He has given numerous endowed or distinguished public lectures, including at The University of Hong Kong, the University of Oxford (the Leverhulme Lectures 2010, available at http://www.law.ox.ac.uk/published/leverhulme2010.php), Georgetown University Law Center, National University of Singapore, and The National Assembly of the Republic of Korea. Admissions

Duke Law School attracts many of the most qualified applicants from across the country and around the world, and admission is highly selective. Most successful applicants graduated near the top of their undergraduate classes, have high test scores, and possess a clear record of achievement in other areas such as community service, business, graduate study, or extra-curricular activities.

The application review process includes a thorough evaluation of each candidate’s academic record, including the rigor and breadth of the curriculum, overall grade trends, and any graduate level work. Detailed letters of recommendation from faculty members provide further insight into a candidate’s intellectual ability, work ethic, and personal skills. Letters of recommendation from employers may add additional information about an applicant’s abilities. Candidates who have been out of school for some time may substitute letters from employers for the academic references.

Duke also seeks to identify applicants who demonstrate leadership and engagement. Most successful candidates show sustained and meaningful commitment to one or more fields of interest to them. Although many applicants have had some exposure to the legal profession, this is not in itself a requirement. The Duke Law School community benefits from a student body that represents a broad range of experiences and interests. The required resume should provide a concise summary of an applicant’s activities and employment; it may include more detail than a traditional one-page employment resume. The personal statement and optional additional essays allow candidates to highlight specific aspects of their background that may not be apparent from the other application materials. It is often helpful to indicate reasons for interest in law school in general and Duke in particular, especially when they relate to an applicant’s specific experiences. Special care is taken when evaluating applications to achieve diversity in interests, perspectives, and backgrounds.

Admission Procedures

JD Program

The Admissions and Financial Aid Committee receives its authority by delegation from the law faculty and reports to the law faculty. The committee decides policy questions that arise in the admissions process. Individual applications are reviewed by the associate dean for admissions and student affairs. Each applicant is responsible for collecting and submitting the following documents:

• Completed application form submitted through the electronic service offered by the Law School Admission Council at www.lsac.org.
• Two letters of recommendation. It is suggested that the letters be written by professors who have personal knowledge of the academic performance and potential of the applicant. Although academic references are preferred, applicants who have been out of school for some time may substitute letters from employers or others who are well acquainted with their personal traits and intellectual potential.
• A nonrefundable processing fee of $70.
• A personal statement and resume.

Applicants are strongly urged to take the Law School Admission Test (LSAT) no later than December. Registration forms and information should be procured by writing directly to the Law School Admission Council.
Applicants must arrange for the submission of transcripts from all undergraduate and graduate schools attended to the Law School Admission Council, Box 2000, Newtown, PA 18940.

The application deadline is February 15. Review of completed applications begins in September. Most decisions are issued by late April.

Applicants who visit Duke Law School are encouraged to talk with currently enrolled students, and may attend a class and meet with an admissions representative if the visit is scheduled in advance.

Each applicant extended an offer of admission will be given a reasonable amount of time to respond. Written offers of admission will be sent to admitted candidates specifying the amount of deposit and other conditions required to hold a place in the class. A waiting list is established in late spring and is held open as long as necessary. Offers are extended to applicants on the waiting list as withdrawals occur during the summer.

Admission to Duke Law is conditional upon receipt of a final official transcript of all undergraduate and graduate work undertaken by the candidate, and the completion of any degree listed in the application for admission.

Summer Dual-Degree Programs

Procedures for admission to the summer dual-degree programs are no different from those established for the regular JD program commencing in the fall semester. Applicants should indicate on the application form that they are applying to the summer program and designate either one of the JD/LLM programs offered by Duke Law in International and Comparative Law and Law and Entrepreneurship, or The Graduate School department in which they wish to pursue the AM or MS. Applicants to the JD/LLM programs are selected by Duke Law School. The selection process for AM and MS applicants is bifurcated. Upon a favorable decision by Duke Law School, the applicant’s file will be forwarded to the appropriate Graduate School department for review. Applicants must be formally admitted to the master’s program by The Graduate School. Applicants to the JD/MEMP program must submit applications to both Duke Law School and to the Pratt School of Engineering.

Students must elect whether they wish to be considered for entrance in the summer or fall, and may not be considered concurrently for admission to both programs. A student wishing to change that election may do so prior to receipt of a final admission decision without payment of an additional processing fee. However, the admissions committee will treat the application to the alternate program as newly completed; thus a late change in election may prejudice the applicant’s chance for admission. An offer of admission to one program is not transferable to another program. This policy reflects our need for a firm commitment from applicants regarding which program they wish to enter so that we may deal fairly with all applicants competing for a limited number of spaces in each class.

Other Dual-Degree Programs

Applicants for any of the other dual-degree programs offered by Duke Law School are considered separately for admission to both schools on the same basis as those applicants who are applying for the individual programs. The admission decision of one school has no bearing on the admission decision of the other school. If accepted for admission by both schools, the applicant is automatically eligible to participate in the established dual-degree program. Students planning to participate in such programs should notify Duke Law School immediately upon their admission.

Transfer Policy

In order to be considered for admission to Duke, a transfer applicant must present evidence of the satisfactory completion of one year of study at any law school that is a member of the Association of American Law Schools, and be eligible for readmission to that school. To be given serious consideration for admission, an applicant should rank at least in the top quarter of the class. Two academic years of law study must be completed at Duke.

The following items are required to complete a transfer applicant’s admission file:

- A nonrefundable processing fee of $70
- Letter of good standing from the dean of the law school attended
- References from two law professors who have personal knowledge of the academic performance and potential of the applicant
- Certified transcript of all grades earned in the first year of law school
- Law school class rank or notification from the school that they do not rank
- LSAC Law School Report

Transfer Policy  45
Spring semester grades must be received before decisions can be made. The deadline for submitting transfer applications is July 1. Decisions are normally made the last week of July.

Graduate Study in Law

Admission to Duke to pursue law study beyond the basic professional degree is generally limited to LLM in law and entrepreneurship candidates, LLM in judicial studies candidates, JD/LLM candidates, and international students. For information about application to the LLM programs in law and entrepreneurship and judicial studies, please see below. For information about application to other graduate study programs, see the description of admission procedures for the summer dual-degree program or the section on international students.

Admission Procedures

LLM in Law and Entrepreneurship

Applications for the LLM in law and entrepreneurship are reviewed by members of the program’s faculty committee. Each applicant is responsible for collecting and submitting the following documents:

- Completed application form submitted through the electronic service offered by the Law School Admission council at www.lsac.org
- Two letters of recommendation. It is suggested that at least one letter be written by a professor who has personal knowledge of the academic performance and potential of the applicant. Applicants who have been out of school for some time may substitute letters from employers or others who are well acquainted with their personal traits and entrepreneurial potential.
- A nonrefundable processing fee of $70
- A personal statement and resume

Applicants must arrange for the submission of transcripts from all undergraduate, graduate, and law schools attended to the Law School Admission Council, Box 2000, Newtown, PA 18940. The official law school transcript must be submitted directly from an accredited US law school verifying that the applicant has received a JD and/or LLM degree from that school, along with evidence of final class rank. Official transcripts for all academic work attempted at any college, university, and professional school must also be submitted, including international JD or LLM degrees. If eligibility for the program depends on current active bar membership, applicant must submit verification of active status.

Applicants whose first language is not English must submit a Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL) report, unless the applicant graduated from a US undergraduate institution or received a JD from a US law school.

There is a rolling admissions process for the law and entrepreneurship LLM program. Application materials are posted online in October, with decisions issued periodically as applications are completed.

Each applicant extended an offer of admission will be given a reasonable amount of time to respond. Written offers of admission will be sent to admitted candidates specifying the amount of deposit and other conditions required to hold a place in the class. A waiting list is established in late spring and is held open as long as necessary. Offers are extended to applicants on the waiting list as withdrawals occur during the summer.

LLM in Judicial Studies

Through Duke’s LLM Program in Judicial Studies, judges learn the analytical skills and research approaches necessary for studying judicial institutions and apply those skills to studies of domestic and international judicial institutions, common and emerging legal issues, general judicial practices, and judicial reform efforts. Eligible candidates must have a JD or an LLM from an accredited US law school or an equivalent degree from another country, and be a current or former judge.

Each applicant is responsible for collecting and submitting the following documents:

- The application form which can be downloaded from Duke Law’s website at www.law.duke.edu/judicial-studies/application. The form must be signed and submitted in hard copy form through the mail or electronically signed and submitted via e-mail to judicialstudies@law.duke.edu.
- $70 nonrefundable application processing fee. This fee may be submitted by check or money order, and must be submitted through the mail. To verify your identity, please include your name and birth date on your check or money order.
Bar Admission

Law school applicants should learn about the rules governing admission to the bar, including character and fitness qualifications. Information can be obtained by writing to the appropriate state board of bar examiners.

University and Law School Rules

Students are subject to the rules and regulations of the university and Duke Law School that are currently in effect, or those that in the future may be promulgated by the appropriate authorities of the university. A copy of Duke Law School’s rules is available for review in the Law School Library and on the law school’s website at law.duke.edu. Every student, in accepting admission, indicates a willingness to subscribe to and be governed by these rules and regulations. The student also acknowledges the right of the university to take such disciplinary action, including suspension and/or expulsion, as may be appropriate, for failure to abide by these rules and regulations of academic misconduct, or for other conduct adjudged unsatisfactory or detrimental to the university.

Duke University is a drug-free workplace as defined by federal regulations.

Information about admission to the Duke University School of Law is also available at the law school’s website at law.duke.edu.
Financial Information

Tuition

JD, LLB, and MLS Candidates
For the academic year 2013-2014 entering students in the JD program and transfer students will pay a full year’s tuition of $52,620. Entering students must pay their fall tuition by August 1, 2013. The tuition refund policy is set forth below.

Graduate Degree Candidates
Students pursuing the LLM degree will pay tuition of $52,620 in 2013-2014 for their single year of instruction. SJD candidates must enroll for two years; tuition for the SJD program for 2013-2014 is set at $52,620.

Other Fees

Student Health Fee
A mandatory student health fee of $618 ($309 per semester) is charged to all Duke University students. All students are required to maintain medical insurance that meets minimum standards set by the university.

Absentia Fee
Duke Law School students spending one semester or all of their final year of law school at another law school shall be charged an in absentia fee for the semester or semesters “visiting” at another law school. The fee is the greater of (1) 10 percent of Duke Law School tuition or (2) the amount that Duke Law School tuition exceeds the tuition at the “visited” school. The fee shall not exceed two-thirds of Duke Law School tuition. Students visiting at Duke will receive no scholarship assistance from Duke Law School.

Athletic Events Fee
Law students may secure admission to all regularly scheduled university athletic contests, with the exception of soccer and basketball, held on university grounds during the entire academic year free of charge. The fee for basketball and soccer is payable in the fall semester. Students may also use the facilities of the Duke golf course upon payment of student green fees.

Law Student Activity Fee
A $55 fee each semester is due and payable no later than the day of registration for a particular semester. This fee is utilized to support the activities of student organizations and the Duke Bar Association.

Graduate Student Activity Fee
Students are charged a $33.50 fee to support the Graduate and Professional Student Council.

Recreation Fee
Students are charged a $174 fee that provides unlimited access to the on-campus recreation facilities.
Parking Fee

Students wishing to drive to the campus must register a car for the university’s parking lots at an annual fee of $141-$333, depending on availability of spaces in various open or gated lots.

Academic Transcript Fee

The university will charge a one-time academic transcript fee of $40.

General Expenses

Applicants should be aware that the following general expense estimate was compiled in the spring of 2012, and for future years appropriate revisions may be necessary to reflect inflationary increases. The best estimate of total living costs for a nine-month academic year excluding tuition, fees, and hospital insurance is approximately $18,408 for a single student. Included in the above cost-of-living estimate are current expense levels for lodging, board, books (approximately $1,326 if purchased new), supplies, transportation, and personal effects. First-year students are also strongly encouraged to own a computer; the student expense budget may be increased by up to $2,500 for the purchase of a notebook computer. (This budget increase is available only once during a student’s career.) Financial aid awards in most cases cannot be based on proposed budgets in excess of these figures.

University Policies for Payment of Accounts

Payment of Accounts for Fall and Spring

The Office of the Bursar issues invoices for tuition, fees, and other charges approximately four to six weeks prior to the beginning of classes each semester. The total amount due on the invoice is payable by the invoice due date which is normally several weeks prior to the beginning of classes. If full payment is not received by the due date, a late payment will be assessed on the next invoice and certain restrictions as stated below will be applied. Failure to receive an invoice does not warrant exemption from the payment of tuition and fees nor from the penalties and restrictions. Entering first-year students are required to pay tuition, fees, and other charges by August 1, 2013. Students may download the invoice from their ACES account.

Penalty Charge

If the total amount due on an invoice is not received by the invoice due date, a penalty charge will be assessed by the Office of the Bursar.

Restrictions

An individual will be in default if the total amount due on the student invoice is not paid in full by the due date. An individual who is in default will not be allowed to register for classes, receive a copy of the academic transcript, have academic credits certified, be granted a leave of absence, or receive a diploma at graduation. An individual in default will be withdrawn.

Tuition Refunds

Tuition refunds are governed by the following policy. It should be noted that special rules apply to students receiving Title IV loan assistance, which may be obtained from the financial aid office.

In the event of death or a call to active duty in the armed services, a full tuition refund is granted.

Students may elect to have tuition charges refunded or carried forward as a credit for later study according to the following schedule:

1. withdrawal before the beginning of classes—full refund;
2. withdrawal during the first or second week—80 percent;
3. withdrawal during the third through fifth week—60 percent;
4. withdrawal during the sixth week—20 percent;
5. withdrawal after the sixth week—no refund.

Scholarship Assistance

Duke Law School offers scholarship assistance to selected incoming students. Although most scholarships are based on merit and financial need, a number of scholarships are granted based solely on the applicant’s potential, as reflected by the strength of the admission application.
Scholarship awards are generally made in the form of a contract committing the school to a total grant to be disbursed over six semesters or three years of full-time law school enrollment.

Students seeking scholarship assistance should file a scholarship application soon after being selected for admission to the law school. The fact that a student plans to apply for financial aid will not affect the decision on the application for admission.

Specially Funded Scholarships

Many of the law school’s scholarships are funded from general endowment and other law school revenues. Some scholarship candidates are selected each year for support from one of several specially endowed scholarship funds. The criteria for these named awards vary; all students applying for aid will be considered for any special scholarships for which they may be eligible.

Upper-Level Awards

Virtually all available scholarship funds are allocated to entering students and to students continuing under a scholarship contract awarded at the time of admission. No additional scholarship funding is available to upper-level students, except for the David H. Siegel Scholarship established by the late Allen G. Siegel of the Class of 1960, in memory of his father.

Title IV Loan Assistance

Title IV loan assistance is available to qualified students. Students who wish to apply for this assistance must complete the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA). To complete the FAFSA, visit www.fafsa.ed.gov. Students completing the FAFSA will be required to obtain a Personal Identification Number (PIN). Students may obtain the PIN by visiting www.pin.ed.gov. We recommend students complete the FAFSA as soon after January 1 as possible. Note the Duke Law Title IV code is 002920. To obtain more information on federal student financial aid visit www.fafsa.ed.gov.

Satisfactory Academic Progress

To remain eligible for Title IV funding, a student must make satisfactory progress. In order to make satisfactory academic progress, a student must remain in good standing according to the rules of the faculty, or, if placed on probation, attain a cumulative grade point average of at least 2.1 after the specified probationary period.

Non-Need Based Loan Assistance

Alternative loan programs may be available to students who need additional loan funds to meet the approved academic period budget. A good credit history (report) is generally required to receive these loans. To check your credit history contact your credit bureau. For more information about credit bureaus or resolving credit problems, write to Public Reference, Federal Trade Commission, Washington, DC 20508.

Loan Repayment Assistance Program

Since 1988, Duke Law School has had a loan repayment assistance program which assists graduates who accept low-paying public interest or government employment to repay their law school loans. Funds disbursed through this program are a loan that is fully forgivable at the end of the year in which the loan was made. More information about the generous terms of this program is available from the Office of Admissions and Financial Aid or online at http://law.duke.edu/admis/financial/lrap.

Visiting Students

All financial assistance for visiting students at Duke Law School must be processed through the institution from which the student will receive his or her degree.
Scholastic Standards

The following are abbreviated versions of some of the most frequently asked questions about Duke Law School’s rules and policies. For a complete listing, please visit http://law.duke.edu/about/community/rules/.

Grading Policy

Duke Law School uses a slightly modified form of the traditional 4.0 scale. The modification permits faculty to recognize especially distinguished performance with grades above a 4.0.

There is an enforced maximum median grade of 3.3 in all first-year courses and in all upper-level courses with more fifty or more students. Beginning in September 2012, distribution of grades in these classes is required as follows:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Numerical Grade</th>
<th>Percentage of Class</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>4.1-4.3</td>
<td>0-5%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.5-4.0</td>
<td>20-40%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.2-3.4</td>
<td>30-50%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.8-3.1</td>
<td>20-40%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.0-2.7</td>
<td>0-5%</td>
</tr>
</tbody>

There is also a forced maximum median grade of 3.5 in upper-level courses with enrollments between ten and forty-nine students. A grade higher than 4.0 would be comparable to an “A+” under letter grading systems. A grade of 1.5 is failing.

The transcripts of students who enrolled at Duke in 2003-2004 or earlier reflect two slightly different grading scales. Through the academic year 2003-2004, the first year for most of the Class of 2006, the enforced maximum median grade was a 3.1 and faculty were permitted to give a limited number of grades of up to 4.5. The scale in effect as of 2004-2005 has an enforced maximum median of 3.3 and the highest possible grade has been lowered to 4.3.

Graduation Honors and Class Rank

Duke Law School recognizes the achievement of attaining and maintaining high grades through graduation honors. Order of the Coif membership is awarded to the top 10 percent of the graduating class, based on all grades. Highest Honors, or the summa cum laude designation, is awarded to the top 2 percent of the graduating class based on all grades; High Honors, (magna cum laude) are awarded to the top 15 percent of the graduating class, based on grades earned in upper-level courses; and Honors (cum laude) are awarded to the top 35 percent of the graduating class, based on grades earned in upper-level courses. Duke Law School also recognizes the top 5 percent of the rising third-year class and the graduating class based on all grades.

The law school does not release class rank.

Maximum Course Loads

No first-year student other than a dual-degree student shall take courses other than those of the required first-year program. First-year dual degree students who wish to take law courses other than their required first-year courses must obtain prior permission from the dean. No student shall take for credit courses totaling more than sixteen credits per semester nor audit and take for credit courses totaling more than seventeen credits per semester, except with the permission of the dean.

Minimum Course Loads

To receive credit for a semester-in-residence, a student shall take “for credit” courses totaling at least twelve credits counting toward that student’s law degree requirements, except with the permission of the dean. In no event shall permission be given to a student to take “for credit” courses totaling fewer than ten credits counting toward that student’s law degree requirements per semester or whatever may be prescribed by the American Bar Association as the minimum number credits for a semester-in-residence. The above restrictions shall not apply to candidates for the international LLM degree.

Attendance and Preparation

Students must regularly attend and prepare for all courses. In the discretion of the instructor, a student who fails to meet this standard may be (1) denied the right to take a final examination or to submit other required coursework, in which case a grade of 1.5 will be entered for the course, or (2) dropped from the course with a mark of withdraw/pass or withdraw/fail entered on his or her record pursuant to Rule 3-10(3). If the student is auditing the course, the instructor may drop him or her from the course.

Examinations

This is summary information only. Details on the rules and procedures under which examinations are administered are provided to students before each examination period. A final examination will be required in every regular course, and no final examination will be required in any seminar, unless the instructor announces to the contrary before the end of the second week of the semester.

No student may take a final examination in a course at a time other than the regularly scheduled time without the permission of the dean’s office. Such permission normally shall be granted only where one of the following circumstances exists: the student is ill or can demonstrate that taking the examination at the regular time would cause extreme personal hardship; there is a direct conflict in the scheduling of final examinations in two or more courses in which the student is enrolled; the student is enrolled in three or more courses, each carrying more than one hour of credit, for which examinations are scheduled within a thirty-six-hour period over two calendar days. In such circumstances, the examination to be rescheduled shall be the middle examination in the sequence.

If a student has been excused from taking a final examination in a course at the regularly scheduled time, the instructor may require the student to take a special final examination or submit a special paper. In such a case, the student shall be graded in the course on a credit/no credit basis. If the student takes the regular examination, but it cannot be read together with the examinations taken by other students in the same course, the instructor may, in his or her discretion, grade the examination numerically or on a credit/no credit basis.

All final examination papers shall be preserved for a period of two years by the instructor or the Duke Law School’s registrar’s office. All examination papers, including questions, student answers, and related materials are the property of the instructor and/or the law school. Students shall comply with the instructor’s requirements concerning retention of exam papers and shall not retain copies, digital or otherwise, of exam questions, answers or related materials unless retention is specifically permitted by the instructor.

Submission of Papers

Papers or other coursework submitted in partial or complete satisfaction of the requirements of a course, including an independent study, must be completed no later than the last day of the regularly scheduled examination period of the semester in which the course is offered unless the instructor sets an earlier deadline. In individual cases, the instructor may grant an extension.

Withdrawal

A student may, upon application in writing and with the permission of the dean, withdraw from the law school and preserve his or her eligibility for readmission.
Dismissal and Readmission

Dismissal of a student from Duke Law School may take the form of suspension for a specified period of time or expulsion. A student may be dismissed from the law school for improper conduct pursuant to such standards and procedures as the faculty may prescribe. A student who has been declared ineligible to continue the study of law for academic reasons shall be dismissed from the law school and shall not be eligible for readmission except as specifically authorized by the faculty after the lapse of not less than one year and on such conditions as the faculty may specify.
Curriculum

201. Legal Writing: Craft & Style. The goal of this course is to learn to effectively edit work, write, and rewrite in a risk-free environment. Instructor: Magat. 2 units.

202. Art Law. This course will cover a number of intersections between the law and the people and institutions who constitute the world of the visual arts, including artists, museums, collectors, dealers, and auctioneers. Instructor: DeMott. 2 units.

203. Business Strategy for Lawyers. The course is designed to introduce a wide variety of modern strategy frameworks and methodologies, including methods for assessing the strength of competition, for understanding relative bargaining power, for anticipating competitors' actions, for analyzing cost and value structures and their relevance to competition, and for assessing potential changes in the scope of the firm (diversification and vertical integration). Basic mastery of these tools has relevance to everyone seeking a career in business or those advising business managers or executives. Faculty: de Figueiredo. 3 units.

205. Antitrust. A study of the federal antitrust laws and the policy of using competition to control private economic behavior. Topics include the political framework in which competition policy is made both internationally and domestically; the economics underlying antitrust policy; monopolization and exclusionary practices; competitor collaboration; vertical restraints; mergers; and price discrimination. Instructor: Richman. 3 units.

206. International Arbitration. In today's global economy, parties to cross-border commercial transactions increasingly choose to resolve their disputes through arbitration. This course introduces students to the law and practice of international arbitration. Among other things, the course will consider the formation and enforcement of arbitration agreements; the conduct of arbitral proceedings; the recognition and enforcement of arbitral awards; the international conventions, national laws, and institutional arbitration rules that govern the arbitral process and the enforcement of arbitration agreements and awards; the strategic issues that arise in the course of international arbitration proceedings; and the practical benefits (and disadvantages) of arbitration. Instructor: Kent. 3 units.

207. Sports and the Law. This course examines the legal relations among the various parties in sports at both the professional and amateur levels. Particular attention will be paid to the importance given to the maintenance of competitive balance and its impact on traditional notions of competition that apply in other business settings. Instructor: Haagen. 2 units.

210. Business Associations. Surveys the law providing ground rules for the organization, financing, and internal governance of corporations and other forms of business associations such as partnerships and limited liability companies. Instructor: Cox, DeMott, De Fontenay, Gulati, or Krawiec. 4 units.

215. Commercial Transactions. A study of basic policy choices made in the structuring of the law governing commercial transactions. The course serves as an introduction to debt arrangements, bankruptcy, secured lending, and payment systems. An important objective of the course is developing student skills in dealing with highly integrated statutes, the Uniform Commercial Code, and the Bankruptcy Code. Law 215 and Law 287 (Principles of Commercial and Bankruptcy Law) have a substantial overlap, and enrollment in one precludes enrollment in the other. The courses differ in their relative emphasis on bankruptcy law. Instructor: Weistart. 4 units.

218. Comparative Law: Western Legal Traditions. A study of civil law and common law systems, focusing on legal institutions, legal actors, their roles, and backgrounds. This course will examine the shared Western legal and intellectual heritage and analyze selected problem areas. Instructor: Michaels. 3 units.

220. Conflict of Laws. A study of the special problems that arise when the significant facts of a case are connected with more than one jurisdiction, including recognition and effect of foreign judgments, choice of law, and the United States Constitution and conflict of laws. Instructor: Michaels or Sachs. 3 units.

224. International Banking Regulation. International banking regulation will review the United States regulation of foreign bank operations and the foreign operations of US banks; leading models of foreign supervision, and regulation of transnational banking; the leading international institutions responsible for developing and deploying international regulatory standards; and the interaction of domestic and international financial regulation and their symbiotic evolution and prospects. Instructor: Baxter. 2 units.

225. Criminal Procedure: Adjudication. A study of the basic rules of criminal procedure beginning with the institution of formal proceedings. Subjects to be covered include prosecutorial discretion, the preliminary hearing, the grand jury, criminal discovery, guilty pleas and plea bargaining, jury selection, pretrial publicity, double jeopardy, the right to counsel, and professional ethics in criminal cases. Instructor: Dever. 3 units.

226. Criminal Procedure: Investigation. This course is a study of the legal limitations on criminal investigative practices contained in the Fourth, Fifth, and Sixth Amendments to the Constitution. Topics include search and seizure, arrest, the exclusionary rule, electronic surveillance, the privilege against self-incrimination, interrogation, confessions, and the right to counsel. Instructor: Griffin. 3 units.

227. Use of Force in International Law. This course will examine the international law regulating the use of force in the jus ad bellum context. Self-defense, humanitarian intervention, non-state threats (including piracy and criminal insurgencies), the characteristics of peacetime use of force in space and cyberspace, as well as the use of drones against non-state actors, are all included among the topics the class will address. Instructor: Dunlap. 2 units.

229. The Law of State and Local Government. This course will focus on that wide-ranging, and largely undefined source of authority known as the "police power." Using the "new" police science to guide our discussions, we will explore the nature and limits of the police power at the state and local levels, its relationship to law, and the role that law plays in the regulation of social, political, and economic life. Instructor: Staff. 3 units.

232. Employment Discrimination. A study of the law of employment discrimination, focusing mainly on federal law prohibiting race, sex, age, and handicapped discrimination. This course provides a basic knowledge of statutory coverage, standards, procedures and proof, and avenues of relief. Instructor: Bartlett or Jones. 3 units.

235. Environmental Law. Examination of rapidly growing body of law concerned with interrelationships between human activities and the larger environment. Focus on rationales for environmental protection; risk assessment and priorities. Instructor: Salzman. 3 units.

236. International Human Rights: The Fundamentals. This course will address the questions concerning the basis for an international human rights system that would pose limits to states' treatment of their own nationals. In particular, discussion will focus on the available fora and forms of jurisdiction for the prosecution of international crimes. Instructor: Helfer or Monast. 3 units.

237. The Law of Lawyering: Ethics of Social Justice Lawyering. This course will focus on the law governing lawyers as it applies to representing indigent clients as well as social just causes through impact litigation or other means. It will examine the substantive law of Professional Responsibility and also explore the skills needed to practice law ethically when representing indigent clients and social causes. While particular attention will be paid to the ABA Model Rules of Professional Conduct, the class will also examine other sources of relevant law and scholarship. Class will rely heavily on the use of hypotheticals and simulated client interactions. Grading will be based on 4 writing assignments and class participation. Instructor: Demerrit. 2 units.

238. Ethics and the Law of Lawyering. Examination in detail of the "law of lawyering" relating to such issues as the formation of the attorney-client relationship, conflicts of interest, confidentiality, communications with clients, and areas where specific rules and regulations controlling lawyer behavior are in effect. Course satisfies the ethics requirement. Instructor: K. Bradley or Newman. 2 units.

239. Ethics and the Law of Lawyering in Civil Litigation. This course examines ethics in the context of civil litigation. This will include study of the formation of the attorney-client relationship, conflicts of interest, regulation and discipline of attorneys, as well as discussion of the implications of the adversarial process on ethical obligations of lawyers. While particular attention will be paid to the ABA Model Rules of Professional Conduct, the class will also examine other sources of relevant law, including the Restatement (Third) of the Law Governing Lawyers, court decisions, statutory rules, and administrative regulations. Instructor: Metzloff or Forbes. 2 units.

240. European Union Law. This course provides an advanced intro to the law and institutions of the European Union (EU). It is introductory in that the focus is on the constitutional, and institutional order of the European Union. It is advanced in that the constitutional issues are analyzed in their most recent incarnation in the EU of 2009, and with the benefit of a variety of theoretical perspectives drawn from political science and the law. Instructor: Staff. 3 units.
244. Business and Economics of Law Firms. This course will provide students with an enhanced and vital understanding of law firms as business entities in a competitive and increasingly global market. Prominent law firm leaders will serve as guest lecturers. Instructor: Elvin. 1 unit.

245. Evidence. A study of the theory and rules governing presentation of evidence to a judicial tribunal, including the concepts of relevancy, character evidence, judicial notice, real and demonstrative evidence, and expert testimony. Instructor: Beskind or Griffin. 4 units.

246. Ethics and the Rules of Professional Conduct. This course will explore the evolving ethical obligations of attorneys as defined by the American Bar Association's Model Rules of Professional Conduct and the variations thereof adopted by the states. This course will satisfy the ethics and professionalism requirement for students who have taken or will take other qualifying courses. Instructor: Staff. 1 unit.

250. Family Law. A study of legal and policy issues relating to the family, including marriage and divorce. Topics include requirements to marriage, unmarried cohabitation, divorce, spousal support, child custody and support. Instructor: K. Bradley. 3 units.

252. Foreign Relations Law. This course examines the constitutional and statutory doctrines regulating the conduct of American foreign relations. Instructor: C. Bradley or Young. 3 units.

255. Federal Income Taxation. An introduction to federal income taxation with emphasis on the determination of income subject to taxation, deductions in computing taxable income, the proper time period for reporting income and deductions, and the proper taxpayer on which to impose the tax. Instructor: Schmalbeck or Zelenak. 4 units.

257. Empirical Law and Economics. This course is divided into two distinct portions: (1) training in statistical methods (focusing mainly on regression analysis) at the introductory and intermediate levels; and (2) applications to evaluating expert reports in litigation contexts and the quantitative legal academic literature. The first half of the course will also cover most of the statistical methods students are likely to encounter in the practice of law. The second half will shift to statistical methods as they appear in briefs and supplemental reports submitted in employment discrimination, antitrust and patent litigation. There are no prerequisites. No background knowledge is necessary or assumed. Instructor: Staff. 3 units.

260. Financial Information. This course introduces basic accounting principles and practices and their relationship to the law, as well as to study a number of contemporary accounting problems relating to financial disclosure and the accountant's professional responsibility. Students with accounting degrees, MBAs, or who have taken more than a couple of accounting courses are not permitted to enroll. Instructor: Skender. 3 units.

264. Venture Capital/Private Equity. This course uses a mixture of cases, lectures, and guest speakers to study venture capital and private equity markets in the United States and other countries. The course focuses on how financial, legal, and economic issues are dealt with in the financial contracts between venture capitalists and their limited partners and between venture capitalists (or other private equity investors) and the firms in which they invest. The emphasis on the perspective of the venture capitalist and the focus on deals distinguish this course from related courses, which emphasize the perspective of entrepreneurs or managers and focus on topics such as writing business plans, formulating growth strategies, managing new fast-growing firms, or competing in special industries. The course addresses not only how venture capitalists provide capital to start-up firms in growing industries, but also how private equity markets provide capital to help established medium-sized firms (often family businesses) grow and restructure. Cross-listed with Finance 491, at the Fuqua School of Business. Business Associations is a prerequisite and Corporate Finance is a corequisite for this course unless there is a strong background in business or economics. Instructor: Staff. Variable credit.

265. First Amendment. The basic constitutional law of the free speech-free press clause and the church-state clauses of the first amendment. Instructor: Benjamin. 3 units.

267. Insurance Law. An examination of the nature of insurance and the insurance contract. Possible topics include: the role of risk classification, marketing, the principle of indemnity and the notion of an insurable interest, subrogation, the risks transferred, rights at variance with policy provisions, claims processes, and justifications for and the nature of regulation of insurance institutions. Instructor: Staff. 2 units.
270. Intellectual Property. A comprehensive introduction to the principal theories of trademark law and unfair competition, patent law, copyright law, and related state and federal doctrines. Intellectual Property is a prerequisite for Law 369 (Patent), 393 (Trademark), and 530 (Entertainment). Instructors: Boyle or Lange. 4 units.

275. International Law. Introduction to international law including the nature and sources of international law, its place in national and international decision-making, and its impact on United States law. Provides a survey of the field and a platform for more specialized international courses. Students with strong international interests are advised to take this course as early as possible. Instructor: C. Bradley or Helfer. 3 units.

277. International Development Law. This seminar investigates the role of law and legal institutions in economic development. We will survey several critical topics in the relevant literature, such as property rights, the role of the judiciary, rule of law, constitutionalism and democracy, law and finance, corruption and social norms, and others. Students will be expected to submit a research paper by the end of the term. Instructor: Staff. 2 units.

280. Jurisprudence. A historical examination of the development of legal philosophy from ancient times to contemporary period. Instructor: Christie. 3 units.

283. Global Law Workshop. This workshop offers an opportunity for students to engage in international and comparative law scholarship. The theme will be "The Law and Politics of International Cooperation." The workshop will be centered around theoretical readings in international law and international relations and discussions of works in progress by visiting scholars. Pre-req Law 275 or permission from instructor. Instructor: Staff. 1 unit.

285. Labor Relations Law. This course investigates problems involved in the regulation of industrial conflict. Instructor: Bowling. 3 units.

287. Principles of Commercial and Bankruptcy Law. Introduction to principles and concepts of commercial law and bankruptcy and their interplay. Instructor: Schwarcz. 4 units.

290. Remedies. Examination of the principles governing the use of judicial remedies such as damages, injunctions, and declaratory judgments, in a variety of public and private law settings. Consideration of the goals of remedies doctrines and the relationship of the doctrines to other facets of the legal system. Topics include recent developments in remedies law concerning such areas as school desegregation, consent decrees in civil rights suits, and punitive damages, which highlight the tensions underlying remedies principles. Instructor: Law Faculty. 3 units.

291. Global Law Workshop: Transnational Regulation of Stolen Art and Cultural Property. This course will focus on disputes relating to the ownership and recovery of art and cultural property, ranging from Nazi era expropriations to long-standing debates about the presence of the Elgin Marbles (portions of the Parthenon frieze) in the British Museum. We will examine in detail in a set of International treaties and aspects of their implementation by statute in the United States, as well as cases in which a foreign state or its agency is the defendant in U.S. litigation. There are no prerequisites for the course. Grades will be based on a final exam and on class participation. Instructors: C. Bradley, DeMott, Helfer. 1 unit.

295. Trusts and Estates. An examination of noncommercial property dispositions, both testamentary and inter vivos, including the following topics: intestate succession, wills and will substitutes, creation and characteristics of trusts, powers of appointment, problems in trust and estate administration. Instructor: Twiddy. 3 units.

298. Ocean and Coastal Law and Policy. Historical understandings of law play an increasingly important part in American environmental policy. In courts, legislatures, and the broader forum of public opinion, many environmental programs are challenged on grounds of legitimacy or fairness by advocates relying on historical claims about the law of land ownership and use, resources, and the environment. Prominent examples are "original intent", Constitutional jurisprudence, and the "property rights" movement. Environmentalist historians and writers have made claims about law that also merit examination. This discussion course will introduce students to the history of law (including common-law cases, statutes, and Constitutional provisions) bearing on land use, resources, wildlife, and pollution, and help them critically evaluate the history-based claims in environmental debate. Readings include primary (historical) texts and secondary (interpretive) texts. No prior background in law or history is required. Instructor: Roady. 2 units.

Advanced Courses

300. Appeals. This course will examine the practices and powers of American appellate courts with a particular focus on the federal courts of appeals. Topics of the course will include the purpose and role of oral argument, written briefs, and opinions. More broadly, we will consider the objective of the appellate courts including error correction, law development and legitimacy. Instructor: Staff. 2 units.

301. AIDS and the Law. This course covers the substantive law issues raised by clients with disabilities, concentrating on those with HIV/AIDS. The course is strongly recommended but not required for those intending to enroll in the AIDS Legal Project. The course is also open to students who do not intend to take the AIDS Clinic course. Instructor: McAllaster. 2 units.

302. Integrating Business, Legal, and Political Strategy. This course focuses on the strategic management of the non-market environment from the view of managers and consultants. By examining the non-market environment from the perspective of issues, interests, and institutions. It also focuses on developing frameworks that allow managers to analyze the non-market environment and practicing the deployment of those frameworks in the creation of effective non-market strategies. Three sets of topics are considered: anticipating and managing of nonmarket issues; nonmarket strategies in governmental arenas; and nonmarket strategies for globalization and international business. Faculty: de Figueiredo. 3 units.

303. American Legal History. Explores the social history of American law from the founding of the Jamestown colony through the civil rights movement. Instructor: Haagen. 3 units.

304. Big Bank Regulation. The walls between the three main sectors of finance (banking, securities and insurance) have broken down, yet at their core banks continue to be somewhat unique in their functions and the challenges they present for financial stability. This course will review this development and focus on the established and emerging regulatory systems, both domestic and international, as well as future challenges and prospects for global and domestic financial reform. Although there will be a substantial amount of statutory and some important case law, the course will be of interest to, and manageable by, graduate students in public policy, economics and business studies. Instructor: Baxter. 4 units.

305. Domestic Banking Regulation. This course analyzes the emerging framework within which federal banking agencies will regulate banks and related institutions in the aftermath of the financial crisis and the likely policy reforms emanating from Congress and the Administration. Instructor: Baxter. 3 units.

306. Corporate Crime. This course covers the contemporary practice of criminal law as applied to corporations, and their managers, and the public policy considerations associated with that practice. Coverage includes matters of substantive criminal law, criminal procedure, evidence, attorney ethics, settlement process, and sentencing. Instructor: S. Buell. 3 units.

307. Internet Law. With the emergence of the global communications network, we can access, store, and transmit vast amounts of digital information, at absurdly low cost, and without apparent regard for geographic boundaries. This digital revolution raises fundamental questions about the content, and application, of existing legal rules to novel phenomena and transactions. This course explores some of the legal and policy issues that arise as more and more conduct migrates to the network. 3 units.

308. Taxation and Global Management Decisions. Offers a general framework for thinking about tax rules affect business decisions. The framework aids in understanding the effects of taxes on business decisions, and devising effective tax planning strategies. Specific applications of the framework covered in the course include: tax aspects of mergers, acquisitions, and LBOs; tax arbitrage; compensation policy (for example, stock options, stock appreciation rights, deferred compensation, fringe benefits); taxation of competing organizational forms (for example, limited partnerships and pass-through entities); taxation of investments; and international tax planning strategies. Instructor: Sikes. 2 units.

312. Community Property. A survey of the marital property laws of Arizona, California, Idaho, Louisiana, Nevada, New Mexico, Texas, Washington, and Wisconsin, with comparison to the Spanish system. Students may concentrate their studies on the law of one of the nine states. Community Property is a bar exam subject in California and Texas. Instructor: Reppy. 2 units.

314. Community Economic Development Law. This course will address legal, business, and policy considerations that underlie efforts to enhance the economic viability of low income urban and rural communities through the development of affordable housing, and commercial real estate, as well as the stimulation of entrepreneurship. Instructor: Foster. 3 units.

315. Complex Civil Litigation. An advanced civil procedure class with a focus on the problems of large multiparty and multiform civil cases and how courts and litigants deal with them. Instructor: Ichel. 2.5 units.

317. Criminal Justice Ethics. This Criminal Justice Ethics offering will be centered on the law governing lawyers operating in the criminal justice system. It will use the relevant ABA Model Rules and Standards that apply to lawyers in the role of defense counsel, prosecutor, judge, etc. Reference will also be made to the governing North Carolina Rules of Professional Conduct when discussing North Carolina case studies and problems. Instructor: Newman. 2 units.

319. Analytical Methods. This course is designed to help all lawyers develop a more systematic way of thinking about their work. Students steering away from a technical or business curriculum will find this course important because it covers a great deal of material they will see in practice, but will probably never see again in law school. The focus will include Decision Analysis and Game Theory, Contracting, Accounting, Finance, and Economic Analysis of Law. Instructor: de Figueiredo. 2 units.

320. Water Resources Law. The course will begin with an overview survey of the general legal norms governing water allocation. First we will study the Riparian system of allocation. We will conclude that study with an examination of water resource issues facing Georgia and its neighbors. We will then examine western prior appropriation systems. We will also conclude that study with examining the dispute among users of the Colorado river. We will conclude the course by studying the evolution of control of water allocation from the courts to administrative agencies; public rights in water, including the right to use surface water for recreation and rights under the public trust doctrine; and the impact of environmental statutes on water allocation. Instructor: Longest. 2 units.

321. Innovation in the Life Science Industries. This course will explore systematically the central intellectual property and regulatory questions raised by biopharmaceutical research and development (R&D). Students will learn that innovation in biopharmaceutical R&D is particularly complex because of the mix of public and private funding that supports such R&D and because of the intricate regulatory structure that surrounds drugs, biologics, and other interventions that require FDA approval. Throughout the course, students will be expected to engage in economic and policy analysis. Prior or concurrent enrollment in a patent law course is encouraged. Although a background in the biological sciences is not required, students should be prepared to learn basic principles of molecular biology. Instructor: Rai. 3 units.

322. Copyright Law. Instruction in advanced copyright law with particular emphasis on contemporary practice, theory, and current literature in the field. Substantial attention will be paid to issues in the internet environment. Instructor: Reichman. 3 units.

323. Bankruptcy and Corporate Reorganization. Examination of legal and financial conflicts arising from public firms' use of debt; Bankruptcy Code's standards for corporate organization. Instructor: Schwarcz. 2 units.

324. Corporate Restructuring. 3 units. C-L: see Finance 658

325. Corporate Finance. The focus of this course is the legal world of corporate finance, in which business and financial risks are allocated through contractual terms. The course examines a series of issues-ranging from practical to theoretical-in connection with complex securities. Instructor: M. Bradley, Cox, or DeMott. 3 units.

326. Corporate Taxation. A study of the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code governing the tax effects of the major events that occur in the life span of a corporation, including the taxation of distributions to shareholders and the formation, reorganization, and liquidation of corporations. It is strongly recommended that students take Law 210 (Business Associations) before taking Corporate Taxation. Prerequisite: Law 255. Instructor: Zelenak. 3 units.

328. International Debt Finance. This course uses the lens of international debt finance to provide students with an advanced course in securities law, corporate law, and contract law. Instructor: Gulati. 3 units.
329. Education Law. This course will introduce students to the law and policy relating to public education (K-12) in the United States. It will examine the authority of the state to compel school attendance, regulate the content of the curriculum and control the behavior of students and their teachers. Issues of equal education opportunity will be covered. Including school desegregation, school financing, and special education for the handicapped. Students will be exposed to the interplay of local, state and federal law in the governance of public schools. Instructor: Berlin and Wettach. 2 units.

330. Criminal Law: Federal. A study of federal criminal jurisdiction and selected federal crimes, including the major offenses used to prosecute political corruption at the federal, state, and local level, drug offenses, conspiracy and organized crime (RICO), forfeiture, and the sentencing guidelines, with an emphasis on the exercise of prosecutorial discretion in the federal system. Instructor: Beale or Buell. 4 units.

333. Science Law and Policy. What are the government policies that support science? What can science contribute to law and policy? How do different agencies govern the progress of scientific discovery? How do disparate regulations impact scientific funding in controversial areas like stem cell research? How is scientific research funded? What are the rules regarding research involving individuals, or the role of academic science in national innovation? These questions and more will be explored by reviewing the history of US science policy since World War II, and looking at the interaction of law, science, and policy with an emphasis on the life sciences in the United States. Instructor: Farahany. 2 units. C-L: Public Policy Studies 590S-07, Genome Sciences and Policy 590S-07

334. Civil Rights Litigation. This course focuses on section 1983 of the United States Code, a Reconstruction-era statute that enables private parties to sue any other person who "under color" of law deprives them of the "rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the Constitution and laws" of the United States. Class participants will become familiar with the theoretical, procedural, and practical aspects of civil rights litigation, including constitutional and statutory claims, defenses and immunities, and available remedies, including attorney fees. Related U.S. Code provisions concerning discrimination in housing, contractual relations, employment, and voting are examined where relevant. Exam-based evaluation. Instructor: Miller. 3 units.

336. Mergers and Acquisitions. The course will consider corporate mergers and acquisitions, the laws governing such transactions, and the process of initiating and completing a corporate acquisition. Co- or Prerequisite: Business Associations (Law 210) M&A is not recommended for students who have already taken Deal Skills for the Transactional Lawyer (Law 777) Faculty. Hynes. 2 units.

338. Animal Law. Examination of a number of topics related to the law of animals, including various issues that arise under the law of property, contracts, torts, and trusts and estates. Instructor: Forbes. 2 units.

338O. Animal Law Outplacement. This outplacement course will provide students the opportunity to work on a variety of legal matters related to animals. This is a co-requisite or pre-requisite of LAW 338, Animal Law. Instructor: Forbes. 2 units.

339. Law and Literature. This course concentrates on possible relationships between law and literature. Instructor: Bartlett or Boyle. 3 units.

340. Estate and Gift Taxation. A study of the rules governing federal taxation of gratuitous wealth transfers. The course will examine the basic policies, history, and concepts concerning estate planning implications of transfer tax. Instructor: Shaw. 3 units.

342. Federal Courts. Ways in which federalism and the separation of powers affect federal courts and relations with other branches and the states. Instructor: C. Bradley, Siegel, or Young. 5 units.

344A. Legal Accounting and Business Responses to the Subprime Crisis. The subprime crisis has had a far-reaching impact. It has had a social impact of as-yet-untold proportions. With credit tight, problems are faced by almost every participant in the capital markets-from the borrowers, the servicers, and the banks to the security holders, the insurers, and the central banks. This course will examine these and other issues with a view for addressing the "so what" question. This is a year-long course. Instructor: Brown. 1 unit.

344B. Legal Accounting, and Business Responses to the Subprime Crisis. A continuation of LAW 344 A from the fall. This is a year-long course. Instructor: Brown. 2 units.

345. Gender and Law. Examines topics in law relating to the law's treatment of and impact on women through a series of different theoretical perspectives that produce alternative understandings of the relationships between gender and law. Theoretical perspectives include formal equality, substantive equality, dominance theory, different voice theory, autonomy, and anti-essentialism. Topics include employment, the family, domestic violence, school sports, sexual harassment, pornography, rape, insurance, affirmative action, women in legal practice, the regulation of pregnancy, sexual orientation discrimination, and the intersection of race, gender, and culture in the law. Some use of film. Evaluation is by an end-of-term exam. Instructor: Bartlett. 3 units.

346. Intellectual Capital and Competitive Strategy. In the majority of industries--and especially in R&D intensive industries like computers, semiconductors, software and biotech--competitive advantage relies critically upon a firm’s management of the knowledge and know-how underpinning its product and process innovations. This course will consider how firms should manage and protect this intellectual capital. Also taught as Strategy 339. Instructor: Cohen. 3 units.

347. Health Care Law and Policy. Surveys the legal environment of the health services industry in a policy perspective. Instructor: Richman. 3 units.

348. International Securities Regulation. This course will examine the phenomenon of the internationalization of capital markets in the last 20 years from a legal and regulatory perspective. An introductory section will look at the history, trends and issues associated with internationalization of the markets and the regulatory techniques that have developed in response to them. Several different markets will be studied, regulated and unregulated, developed economies as well as developing or emerging markets, the Euromarket, the European Union, the United States, China and others. Instructor: Jordan. 2 units.

351. Survey of Immigration Law and Policy. This course reviews the body of American Immigration and Nationality Law, beginning with a survey of the history and current shape of Immigration Law. The course will address American Immigration Law in the context of the U.S. Constitution, International law and the laws of other nations, the legislative, regulatory, and judicial process which creates, interprets, and enforces the law, and current policy concerns directing the future shape of the law. Instructor: Linnartz. 2 units.

352. International Business Transactions. This course is designed for international students and for American students with heightened interest in international transactions. Instructor: Katzenstein. 3 units.

357. Dispute Settlement in the World Trade Organization. This course analyzes how WTO member countries use the WTO multilateral system of settling trade disputes. A WTO member can bring its complaint to the WTO when another member adopts a trade policy measure that the complaining member considers to be in violation of the WTO agreements or to impair its WTO benefits. Instructor: Shimizu. 2 units.

358. Structuring Venture Capital and Private Equity Transactions. The course will focus on the design and implementation of corporate merger and acquisition transactions, including acquisitions of stock and assets of non-public corporations and acquisitions of publicly-held corporations in negotiated and hostile transactions. The course will cover federal securities law and state corporate law issues, including important forms of private ordering, such as poison pills, lock-ups, earnouts and the allocation of risks by the acquisition agreement. Relevant accounting, tax and antitrust issues and various regulatory considerations will also be covered. Business Associations is required. Instructor: Brown. 3 units.

359. Introduction to Law & Economics. This lecture class will examine economics as a framework for analyzing legal rules and institutions, principally in the common-law subjects of contracts, torts, and property. This class applies economic analysis to law; it is not a general introduction to economics for lawyers. No prior study of economics is required, but basic mathematics will be helpful. Instructor: Staff. 3 units. C-L: Economics 515

360. International Taxation. An examination of the federal income tax imposed on income earned in foreign countries either by citizens and residents of the United States or by foreign corporations that are controlled by citizens and residents of the United States. Prerequisite: Law 255 or consent of instructor. Instructor: Schmalbeck or Zelenak. 2 units.
361. International Trade Law. This course will examine why the WTO is there, how it developed from the GATT to what it is now and how it fits in the wider picture of other international economic institutions such as the World Bank and the IMF (Part I). Instructor: Brewster. 3 units.

362. Law and Economics. Rather than being a course in purely economic analysis of the law, this course will focus on the intersection between law, economics, and the study of institutions. Instructor: Bellemare. 2 units.

363. Legislation and Statutory Interpretation. A study of the theory and practice of legislation and the enforcement of statutes. Topics covered include legal theories of legislation, legislative procedure and process, the role of administration bodies and courts in the enforcement of states, and statute-making beyond the legislature. A take-home examination is required for this course. Instructor: Lemos. 3 units.

460. Negotiation. This course is intended to explore the processes of negotiation and settlement in legal and other contexts. The goal of the course is to provide students with the opportunity to analyze the social process of conflict resolution in different legal contexts and to gain insight into their own negotiation styles. Instructors: Beason, Dimond, Ellis, Vidmar, or Wallace. 3 units.

465. Patent Claim Drafting and Foundations of Patent Strategy. Focus on skills used in patent claim writing across a variety of technical fields and developed through exercises, problems, and competitions. You must be able to attend the clinic intensive weekend to enroll in this course. Instructor: Sibley. 1 unit.

493. Wrongful Convictions Clinic. The Wrongful Convictions Clinic investigates North Carolina prisoners' claims of actual innocence and wrongful conviction. Students typically work in teams of two on one inmate's case, but all students participate in "case rounds," where the facts and investigative strategy of each case are analyzed by the full group. Among other things, students meet with the inmate, read and digest trial transcripts, interview witnesses, consult with experts, and prepare investigative and legal strategies. Students are required to perform a minimum of 100 hours of legal work during the semester. You must be able to attend the clinic intensive weekend to enroll in this course. Instructor: J. Coleman and Newman. 4 units.

Seminars

500. Arbitration: Law and Practice. This course will include lecture, and discussion on the law of arbitration and exercises in practical skills on conducting arbitrations. It will also include presentation skills. Instructor: Holton. 3 units.

501. International Litigation (Seminar). An examination of problems arising in litigation brought in federal courts by or against foreign nationals. Topics will include: (1) personal jurisdiction over foreign defendants; (2) service of process abroad; (3) forum non conveniens; (4) antitrust injunctions; (5) subject matter jurisdiction in international litigation; (6) foreign sovereign immunity; (7) forum selection clauses; (8) international arbitration; (9) taking evidence abroad; and (10) recognition and enforcement of foreign judgments. Instructor: Carrington. 2 units.

502. Higher Education Law. Higher Education Law will examine the legal principles that largely shape the structure, identity, and character of American public and private colleges and universities. The course is divided into three broad subject areas. The sources of law governing each of these areas are numerous, ranging from constitutional law principles, to statutory and regulatory regimes, to principles of contract and corporate law, as applied to universities. The course will group the major issues that shape higher education law into three large areas, "Academic Freedom and Due Process”, “Equality and Identity,” and “Governance.” Instructor: Smolla. 2 units.

503. Sources of Environmental Law. This course examines the interacting changes in American ideas of nature, self, and country in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries with the aim of casting light on the twenty-first. The course will focus on climate change, and the need for sustainable, and health food systems. Earlier coursework in environmental and natural resources law is helpful but not required. Instructor: Purdy. 2 units.

505. Islam and Human Rights. The primary goal of this course is to examine the issues of human rights in Islamic ethics and Muslim Law. The course searches for any evidences in the major legal sources of Islamic law (Shari'a) that support or contradict the modern international declarations and covenants of human rights. It Reviews the framework of three different approaches to Shari'a and human rights among contemporary Muslims: conservatives, fundamentalists and Reformists. Instructor: Kadivar. 3 units. C-L: Religion 999

506. Fraud Investigation. This course will cover traditional areas of fraud investigation, and prosecution along with emerging statutory, and common law frauds. It will also cover practical issues of cooperation with government inquiry and their limits, privilege, and work product, and their waiver. Instructor: Coyne. 2 units.

508. Chinese Law and Society. This course will survey Chinese legal thought and practice in the People's Republic of China. Particular attention is focused on the relation of law to social ideals, to social change, and to politics. Topics the course will cover include, inter alia, role and status of lawyers, criminal law and procedure, human rights, civil society, media (especially the internet), intellectual property, and labor law. Some class discussions will involve interaction with students in the PRC. Prior familiarity with Chinese history or politics is unnecessary. Instructor: Ocko. 2 units.

509. Chinese Legal History. A survey of Chinese legal history that focuses on late imperial law in the Qing dynasty (1644-1911). Attention given to the legal transformations in the twentieth century. Examination of the way in which a legal system creates and reflects a society's structures and values in a mutually interactive process that constructs a particular "legal sensibility." Readings drawn from Chinese codes, cases, and "detective novels" as well as, for comparative purposes, from European and American legal history. No previous background in Chinese history is required or expected. Instructor: Ocko. 2 units.

510. Legal Interviewing and Counseling. Effective legal interviewing and counseling is foundational to the effective performance of almost all lawyering tasks. This course will provide students a framework for effective client interviewing and counseling and, like other skills-oriented courses such as Negotiations, will provide structured simulations that allow students to practice using this framework in real-world contexts. Instructor: Ward. 2 units.

511. International Criminal Law. This course will examine the jurisdiction of both national and international courts with respect to international crimes; the principal international crimes (genocide, aggression, war crimes, crimes against humanity, terrorism and torture); the ad hoc international criminal courts for the former Yugoslavia and Rwanda, the International Criminal Court and the Special Criminal Court for Sierra Leone; the general principles of international criminal law, including legality, mens rea, individual criminal responsibility, command responsibility, superior orders, necessity, immunity and statutes of limitations; and the extradition of offenders to national courts and the surrender of offenders to international courts. Pre-Requisite: International Law (LAW 275) Instructor: Morris or Helfer. 3 units.

512. Comparative Constitutional Law. The course will address the basic questions of current comparative constitutional law discourse, review structural issues (judicial review and the structure of the political process) and then concentrate on case-studies of specific dilemmas regarding rights. At the end of the course the students are expected to submit a paper that will discuss a legal issue of their choice, using comparative insights. Instructor: Barak-Erez. 2 units.

513. Legal Writing in the Context of Criminal Trial. This writing seminar tracks a serious felony trial from the pretrial preparation stage, to presentation of the evidence, closing arguments and jury verdict. In the course of such a trial an attorney has to research and compose documents ranging from discovery requests to jury questionnaires, direct and cross-examination questions for witnesses, requests for jury instructions, and closing arguments. The students will study rules of law applicable to those documents, taking into account the constitutional, evidentiary, tactical and ethical aspects of each task. Class discussions will highlight the interrelated complexities of a criminal trial and students will practice drafting documents. Instructor: Reeves. 2 units.

514. Race, Law, and Civil Rights History. This course focuses on the intertwined relationships between social activism and court cases in challenging the law's role in the creation and maintenance of racial inequality in America. Faculty: Higginbotham 2 credits. 2 units.
515. Contract Drafting for the Finance Lawyer. This course is an upper-level practical skills writing course that teaches basic contract concepts, drafting and analysis in the context of a general commercial finance transaction. The course will introduce students to business, finance and legal concepts through the use of a hypothetical loan transaction and will take an interdisciplinary approach, combining key concepts from finance, accounting and various areas of law, including the UCC, bankruptcy law, tax law and securities law, to help students bridge the gap between being a lawyer in the world of finance and a scrivener. The concepts and principles learned, however, will apply to other general commercial finance transactions. Co-requisite: Law 210, Business Associations. 2 units.

516. Mediating Disasters. One role of mediation has been to resolve conflicts arising out of disasters. This course will examine mediation efforts in the 9/11, Virginia Tech, Rhode Island nightclub, and Katrina home insurance crises. The instructors have been personally involved as mediators in each of these disasters and will discuss the publicly available readings and data as well as the details of their roles as mediators. There will be a required paper based on approved topics. Instructor: Feinberg, McGovern. 1 unit.

517. Current Issues in Law and Markets. The class meetings will be in connection with presently scheduled speakers (well-established corporate academics) who will visit the campus under the sponsorship of the Global Capital Market Center. Two weeks before the visit the students will be assigned readings related to the topic that will be the subject of the forthcoming speaker's presentation. The readings will include the paper of the presenter plus one or two other selected readings. Two days before the speaker's presentation students will submit a discussion paper comment/critique of the speaker's paper. These comments will be provided to the speaker in advance of his/her presentation. The comments so provided will also be the basis, along with classroom participation, for assessing the individual student's performance. Topics covered throughout the year most likely will include Regulatory Compliance, Odious Debt, Compensation and Pricing in the Mutual Fund Area, the Designated Underwriter Phenomenon, the Stickiness of Boilerplate Contract Terms, and Corporate Crime. Instructors: Cox and/or Gulati. 2 units.

518. Constitutional Law II: The Scope and Limits of Presidential Authority. The president is the most visible and powerful individual actor in American government. The text of the Constitution says relatively little about the powers and responsibilities of the chief executive. This course will explore the constitutional role of the president by reading primary sources, including Supreme Court and Justice Department opinions, and secondary literature on the scope of executive authority, the power of Congress to limit and direct the exercise of presidential authority, and the legal issues that arise in the conduct of foreign policy and the preservation of national security where judicial review and precedent are often limited or absent. Instr. Powell/Schroeder. 2 units.

519. Contract Drafting. Contract Drafting is an upper-level clinical course that teaches basic practical skills in contract drafting through written drafting exercises. The exercise will be done both in and outside of class, and extensive peer and instructor editing will be used draft in practice. The course will be a combination of lecture and in-class drafting and editing exercises, with an emphasis on the exercises. Instructor: Dimond or Mullem. 2 units.

520. Climate Change and the Law. This seminar will examine global climate change and the range of actual and potential responses by legal institutions, in the U.S. and internationally. In so doing it will also explore fundamental questions about legal response to looming crises using climate change as the focal point of a broader discussion. Can legal institutions deal with such mega-problems? Will doing so lead to basic changes in legal institutions? Instructor: Wiener. 2 units.

521. The Culture of American Law. American law can be viewed usefully from a variety of perspectives. In law school, we usually approach the law as a set of political norms that are articulated and enforced through formal legal institutions, or as the activities of professionals working within those institutions. Law is also a mindset, a shared "culture" of ideas, attitudes, memories, and myths that shape the lives and work of legal professionals as well as the broader society. In this course we will read critically writings on the law that have shaped or reflect the present nature of that legal culture. Our goal will be to understand more fully the nature of the law as practice and vocation through these writings. Instructor: Powell. 2 units.

522. Intersection of Immigration Policy and Civil Rights Law. This advanced seminar examines the current implications of immigration policy as it impacts the civil rights of lawful and unauthorized immigrants, citizens, and noncitizens currently residing in the United States. Instructor: Hu. 2 units.
523. Strategies in Administrative Law. This course extends our understanding of administrative law by incorporating interest groups, Congress, and the Courts into the regulatory decision-making and rule-making process. The course will begin with a review of the main topics in a standard administrative law class. It will then extend these concepts by introducing approaches from positive political and interest group theory. The structure of the course will include lectures on these concepts, classic cases drawn from administrative texts (e.g. Chevron, State Farm, Vermont Yankee.) A previous administrative law course is not required, through a willingness to analyze problems from multiple disciplines is useful. Instructor: deFigueiredo. 2 units.

524. Health and Medical Research for Lawyers. This seminar will introduce students to specific sources, and strategies for researching a variety of health and medical topics as the pertain to attorneys, including Medicare, and Medicaid regulations, medical malpractice, health insurance procedures, etc. Instructor: Brownfield or Bahnson. 1 unit.

525. Corporate Reorganization. Emphasis on the practical process of reorganizing troubled and failing businesses; taught with a practical, hands-on approach. The professor currently operates several international businesses and will draw from actual domestic and international examples. Topics in domestic and international workouts and reorganization, in and out of a court setting, include identification of troubled companies and properties; the financial structure of these companies; identification of factors leading to the company's economic trouble; and the methods of allocating risk as the company is reorganized. Covers basic bankruptcy concepts. A basic bankruptcy course is helpful but not required. Instructor: Coyne. 2 units.

526. Interracial Intimacies. The course is a close, and critical reading of the text (by the same name) by Professor Randall Kennedy (Harvard Law). Its focus will be the histories of laws that consider sex, marriage, identity, and adoption. Instructor: Holloway. 2 units.

527. Access to Medicines - IP and Global Public Health. This 2 credit seminar examines the law and policy governing the availability, price and development of medicines worldwide, providing an overview of the international legal frameworks, national regulations, and innovation policies affecting access to existing medicines and the development of future treatments for global health. It encourages students to critically examine current international law governing pharmaceutical innovation and to engage in efforts to improve incentives for the pharmaceutical sector to better meet global health needs. This seminar is open to non-law graduate students depending on space and prior experience. Instructor: Reichman. 2 units.

528. Capital Punishment. This seminar course examines the social, moral, and legal implications of capital punishment, with a particular focus on decisions of the Supreme Court since the early 1970s. Main themes of the course will include: jury selection; the allocation of decision making authority between judges and juries; the right to counsel in death cases; the role of aggravating and mitigating factors; efforts to limit the arbitrary or racially discriminatory application of the death penalty; the rules governing juveniles and the mentally ill; the federal death penalty; the influence and relevance of foreign practice; and constitutional challenges to methods of execution. Instructor: Blocher. 2 units.

529. Genetics and the Law. In this seminar, we will examine the complex ethical and legal issues arising out of the remarkable advances in the genomic sciences over the past fifty years, particularly knowledge gained from the mapping of the human genome. We will begin by examining the legal issues raised by the use of genetics in medicine, including genetic testing, reproductive technologies, genetic screening, and genetic therapy. We will then examine legal issues raised by genetic research and the commercialization of that research. In the latter part of the course, we will explore the use of genetic information in non-medical areas, such as criminal law, employment, and privacy. The primary focus of the course will be legal issues related to the human genome, (not animal or plant), with an emphasis on American law. No prerequisites. Instructor: Dame. 2 units.

530. Entertainment Law. An introduction to selected theories, statutes, and regulations (other than intellectual property law) governing principal undertakings, business transactions, and legal relationships in the entertainment industry, including publishing, the theater, television and motion pictures, music, and related fields. Prerequisite: concurrent or prior enrollment in Law 270. Instructor: Lange. 3 units.

531. Counterterrorism Law and Policy (Seminar). This seminar will provide a comprehensive overview of U.S. counterterrorism law and policy. Class topics will include: the state of terrorism and counterterrorism; the components of counterterrorism law and policy; criminal justice in counterterrorism; the law of war and the War on Terror, preventive detention (Guantanamo, Bagram, and beyond); military commissions; comparative approaches; habeas corpus; and the constitutional separation of powers in counterterrorism. Instructor: Staff. 2 units.

533. Rhetoric and Advocacy. Because modern lawyer-advocates must persuade both inside and outside the courtroom, rhetoric - the art of persuasion or, more boldly, "wisdom united with eloquence" - should guide almost all aspects of legal discourse. Students will enhance their ability to scrutinize a range of discourse using the tools of classical and modern rhetoric. Though focus will be on legal texts, sources ranging from U.S. Supreme Court opinions to literature and commercial media, from the Federalist Papers to interviews on YouTube will be used to help students develop a heightened concern for language and its delivery. Instructor: Ward. 2 units.

535. Financial Holding Companies Law. A survey of the statutory, administrative, and litigation background behind the development of insurance agency, securities brokerage, and securities underwriting powers for the banking and thrift industries, and the development of deposit-taking activities for the insurance and securities industries, culminating with an in-depth focus on the provisions in the Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act respecting electing to be a financial holding company subject to the jurisdiction of the Federal Reserve Board as the "umbrella" Federal functional regulator. Instructor: Lybecker. 2 units.

536. Constitutional Litigation and Criminal Law. This seminar will explore the relationship between theories of constitutional interpretation and the practical application of those theories in the context of litigation. The purpose of the class is to acquaint students with the major theoretical approaches to interpretation of the Constitution, such as textualism, originalism, pragmatism, and so on, then to examine how familiarity with those theories can shape and enhance advocacy in constitutional cases. Instructor: Dreeben. 2 units.

537. International Human Rights Advocacy. This course critically assesses the field of international human rights advocacy, its institutions, strategies, and key actors. It explores how domestic, regional, and global human rights agendas are set; the ethical and accountability dilemmas that arise in human rights advocacy; and human rights advocacy concerning a range of actors, including governments, international institutions, and private actors. Grade based on final paper and class participation. Instructor: Huckerby. 2 units.

538. Fixed Income Markets and Quantitative Methods. This is an advanced business course. It is designed to complement Corporate Finance, which places a greater emphasis on the equity market. The areas of focus will include: The value of money and discounted cash flow concepts, statistics, probability concepts, correlation & regression, understanding risks associated with bonds, and bonds with embedded options, and mortgages and the mortgage markets. Class taught in the Law School. Instructor: Brown. 3 units.

539. Ethics in Action. The class will function as an ethics committee considering current issues and ethics inquiries based upon actual disputes. The participants, working in small groups, will draft detailed ethics opinions that the full class will consider, revise, and the like. Instructors: Metzloff or Mine. 2 units.

540. From Bickel to Balkin: Readings in Modern Constitutional Theory. This three-credit seminar will consider a variety of theories of U.S. constitutional interpretation and change. The topics to be addressed will include background issues such as various conceptions of constitutional authority, the relationship between constitutional law and politics, and concerns about the "countermajoritarian difficulty," as well as specific constitutional theories such as those associated with John Hart Ely, Ronald Dworkin, and Bruce Ackerman. In addition to considering the role of the judiciary in constitutional interpretation, there will be a focus on how U.S. constitutional law is interpreted and can potentially evolve outside of the courts. 3 units.

541. Non-Profit Organizations. Consideration of state and federal regulation of nonprofit entities, with particular attention to charitable organizations. Qualification for exemption from taxes will be examined, along with regulation of lobbying and fund-raising activities, treatment of charitable contributions, unrelated business income taxes, and the special regulatory framework governing private foundations. Instructor: Schmalbeck. 3 units.

542. Financial Services: Mutual Funds and Other Asset Managers. The financial services industry is now commonly viewed as including a number of discrete categories: consumer finance (credit cards, personal loans, and transaction processing); mortgage banking; commercial finance; investment banking; merchant banking/venture capital; insurance underwriting and agency; and asset management (brokerage, investment advice, investment companies, trust activities, and pension plan management and administration). Seminar will review and discuss the robust regulatory scheme for mutual funds; the investment management aspects of the federal bank regulatory
543. International Law and International Relations Theory. One of the most interesting and productive veins of recent international law scholarship involves interdisciplinary work between political scientists, economists, and legal academics. This seminar will explore some of this scholarship, including articles discussing the institutional design of international organizations, two-level game analysis (where bargaining takes place simultaneously in international negotiations and domestic politics), and decentralized approaches to enforcing international law. Instructor: Brewster. 2 units.

544. African American Lives in the Law. This seminar focuses on biographical and autobiographical writings in a historical examination of the role of the individual in the American legal process. We will seek to understand how specific African Americans (as lawyers, judges, and litigants) made a difference -- how their lives serve as a "mirror to America" -- and also to understand the ways personal experience informs individual perspective on the law and justice. Instructor: E. Higginbotham. 2 units.

546. International Law of Armed Conflict. This seminar will examine the international law of armed conflict, and it focuses on the jus in bello context. Students will examine the key concepts of the law of armed conflict, and explore their practical application in various contexts. Case studies will be examined in conjunction with the topics covered. The historical context for law of armed conflict agreements, the status of conflicts, combatants, and civilians, targeting, rules of engagement, and war crimes, are included among the topics the class will address. Students will be encouraged to relate legal and interdisciplinary sources in order to better understand the multi-faceted interaction between law and war. Instructor: Dunlap. 2 units.

547. Criminal Justice Policy: Crime, Politics, and the Media. Focus on various changes in criminal justice policy that occurred in the 1980s and 1990s (for example, changes in sentencing law and policy, increased incarceration rates, and the "war on drugs") and identification of the factors that brought about those changes. To what degree were these changes responses to changes in the rates and types of crimes experienced in the United States? To what degree were these changes prompted by political campaigns and strategies, or by a media produced sense of crisis? Readings include legal materials which will probe and analyze statutory and administrative changes, as well as interdisciplinary readings. Each student will prepare a research paper. Instructor: Beale. 2 units.

548S. Courts, Wars, Legacies of Wars. The impact of international wars, international policing, and domestic wars relating to national security on the United States courts of the Fourth Circuit (Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North and South Carolina), and the role played by these courts in the Mid-Atlantic South from the American Founding into the Cold War Era. The American Constitution, laws, and treaties of the United States, and principles of admiralty and international law which figure in assigned published and unpublished judicial decisions of the region's United States district and old circuit courts and of the post-1891 Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals. Also taught as Political Science 238S and History 255AS. Instructor: Fish. 3 units.

549. Fundamental Skills for the Practice of Law. The practice of law primarily involves understanding and resolving clients' legal issues. While doctrinal courses teach the fundamental legal principles lawyers need to know, this course focuses on how lawyers use that knowledge to assess legal issues and advise clients. The primary objective is to simulate the practice of law, particularly as a young associate would likely experience it, whether in a large law firm or a small office. The curriculum focuses on two areas: 1) identifying the legal issues rising from a fact pattern; and 2) client communication. Students will track their "billable hours", teaching them to be efficient and cognizant of the time they spend on each issue. Instructor: Mock. 2 units.

550. Tax Law Research for Attorneys. This advanced research seminar will introduce students to concepts of tax research and will provide an in-depth look at the sources of tax authorities, and how to find them. Instructor: Most. 1 unit.

551. Environmental Disaster in Japan: The Minamata Story. Among Japan's many environmental disasters, Minamata stands out. Minamata disease, a disease caused by mercury poisoning brought on by the intensive industrial activities of a chemical company and its disregard of the surrounding environment and communities, represents a tragic by product of Japan's push for industrial development. The events in Minamata have deeply affected the course of development for Japanese environmental law and policy ever since. This course intends to present and analyze the three distinctive approaches taken in response to the Japanese environmental tragedy, namely, litigation, administrative relief, and political settlement. Faculty: Fujikura. 1 unit.

552. The Study of Judicial Behavior. This course will examine the questions of how judges behave and why -- the factors that determine judicial behavior. In conducting this examination, we will draw from a wide variety of scholarship on the question of judicial behavior, including political science, economics, sociology, and law. We will look at a wide variety of court systems, including the U.S. Supreme Court, the U.S. Circuit Courts of Appeals, the state courts of last resort, and the appellate courts of other countries. This is a yearlong course. Instructor: Gulati, Knight, Levi. Variable credit.

554. Deceit and Betrayal: Perspectives on Fraud and Judiciary Obligation. This seminar focuses on contemporary applications of the law of fraud and fiduciary obligation, including situations in which an actor deceives the beneficiary of a fiduciary obligations owed by the actor. Instructor: DeMott. 2 units.

555. International Environmental Law. 2 units. C-L: Environment 855

556. Second Amendment: History, Theory and Practice. The Supreme Court’s decisions in District of Columbia v. Heller and McDonald v. City of Chicago have ushered in a whole new era of Second Amendment theory, litigation, and politics. Current events keep issues of firearms, gun violence, gun safety, and self-defense constantly in the news. This seminar will explore the Second Amendment and the various state constitutional analogs historically, theoretically, and pragmatically. Students will be introduced to the historical and public policy materials surrounding the Second Amendment, the regulatory environment concerning firearms, and the political and legal issues pertaining to firearm rights-enforcement and policy design. Instructor: Miller. 2 units.

558. U.S. Constitutional Law. This course will explore several foundational topics in U.S. Constitutional theory. Those topics include the nature, and limits of constitutional reasoning, theories of constitutional interpretation, the role of non-judicial actors in determining constitutional meaning, the politics of constitutional adjudication, and mechanisms of constitutional change. Instructor: N. Siegel and Young. 2 units.

559. Latin American Business Law. This course focuses on the regulation of business in Latin America, and the most important differences between Civil Law tradition, and the Common Law. The course covers some of the main issues that may arise in the practice of law dealing with Latin America. Instructor: Kielmanovich. 1 unit.

560. Sales and Value Added Tax Law. This course covers the legal frameworks and detailed technical issues related to value-added taxes (VAT) and sales tax systems. Comparisons are drawn between the VAT and sales taxes, and among the tax legislation provisions used in various countries. Aside from the basic tax structures, the course also highlights innovations in VATs and the treatment of special sectors such as the real property, financial, agriculture and public interest sectors. Approaches for dealing with the application of VATs and sales taxes in the context of federations and common markets are also considered. Instructor: Barnes. 2 units.

562. Sentencing and Punishment. This seminar will focus on the process of imposing sentences in criminal cases, administering punishment, and attempting rehabilitation of convicted criminals. The course will first provide background regarding the purposes of punishment and the history of mandatory sentences, presumptive sentences, and sentencing guidelines, and focus on some of these issues in more detail through the use of an expert guest lecturers and a tour of the Federal Correctional Facility in Butner, NC. Students will be expected to participate meaningfully in the lectures, guest speakers and field trip, and produce a research paper on a related topic. Instructor: Dever. 2 units.

563. Jewish Law. Study of factors (cultural and juristic) in the development of Jewish law, especially in the Talmudic and medieval periods; relationship between "religious" and "civil" law; the legal codes and the decision-making process of the rabbinic courts. Some legal texts (in translation) will be submitted to intensive examination. Instructor: Golding. 2 units.

564. What Do Universities Do?. Are universities the engine of economic growth, the mechanism for reproducing the ruling class, or just a summer camp with classes attached? Although we might think we know all about universities because we attend one or work at one, chances are our perspectives are limited or biased. This seminar explores what goes on in universities and what the consequences are for students and society. Instructor: Clotfelter. 3 units.

565. Religion and a Liberal Democracy. Religious practice complicates liberal democratic theory in ways more complex than legal frameworks like “establishment” and “free exercise” are able to capture. Illiberal practices, theological justifications, and cultural differences challenge core tenets of liberalism like autonomy, equality, and public reason. These tensions have manifested in a variety of forms across American law and culture, ranging from religious groups that desire to remain insulated from the effects of culture to those that would control the institutions of power in order to transform them. Each of these groups raises legal, philosophical, and theological challenges. This course explores these challenges and the ways in which they unfold within the American democratic. Instructor: Staff. 2 units.

567. Wrestling with Texts: Communities, Practices, and Traditions. This cross-disciplinary course, will read primary texts, and interpretive theory from three different hermeneutical traditions: Islamic Law and Theology, Christian Theology, and the U.S. legal tradition. Instructors: Powell, McClintock, Fulkerson, Moosa. 2 units.

568. Justice, Law, and Commerce in Islam. History and schools of Islamic jurisprudence; Islamic legal reasoning; approaches to ethics and procedural justice, the ethical regulation of commerce, including a detailed study of pertinent issues in Islamic law. Also taught as Religion 254. Instructor: Moosa. 3 units.

571A. Seminar U.S. Supreme Court. Students will become experts in the legal, and personal backgrounds of their Justices, and they will write research papers on the jurisprudences of their Justices. Students will also vote on nine cases on the docket during the current Term, and they will write majority, dissenting, and concurring opinions in those cases. Instructor: N. Siegel. 3 units.

571B. U.S. Supreme Court. This is a continuation of the year long course. Open only to those who are enrolled in 571A. Offered in the Spring. Instructor: N. Siegel. 2 units.

573. Criminal Law in The Armed Forces. Examines the practice of military justice in the U.S. and its sources of authority under the Constitution, the Uniform Code of Military Justice (UCMJ), and the Manual for Courts-Martial (MCM). Focus on the history of military justice in the U.S.; the UCMJ as enacted by Congress and as amended since 1951; types of crimes proscribed by Congress in the UCMJ; military jurisdiction; the Military Rules of Evidence (MREs); military trial practice and procedure; the organization, composition, and function of the service appellate courts and the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Armed Forces; the military lawyer and organization of the service Judge Advocate General departments in the Department of Defense. Instructors: Dunlap. 2 units.

574A. Perspectives on Employment Discrimination. This course will examine issues at the frontiers of employment discrimination law. Among the topics will be discrimination in high-level employment such as law firms, executive positions, and academia, recent developments in the law and theory of stereotyping, identity performance, and subconscious bias, inquiry into the different manifestations of employment discrimination at both the high and the low end of the pay scale. This is a year-long course. Instructor: Gulati. 1 unit.

576. The Story of the Case: Trial Lawyers and Case Theory. This course will discuss famous trials, and examine how advocates formulate "the story of the case." Each student will choose a case about which to write a term paper involving significant original research and writing. During the writing process, students will meet and confer with the professor to discuss the proposed topic and to review drafts. Class discussion on the chosen topics will be given. The final paper will be a minimum of thirty pages. Instructor: Tigar. 3 units.

578. Musical Composition, Borrowing and the Law: From Mahler to Mashups. This seminar will bring together law students with graduate-level composers and musicologists to investigate how copyright law shapes the conditions of creativity in music, and how changes in musical style in turn influence the limits that the law sets on musical creation. Instructors: Boyle, Jenkins, or Kelley. 3 units.

579. Mass Torts. An integrated and in-depth look at combination of issues raised by complex mass tort lawsuits; substantive tort law; civil procedure; litigation strategy; lawyer-client relationships; economics of settlement, ethics, judicial role, societal impacts. Exploration of eight to ten celebrated mass tort lawsuits such as Buffalo Creek disaster, asbestos, Dalkon Shield, Agent Orange, Woburn leukemia case, tobacco smoking, silicone breast implants, electromagnetic fields, medical malpractice. Readings will emphasize historical accounts that put litigation in context, as well as judicial opinions and scholarly commentary. Instructors: Metzloff, McGovern, or Wiener. 2 units.

580. Religious Authority in a Secular State. This course will explore the relationship between private law that governs religious minority communities and secular law designed to govern all citizens. Instructor: Richman. 2 units.

Curriculum 78
582. National Security Law. A study of presidential and congressional national security powers under the Constitution and case law; the domestic effect of international law; the use of military force in international relations; investigating terrorism and other national security threats, with a focus on surveillance and other counterterrorism measures; prosecuting terrorists in the federal courts; detention and trial of terrorists by military commissions; the domestic use of the military in law enforcement; public access to national security information in civil litigation; and restraints on disclosing and publishing national security information. Instructor: Dunlap. 3 units.

583. Globalization of the Family. This course will address a number of issues in which globalization plays a role in family life, such as the definition of marriage and family, property rights, the requirements for divorce, same-sex relationships, marriage tourism, fertility tourism, adoption, and intercountry child custody disputes. The seminar will examine a particular topic through the lens of the law of a given culture or country, so that students can focus closely on the substantive issues. In addition, the seminar will explore questions of comparative law and conflict of laws as students consider whether and how one nation should honor the family law of another. Instructors: Bradley and Michaels. 2 units.

584. Genetics and Reproductive Technologies. This course will examine the complex interrelationship between legal, political, ethical, and social issues shaping the intersection of genetics, reproductive technologies and reproductive rights. Course will be graded based upon papers and class participation. Instructor: Farahany. 2 units. C-L: Genome Sciences and Policy 584

585. Philanthropy, Voluntarism, and Not-for-Profit Management. An examination of the role and functioning of the not-for-profit sector in relation to both the public sector and the private for-profit sector in dealing with significant social problems. Also taught as Public Policy Studies 280S. Instructor: Fleishman. 3 units.

586. Globalization and Domestic Courts. This course will look at the special role international law has for domestic courts, including the question of what effects decisions by the International Court of Justice have, and to what extent domestic courts act as enforcers of international law (the theory of dédoublement fonctionnel). Instructor: Michaels. 2 units.

587. Race and the Law. This seminar will explore the historical and contemporary treatment of race in the United States by both the courts and the legislature. The seminar will employ an interdisciplinary approach to examining the social and political forces that have and continue to contribute to the development of legal doctrine in the areas of education, employment, health care, interracial sex and marriage, and public accommodations, among other things. Throughout, the seminar will explore the definition of race, the intersection of race and gender, the interplay of race and class, the juxtaposition of various racial groups, and the utility of a biracial dichotomy in a multiracial and multi-ethnic society. Instructor: Jones. 2 units.

588. Responsibility in Law and Morals. Investigation of the relationship between responsibility in the law and moral blameworthiness; excuses and defenses; the roles of such concepts as act, intention, motive, ignorance, and causation. Instructor: Golding. 2 units.

589. Race, Schools, and the Equal Protection Clause. This seminar will analyze the U.S. Supreme Court's evolving interpretation of the Equal Protection Clause from the time of the ratification of the Fourteenth Amendment after the Civil War to the race-conscious student assignment cases currently before the Court. Instructor: N. Siegel. 3 units.

590. Risk Regulation in the United States, Europe, and Beyond. This seminar pursues an advanced, integrated analysis of the law, science and economics of societies' efforts to assess and manage risks of harm to human health, safety and the environment. The course will examine the regulation of a wide array of risks, such as those from medical care and drugs, food, automobiles, drinking water, air pollution, energy, global climate change, and terrorism. Across these diverse contexts, the course will explore the treatment of several basic issues confronting any regulatory system: risk assessment, risk management (including the debate over "precaution" versus benefit-cost analysis), risk evaluations by experts vs. the public, and risk-risk tradeoffs. Instructor: Wiener. 2 units.

592. Telecommunications Law. This course will comprehensively examine the regulation of electronic communications in the United States and the constitutional constraints on such regulation. The course will focus on the legal framework for both wired and wireless electronic communications, such as communications via computer networks (e.g., the Internet), telephone, cable, broadcast, and satellite. Instructor: Benjamin. 3 units.
593. Sexuality and the Law. The law governing sexual orientation is in a rapid state of flux, as the applications of federal and state constitutions, statutes, and common law are being reexamined in light of changes in societal attitudes toward sexual orientation. Legislative and judicial activity in this area is presently at its historical peak. Although the legal issues surrounding same-sex marriage are currently a much debated topic, our seminar would cover other issues as well, including employment issues, privacy, free speech/association, public accommodations, asylum/immigration and military issues, which are especially timely. Instructor: Sobel-Read. 2 units.

594. Custom and Law. This seminar is a component of the Duke Project on Custom and Law and will focus on the relationship between custom and law. One goal of the seminar is greater understanding of how custom can support or influence the development of law. Instructor: C. Bradley and Gulati. 1 unit.

595. Faces of the Law. This course will explore the place of law in the history of culture and ideas, with special emphasis on the American experience. The jointly taught seminar will explore how law has been understood in intellectual tradition. On one hand, we will examine major ways that lawyers and jurists have explained or challenged law's authority: tradition, natural-law theory, positivism, and the radical critique of law. On the other hand, we will consider how observers of law from outside -- those concerned mainly with understanding other areas of life, such as politics, culture, or philosophy -- have understood law's place in the larger field of human activity. This is not a specialized course in political theory, but rather a course for intellectually engaged lawyers; nonetheless, students should expect to read challenging texts with a high level of care and attention to detail. Faculty: Brodhead, Levi, or Purdy. 2 units.

596. Sovereignty. This seminar will consider the constitutional implications of U.S. participation in a variety of international institutions, such as the United Nations, the International Court of Justice, the World Trade Organization, arbitration under the North American Free Trade Agreement, international environmental institutions, and various arms control frameworks. Instructor: Bradley. 2 units.

598. Environmental Law in Historical Perspective. Environmental lawyers will increasingly need to use history-based arguments in defending environmental legislation against constitutional challenge. This seminar will explore useable legal history concerning air and water pollution, the regulation of wetlands, rivers, forests and coastal zones, and conservation of wildlife, fuel, and other resources. Instructor: J. Hart. 2 units.

599. The Federal Prosecutor: A View from the Trenches. This seminar will explore the prosecutor's role in federal and state criminal proceedings, from investigation to plea negotiations to trial and sentencing. Among the issues we will examine are the prosecutor's obligations under the U.S. Constitution and state rules of professional responsibility. Those obligations include restraints on contract with represented parties, use of the grand jury, and statements to the media, as well as discovery obligations and conduct during trial. A special emphasis will be placed on decisions and ethics of the prosecutor in the investigation and prosecution of corporate fraud. Instructor: Duffy and Wheeler. 2 units.

702. Alternative Dispute Resolution. This course surveys the most common types of alternative dispute resolution processes: negotiation, mediation, arbitration, and court-annexed and governmental-agency ADR - all of which have gained wide-spread use as alternatives to traditional litigation. The survey encompasses three perspectives; the advocate's perspective in choosing the most appropriate ADR process in light of the different advantages and disadvantages of the various processes; the third-party neutral's perspective in facilitating or fashioning a just resolution of the parties' dispute; and the policy maker's perspective in utilizing ADR as a more efficient and cost effective substitute for traditional adjudication. Instructor: McGovern. 2 units.

704. Elder Law. This course focuses on the fundamental issues in elder law. The topics range from broad ethical issues (representation, capacity) to an examination of specific laws and practices to assist clients in planning for retirement, possible incapacity, and death. Tax rules governing trusts and estates play important roles in such planning; we will draw on relevant tax laws as needed. Specific topics covered include: special needs trusts and other planning tools for incapacity; guardianships; wills and trusts; Medicare and Medicaid; health care decision-making; long-term care; and social security/income support. Trusts and Estates and Health, Law, and Policy are useful (but not required) prerequisites. Instructor: Lukens. 2 units.

705. Bioethics and Health Law. Examination of the complex ethical and legal issues that arise in medical care and research, particularly issues arising from advances in biomedical technology. Focus on a variety of bioethical concerns in three general medical contexts: clinical care, medical research, and genetic science. The seminar concludes with a look at critiques of the current bioethics model, and a discussion of health and human rights. Instructor: Dame. 2 units.

706. Complexity, Law and Public Policy. This seminar will take a broad view of the law as a complex adaptive system and explore the ways in which complexity theory might enrich our understanding of legal development and the formulation and application of public policy. The seminar will introduce the field of complexity theory, its general principles, and the ways in which it can be applied to regulatory law and public policy. Instructor: Baxter. 2 units.

707. Statutory Interpretation Colloquium. The objective of this course is to introduce students to important issues concerning the theory and doctrine of statutory interpretation, primarily through exposure to cutting edge legal scholarship. The seminar will feature bi-weekly presentations of works-in-progress by leading scholars of statutory interpretation, legislation, and administrative law. Instructors: Charles and Lemos. 2 units.

708. The Conversation of Law and History. This cross-listed seminar uses primary and secondary material to explore issues at the intersection of law and history. With faculty and students from both the Law School and the History Department, we will consider how historians examine law and how lawyers and judges use history. We will be interested in how each can learn from the other, but also in the limits of the disciplines’ capacity to communicate, given the differences in their goals and their materials. We will ask law students and historians to collaborate in working through materials and problems. Likely topics include legal treatments of slavery, constitution-making, judicial review, marriage, and ideas of nature. This course will span both Fall and Spring semesters, one credit earned each semester. The final grade will be received in the Spring. Faculty. Purdy, Edwards. 1 unit.

710. Derivatives. Summary of major topics covered and areas of major emphasis: Selected practices and laws relating to the derivative markets, focusing on exchange-traded and over-the-counter transactions and their participants. Topics include analysis of applicable securities, commodities, and insolvency authorities, business and economic objectives, transaction structures and cash flows, hedge funds and structured finance vehicles, and industry documentation. The goals of this course are to expand students’ awareness and understanding of the large-scale and diverse derivative markets, the products offered and market participants, the interplay of participants’ business, economic, and regulatory objectives, and the important public interest and legal and regulatory framework ensuring the integrity, usefulness, and efficiency of these markets. Instructor: Krawiec. 3 units.

711. Law and War in 20th Century America. This course will address the experience of war in the 20th century and its impact on American law, particularly the relationship between national security and individual rights. The course will explore the way the practice of war and ideas of warfare have affected American law. Instructor: Staff. 2 units.

713. Comparative Media and IT Law. This seminar will explore current issues of free speech, privacy, and copyrights in the areas of Media and IT law in Japan, and discuss the characteristic in comparison with those in the US. After introducing the basic structure of the Japanese legal system, the seminar will focus on the constitutional right of freedom of expression, defamation and privacy invasion by mass media, illegal or harmful content on the internet, disclosure of government information, data privacy, and copyright infringement through P2P file-sharing. The grade will be based on attendance, participation, a presentation, and a research paper (min. 15 pages, typed, double-spaced). Instructor: Yamaguchi. 1 unit.

714. Big Time College Athletics. This seminar will examine a large but seldom-studied part of American higher education: participation in highly commercialized intercollegiate football and basketball competition. It may also examine "non-revenue" sports competition, but the focus will be on the two big revenue sports. Instructor: Clotfelter. 3 units.

716. Cybersurveillance Policy and Privacy Law. This advanced seminar examines the current implications of post-9/11 cybersurveillance policy and dataveillance, or data surveillance as a result of date mining and database tracking technologies. A key inquiry of the seminar will be how database technologies developed for civil law or corporate purposes can be used for criminal law and national security purposes, and how this merger has led to the growing normalization of surveillance protocols. This seminar will also explore the preexisting statutes protecting electronic communications and digital data, as well as Fourth Amendment protections against the unreasonable search and seizure of data. Instructor: Hu. 2 units.

717. Comparative Constitutional Design. 2 units. C-L: see Political Science 719S
720. Advanced Copyright Digital Technology. Explores the legal and policy issues surrounding the protection and use of copyrighted works in a digital, networked world. Topics include the applications and circumvention of technological protection measures, Internet service provider liability, peer-to-peer technology, fair use, and "sharing." Covers recent amendments to the law, including the Digital Millennium Copyright Act, and litigation, such as the Napster, MP3.com, and DeCSS cases, as well as current legislative proposals. Prerequisite: Copyright Law (Law 322) or Intellectual Property (Law 270). Instructor: Dow. 2 units.

722. Law and the Global Economy. The goal of this course is to provide students with a broad overview of how international rules shape global transactions. It will serve as a foundation in international law for students who never plan to take another international law course but also serve a roadmap of the possibilities for international law study (and careers) for students who want to do more with international law. One of the goals of the course is to demonstrate that international law is relevant to almost every area of practice today — from divorce and adoptions to corporate mergers to securities law litigation. Instructor: Brewster. 3 units.

724. IP, Public Domain and Free Speech. This advanced seminar examines current intellectual property debates, focusing particularly on digital copyright. Its goal is to analyze issues of academic interest but also considerable practical importance. Readings and projects will explore tensions between intellectual property law and freedom of expression, as well as challenges posed by new technologies, in both the US and EU. Instructor: Jenkins. 3 units.

727. Current Issues in Constitutional Interpretation. This seminar will examine important constitutional issues that have arisen in recent Supreme Court cases and will use those cases as a vehicle for considering broader questions of constitutional interpretation and Supreme Court practice, such as theories of interpretation and the role of stare decisis. Among the issues that may be studied are the Second Amendment right to keep and bear arms, the Sixth Amendment rights to counsel and trial by jury, the Eighth Amendment right to be free of cruel and unusual punishment, and the right to petition for a writ of habeas corpus. Instructor: Alito. 1 unit.

728. Topics in Employment Discrimination Law. This course explores foundational concepts in statutory law and doctrine with an emphasis on the critical roles that economic analysis and evidence play in litigation strategies. Main themes covered include: the evolution of disparate impact law and its future after Ricci v. DeStefano; the use of statistical evidence in employment discrimination litigation; the jurisprudence of the Americans with Disabilities Act and the Age Discrimination in Employment Act; and frontiers in workplace discrimination law. Instructor: Staff. 2 units.

730. Human Rights Advocacy. This practice-based seminar is designed around four intersecting aspects of human rights advocacy, to encourage critical reflection on the principles and practice, and the strategic objectives of human rights lawyering. Faculty: Hurwitz 4 credits. 4 units.

731. Legal Strategy. A theoretical and practical approach to appreciating the complexities of legal strategy. The course commences with eight hours of lecture and discussion on a variety of analytical methodologies for addressing strategy- economic, psychological, game theoretic. The remaining twenty seven hours focuses on specific legal problems with intense role-playing to reinforce the application of these analytic tools in a realistic setting. The role-playing will be supervised and reviewed by practitioners who are experts in the relevant legal problems. Instructors: Gilbert, Lewis, and McGovern. 2 units.

736. Advanced Issues in Children's and Family Law. In depth research and discussion on topics related to children's and/or family law. Possible topics include child development and its implications for law and policy; child abuse; child welfare, including childcare and its implications for women; alternative reproductive technologies and their implications for women, children and culture; race and ethnicity issues in the dev. of law and policy re: children and families; the response of law to non-traditional families; a study of the effect of divorce on society and law. Students will complete at least one principal paper, and be responsible for class leadership and participation. Please visit the Law curriculum page for course specifics. Instructor: Staff. 2 units.

741. Selected Topics in National Security and the Law of Armed Conflict. The 1-credit advanced seminar will bring together six Duke Law students with six senior attorneys in the national security and law of war divisions of the Israeli Defense Forces and Ministry of Justice to examine contemporary developments in the law of armed conflict. The seminar will focus on key areas of national security law and the law of armed conflict in which existing law is indeterminate and contested, with particular attention to conflicts involving non-state actors. The developments of the past decade will be considered in a historical and comparative perspective. Instructor: Morris. 1 unit.
742. Mergers and Acquisitions: Strategic Planning and Implementation. The course will focus on the design and implementation of corporate merger and acquisition transactions, including acquisitions of stock and assets of non-public corporations and acquisitions of publicly-held corporations in negotiated and hostile transactions. The course will cover federal securities law and state corporate law issues, including important forms of private ordering, such as poison pills, lock-ups, earnouts and the allocation of risks by the acquisition agreement. Relevant accounting, tax and antitrust issues and various regulatory considerations will also be covered. Business Associations is required. Instructor: Brown. 3 units.

747. Developing the Scholarship Agenda. This course is to learn how to produce original legal scholarship, and develop a focused agenda for scholarly research in the law. Seminar discussion of methodologies in scholarship integrated with colloquium in which established scholars present, and discuss new research. Instructors: Blocher and S. Buell. 3 units.

748. Strategies in Employment Discrimination Practice. Strategies in Employment Discrimination Practice. This seminar applies the legal principles studied in Employment Discrimination Law (Law 232) to a semester-long, simulated practice problem. The goal of the seminar is to reinforce legal concepts studied in the basic course, and to introduce through task-oriented exercises the real-world dimensions of an employment discrimination practice, including decisions about which cases to take, what facts must be gathered, what steps must precede the filing of a lawsuit, and what legal theory or theories should be pursued. Students will engage in interviews, negotiations and strategy sessions, and will prepare various file memos, letters, and an agency complaint. The course is co-taught with an experienced practitioner. Students must either have previously taken, or be concurrently enrolled in, Law 232. Instructor: Bartlett. 1 unit.

749. Strategies in Commercial Transactions. This seminar takes selected legal issues from the course, Commercial Transactions, and places them in a setting in which students make strategic decisions that involve the weighing of legal, business, ethical and human relations considerations. As in the Commercial Transactions course, the emphasis in the seminar will be on debt arrangements, security devices, payment systems and bankruptcy planning. The goal of the seminar is to underscore how legal principles interact with other non-legal considerations in the resolution of business problems. You must be registered for LAW 215 to enroll in this course. Instructor: Merrell or Weistart. 1 unit.

752. International Investment Law. The purpose of this seminar is to explore this legal face of globalization by looking at how international law is implicated in the protection of FDI, the related international case law with special emphasis in the investment chapter of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) and the evolution of different debates and criticism of the ideas behind the system for the promotion and protection of FDI. Instructor: Maupin. 2 units.

753. Law and Literature: Race and Gender. This seminar uses contemporary fiction to explore the intersection between literary and legal studies, with a particular focus on race and gender. Through literature and some film, the seminar examines the role of law in the structure of conflict, personal relationships, and social arrangements, with attention to privilege, perspective, and voice. Class discussion will layer the readings from each week, building on the materials previously read and discussed. Authors include Margaret Atwood, Richard Wright, Kazuo Ishiguro, Aravind Adiga, Toni Morrison, Ursula Hegi, and Nella Larsen. Instructors: Bartlett and Holloway. 3 units.

754. Intellectual Property Transactions. Patents, trademark, copyrights, and trade secrets each connote the ability to reserve to the holder the right to practice the invention, apply the mark, copy the expression, or retain the secret, respectively. However, simple retention of these rights or absolute conveyance of these rights to others may not maximize the holder's value in the property. Greater utility may be achieved by sharing some of the rights, while retaining others. This is the realm of intellectual property licensing. This course will survey key issues related to licensing each form of intellectual property, including the rationale behind the issues and alternative means of approach. The course will then touch on considerations of international licensing, licensing to the U.S. government, antitrust, and the non-negotiated license. Finally, the course will consider open licensing practices as found in open source software and the Creative Commons. Prerequisite: Intellectual Property. Instructor: Webbink. 2 units.

757. The Takings Doctrine. The Takings Clause of the Fifth Amendment governs two enormously controversial topics in Constitutional case law: overt physical takings of private land for "public use," and regulations of private property, for a variety of public purposes ranging from protection to historical preservation, which give rise to "regulatory takings." Instructor: J. Hart. Variable credit.
760. A Practitioner's Guide to Labor Law and Employment. This course is designed to provide a practical overview of the main labor and employment law issues that arise in the U.S. workplace. Using a variety of approaches to instruction, and including mock exercises, outside speakers, writing exercises (such as drafting communications to government agencies or corporate clients), and drawing from current developments in the law, instructors familiarize the student with basic concepts underlying the broad range of labor and employment law. Students will explore issues from multiple perspectives including the employee, the employer, the union, and compliance enforcers. Students should have taken the basic labor law course or have a familiarity with the National Labor Relations Act and Title VII of the Civil Rights Act. Instructor: Bowling and McCalley. 2 units.

765. Introduction to Technology in the Law Office. Technology is changing the practice of law in all fields and venues. This course will provide you with the theoretical and practical foundations to understand these changes, and to positively impact your firm's or organization's responses to such challenges. Instructor: Miller and Behrens. 2 units.

766. Private Law Beyond the State. If Globalization puts the dominant role of the State into question, private law must be affected as well. This seminar will look to the past, present, and the future of the relationship between private and the state. Instructor: Michaels. 2 units.

769. Social Science Research and the Supreme Court. This course will focus on social-scientific research on the U.S. Supreme Court. Primary emphasis will be placed on two issues. First it will analyze the various factors that enter into explanations of Supreme Court decision-making. The class will also assess the implications of Supreme Court decisions for politics and policy. Instructor: Knight. 2 units.

770. Law and Rationality. This course will survey an emerging field often labeled as "behavioral law and economics" that aims to both challenge as well as supplement conventional analysis. The course will discuss some of the new major contributions of social sciences to legal analysis in areas such as criminal law, property, contracts, procedure and torts. Instructor: Guttel. 2 credits. 2 units.

771. Advanced Torts. The course aims, together with providing a broader understanding of the fundamental principles of liability, to show the interaction between legal doctrine, and the theories behind it. Topics included will be the choice between liability regimes, the causation puzzle, the duty to rescue, incentives to sue or settle, and the rules concerning damages. Instructor: Christie. 2 units.

773. Research Methods in Business Law. This one credit seminar in advanced legal research will introduce students to specific sources and strategies for researching a variety of business law topics, including corporations, securities, and commercial bankruptcy and reorganization. Instructor: Scott. 1 unit.

774. Taboo Trades and Forbidden Exchanges. This class examines exchanges and transactions that are traditionally taboo, and sometimes illegal. What constitutes a taboo trade is culturally dependent, change over time and across cultures. Typical taboo trades in modern western societies include organs, blood, babies, sexual relations, votes for money, and a wide range of other issues. In other cultures and other times however, humans were sold as a matter of course, whereas land was considered inalienable. Instructor: Krawiec. 2 units.

775. Corporate Ethics and Governance. This course is a one-credit seminar taught in two-hour blocks that focuses on the increasingly important role played by the corporate ethics office within a corporation's governance structure. As we have learned from a series of corporate scandals starting with Enron and continuing through the financial crisis of 2008, despite the emphasis placed on corporate ethics and good governance practices required by legislation such as SOX and the recent Dodd-Frank Act, much work remains to be done. The course is designed to be highly interactive, and students in the course will examine the role played by the corporate ethics office to ensure proper board oversight of a corporation. Instructor: Merrell. 1 unit.

776. Supreme Court Litigation. This course will focus on a lawyer's role in the decision making process of the United States Supreme Court. That Court itself plays a unique role in our legal system to identify and resolve important disputed, and recurring issues of federal law. The role of counsel in that Court is markedly different in many respects than it is in other appellate courts. Ayer. 2 units.

777. Deal Skills for the Transactional Lawyer. Prepares students for transactional law practice, with emphasis on the "practical" skills required by the M&A lawyer at each stage of the deal-making process. Pre-requisites: Law 210 and Law 336. Instructor: Hynes. 3 units.
778. Law and Entrepreneurship. This perspective course serves as an anchor for the LLM-LE program. In addition to giving students a theoretical framework through which to understand the relationship of entrepreneurship and law, the course will feature regular opportunities to learn directly from entrepreneurs and entrepreneurial lawyers. Instructor: Frey. 2 units.

779. Well-Being and the Practice of Law. The class will examine why the "pursuit of happiness," a phrase written by a lawyer, has proved futile for many members of the legal profession and those aspiring to its ranks. This class will present the research to date on lawyers and happiness. We will examine the scientific data and academic literature on lawyer maladies, while examining holes in the collective wisdom and why the majority of lawyers are quite content. Instructor: Bowling. 1 unit.

780. Law and Bioethics. The course will examine central issues in bioethics, with an emphasis on issues raised by advanced reproduction technologies. The course will cover such topics as: parental genetic screening, sex selection on one's children, genetic enhancement; the imposition of criminal liability on parents for harm to fetuses; and who should pay for reproductive technologies. Instructor: Levy. 2 units.

781. Music Copyright: A Historical, Incentives-Based, and Aesthetic Analysis of the Law of Music. Course will begin by exploring the historical structure of incentives in music and the changing economics of music production, including the preconditions for thinking of music as "property" and the gradual shift from patronage to a market-oriented system. It will then proceed to examine music's unusually complex and increasingly fraught relationship with copyright law. Pre-req Law 322. Instructor: Jenkins. 3 units.

782. Deal Skills II: Negotiating and Documenting Joint Venture Arrangements. This course offers both "practical skills" training for students interested in transactional law practice, and an opportunity to explore a form of corporate transaction — the "joint venture" — that is widely used in the business world but is not covered in typical law school M&A courses. Students will be assigned to lawyer teams and will represent their clients in connection with a hypothetical joint venture arrangement, including drafting a joint venture agreement (and related documents) and negotiating those agreements with opposing counsel. Pre-requisites: Law 210 and Law 336. Instructor: Hynes. 3 units.

783. Adv. Torts: Dignitary Torts. This course will have four components: the common law of intentional infliction of emotional distress, defamation, and privacy; changes in the common law governing those torts necessitated by Supreme Court decisions handed down after 1964; changes in other common law jurisdictions (UK, Can. Aus. and NZ) by their partial response to the concerns that prompted NY Times v. Sullivan in 1964; and developments in the UK and Europe in response to the European Court of Human Rights decisions that the rights of free expression and of privacy are of equal value. Instructor: Staff. 3 units.

785. Legal Writing in Civil Practice. Writing is integral to most aspects of state and federal civil law practice including communicating effectively with clients, asserting clients' rights, and advocating for clients in litigation. This advanced writing course helps prepare students for the rigors of legal analysis and writing in general civil practice by providing a variety of writing experiences including opinion and demand letters, pleadings, motions, and trial briefs with each assignment. The course will culminate in oral arguments on motions before members of the bench and bar. Instructor: Ragazzo. 2 units.

786. Media and the Law. This course will consider how courts attempt to strike an appropriate balance between the fundamental concept of free press, and other imperatives such as national security, privacy, and reputational interests, and the investigation of criminal conduct. It will include consideration of the journalistic quality of articles, and strategies used by counsel in defending publishers, and writers against lawsuits. Instructor: Lewis. 1 unit.

789. Writing: Federal Litigation. This course will provide students with the opportunity to learn several different types of persuasive writing used in federal litigation. The course will focus on one hypothetical matter involving federal law. Instructor: Baker. 2 units.

790. Writing for Publication. In a collective "workshop" setting led by a writing instructor, students will produce a scholarly paper of publishable length. This course is intended to appeal to students who are interested in pursuing an academic writing opportunity apart from or in addition to those available through Duke's journals, seminars devoted to particular areas of law, or independent study. Instructor: Mullem. 2 units.

791. Writing: Judicial Writing. This course is intended to appeal to any student who seeks a judicial clerkship or aspires to be a judge, or simply wants to learn more about how and why judges write judicial opinions. Students will consider the complexities of being on the bench, including judges' relationships with the public, with lawyers, with other judges, and with their clerks. Instructor: Magat. 2 units.

Externship provides Duke Law students with a unique opportunity to learn how state legislation and policy is made by participating in the process itself. The centerpiece of this course is an externship placement with one of the following: the North Carolina General Assembly, an executive branch agency, or a nonprofit working on public policy issues in Raleigh. Students are expected to find their own placement, but faculty are available to assist you to identify opportunities. What you are learning through the externship will be grounded and put in context through a seminar led by Professor Deborah Ross, a member of the NC House of Representatives, that is expected to meet every other week throughout the semester. This is a two-credit course and students will be required to provide at least 50 hours of service to their placement site over the course of the semester. There will not be a final exam, but students will have periodic writing assignments, including a bi-weekly reflection journal. Instructors: Andrew Foster and Deborah Ross. 2 units.

793. History and Constitutional Authority. This seminar will explore the various ways in which understandings of the authority of U.S. governmental actors are informed by historical practice. Students will discuss select articles, book chapters, and executive and congressional memoranda relating to aspects of the topic. Some sessions will focus on general theoretical questions, such as the relationship between governmental practice and the law. Other sessions will address specific constitutional questions, such as the war powers of Congress and the President. Each student will complete a substantial research paper by the end of the semester. Grading will be based on the paper, class participation and online postings. Instructor: C. Bradley. 2 units.

794. Law of Slavery. This course introduces students to the common law of American slavery. It focuses on the daily disputes that juries and judges adjudicated to demonstrate how slavery saturated southern law, encompassing not only conflicts over freedom and race, but also inheritance, mortgages, marriage, torts, contracts, and property. In the process the course continually returns to what we expect from a rule of law while engaging some of the major debates that have dominated slavery studies over the last thirty years. Instructor: Davis. 2 units.

795. Writing for Complex Federal Litigation. This advanced writing course will help prepare students for the writing challenges specific to large federal cases. It will be coordinated with the Complex Civil Litigation course taught at the same time. The course will culminate in oral argument on the summary judgment motion, which will be taped and critiqued by other faculty, judges, and/or members of the bar. Coursework will involve initial drafts, instructor feedback, peer review, and final revisions. Instructor: Mullem. 2 units.

797. Readings in Federalism. This course will combine a traditional seminar on Federalism with a colloquium series in which scholars from Duke and other Law Schools will present recent works or works in progress. Instructor.
Young. 3 units.

Independent Studies and Tutorials

604. Ad Hoc Tutorial. A group of five or more upper-level students may organize and lead a one- to two-credit ad hoc seminar on diverse topics under the supervision of a faculty member. Instructor: Staff. Variable credit.

607. Duke Law in DC: Federal Civil Rights & Law. This course is open to students participating in the Duke in DC integrated externship program (Law 679: Duke Law in DC Externship). The Federal Civil Rights & Law course is a graded weekly class that focuses on federal civil rights law, policy and enforcement, with particular attention to civil rights issues in current events. Students will develop critical skills that are necessary to evaluate federal civil rights law and policy creation and enforcement, and will produce a 30-page final research paper for the course. This course is open to second and third year law students by permission only. 4 units.

610. Exchange Program. Students who have finished the first year of law school study may apply for a semester overseas at a number of institutions. Students need to have appropriate language facility for non-English medium institutions. Variable credit.

611A. Readings in Ethics. This discussion course centers around readings that, implicitly or explicitly, draw connections between the practice of law, the experience of being a lawyer, the substance of the law, and ethics (including not only professional responsibility but issues of moral commitment and action more generally). Each section of the course is expected to have a different specific focus, and different readings, but will center on the general topics of professionalism and ethics. This is a year-long course. Instructor: Law Faculty. Variable credit.

613A. Readings. The "Readings" will cover various topics. The course will be a year-long course. The course will function as a "book group" meant to facilitate informal discussion. This course does NOT fulfill the ethics requirement. Instructor: Staff. 0.5 units.

613B. Readings. Continuation of LAW 613A. Instructor: Staff. 0.5 units.

614. Reading Group in Constitutional Theory. This course explores a variety of foundational topics in constitutional theory. Those topics include the nature and limits of constitutional reasoning, theories of constitutional interpretation, the role of non-judicial actors in determining constitutional meaning, and mechanisms of constitutional change. The course will require reading disproportionate to the single credit. Attendance is mandatory. This course is a year-long course. Instructors: N.Siegel and Young. 0.5 units.

615. Ad Hoc Internship. With approval from the Law School Administration (specifically the Associate Dean for International Studies), law students may register for a one-credit internship in a legal setting during the summer break. The internship must be closely linked to the student's course of study. It is supervised by the Associate Dean for International Studies and by a senior lay practitioner in the legal setting. At the end of the internship, the student must submit a written evaluation that includes a discussion of the impact of the internship on the student's educational program and career plans. Instead of a grade, students receive a credit/no credit notation on their transcripts which does not count toward the academic credit required for graduation. Instructor: Law faculty. 0 units.

620. International Externship. The externship program offers 2L and 3L students, particularly those enrolled in the J.D./LLM program, the opportunity to participate for one semester in a legal job at a non-profit institution conducting international work. The externship also includes a research tutorial and a research paper under the supervision of a Law School faculty member. Students may earn for the entire semester a total of 14 semester-hours of credit. Must be taken with Law 622. Instructor: Law faculty. 10 units.

621. Domestic Externship. Supervised field work, in conjunction with a related tutorial and substantial academic paper. Instructor: Staff. Variable credit.

622. International Externship Law Paper. This is the paper portion of the International Externship program. Taken concurrently with Law 620. Instructor: Law faculty. 4 units.

624. Capstone Project. Joint student/faculty research, writing and/or field work. Instructor: Staff. Variable credit.

627. Externship Research Tutorial. A research tutorial developed in cooperation with an externship faculty supervisor, to supplement an externship and externship research paper. Variable credit. With permission only. Variable credit.

631. LLMLE Capstone Project. LLMLE student/faculty research, writing and/or field work. Instructor: Faculty. 2 units.

640. Independent Research. Law students in their second and third year of the J.D. or LL.B. programs may take no more than three credits of independent research toward the Juris Doctor degree. A J.D. student also enrolled in the LLM program may take for credit not more than four credits of independent research. Students enrolled in the one-year LL.M. program may take for credit not more than three units of independent research. Students undertaking independent research will meet regularly with the faculty member supervising the research in order to ensure contemporaneous discussion, review, and evaluation of the research experience. Instructor: Law faculty. Variable credit.

641. Federal Public Defender's Office for the Eastern District of North Carolina. This is a proposal for a semester-long integrated externship at the Federal Public Defender's Office for the Eastern District of North Carolina (Raleigh) under the supervision of Professor Jim Coleman. Up to eight students will work at the FPDO for sixteen hours each week mentored and supervised by two attorneys in the FPDO who also will serve as adjunct instructors. As part of the integrated externship, students will participate in a course co-taught by Professor Coleman and the two attorney adjunct instructors on Defending the Federal Criminal Defendant. Other members of the faculty and outside guests also may contribute to the instruction. Students will also be permitted to undertake a substantial written research project which could yield up to an additional four credits. 4 units.

642. Defending the Federal Criminal Defendant. Each student will be responsible to lead either a case study or simulation exercise which ordinarily will take place in the second half of the class period. From time to time, we may have a guest lecturer (for instance, a Probation Officer or Magistrate Judge) or member of the faculty who will participate in simulation exercises of discussion of case studies. Variable credit.

643. Federal Defender Externship Research Paper. This is an optional paper for students participating in the Federal Defender Externship. It will involve a great amount of research. The paper can be 15-60 pages. The hours for the paper will vary. Variable credit.

670. Duke Law in DC: Federal Policy Making. This is a semester long externship that gives students who are interested public policy, public service, and careers in the public sector an opportunity to study federal policymaking firsthand, under the direction of Duke Law faculty, and practitioners. The program has three components: a semester long externship placement in a congressional or policymaking office; a weekly course, and a substantial research paper. The program is open to second- and third-year students. Instructors: Kaufman or Schroeder. 9 units.

672. The Constitutional Law and Politics of the Affordable Care Act. In this course, students will serve as Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States during the current Term of the Court. Students will become experts in the professional and personal backgrounds of their Justices, they will vote on four cases on the docket during the current Term, and they will write majority, dissenting and concurring opinions (25-30 pages) on those cases. Instructor: Siegel. 2 units.

674. Non-State Actors and the International Legal System. This seminar analyzes the evolving role of non-state actors in international law, focusing on transnational corporations (as defendants, plaintiffs, and objects of international law) and NGOs (as standard setters, norm entrepreneurs, and third-party participants). Topics covered include human rights cases in domestic courts, investor-state arbitration, corporate social responsibility and the International Criminal Courts. Discussions will focus on how and why non-state actors have become increasingly central in the international legal processes, the consequences of their expanded influence, and the normative and legal implications for the international legal system. Instructor: Staff. 2 units.

676. Duke Law in DC: Federal Policy Making. This course is open to students participating in the Duke Law in DC program. This course will provide an educational focal point for the externs that will enable them to reflect upon their externships experiences, and place them in a larger perspective. It also educates the externs about important legal, and environmental elements that shape, and provide context for the policy making process at the federal level, and to provide externs with tools to evaluate critically important features of the federal policy making process. Instructors: Kaufman, and Schroeder. Variable credit.

677. Duke Law in DC: Rethinking Federal Regulation. This course is open to students participating in the Duke in DC integrated externship program (Law 679: Duke Law in DC Externship). The Rethinking Federal Regulation course is a graded, 4 credit weekly class that focuses on trends in regulatory philosophy, competing models for regulation, the nature of administrative rulemaking and enforcement of rules and regulations, and some of the sources of regulatory dysfunction. Students will develop critical analysis skills that are necessary to evaluate federal regulatory law, and will produce a 30 page final research paper for the course. This course is open to second and third year law student, by permission. 4 units.

678. Law in DC: Fed Reg Reform Paper. This course is the third component for the Law in DC: Federal Regulatory Class. The course is the paper element to the course. The course will be for variable hours (2-5). Instructor: Cox. Variable credit.

679. Duke Law in DC: Externship. This 9 credit externship is one of three components of the Duke Law in DC experience, which also includes a seminar course and a substantial research paper. With the support of the Externship Administration, students seek and secure a full-time externship position with a non-profit or government agency or office in Washington, D.C. Duke Law in DC externship students have the opportunity to gain substantial hands-on experience in order to advance their academic and professional development while working under the supervision of an attorney on high-quality real life work assignments. The Duke Law in DC Program is open to second and third year law students with permission only. 9 units.

Wintersession Courses

800. Basics of Accounting. Duke Law School presently offers an excellent class in Accounting for Lawyers. This course is no substitute for that offering. Instead, among the objectives of the course is to raise an interest among students to learn more about accounting and its role in society. At a minimum, this winter term offering aims to acquaint those with NO prior experience with accounting or finance with the rudiments of the basic understanding of accounting and present value calculations. Instructor: Staff. 0.5 units.

801. Government Contract Litigation. Students will learn about government contract law with a focus on litigating bid protests, i.e., challenges to the awards of government contracts, as well as disputes arising under ongoing contracts. In the first class, after a lecture on the formation of government contracts, students will engage in mock arguments on a motion and preliminary injunction. In the second class, after a lecture on performance issues arising under government contracts, students will participate in a mock mini trial involving a performance dispute. Students should gain an understanding of the process for litigating bid protests and disputes as well as a basic familiarity with issues in government contract law. Instructor: Staff. 0.5 units.

804. Capital Markets Financing and Advanced Business Strategy. Students will engage with the basics of capital markets financing. They will examine products related to capital markets as well as recent trends in capital markets financing. Particular attention will be paid to initial public offerings and leveraged financing among other common corporate financing instruments. Instructor: Staff. 0.5 units.

805. The Evolution of the Banking Sector. We will examine how the banking sector, ranging from investment banks to community banks, have been forced to alter their business models in response to intensified regulation and new economic realities. Specifically, how Dodd-Frank has impacted such institutions' regulatory requirements, capital strategies, and long term viability. Using examples involving securitization and real estate lending, we shall compare and contrast the old norm versus the new reality. Instructor: Patel. 0.5 units.

807. Drafting Civil Motions and Oppositions. This course will teach students the basics of motions practice. It will be made up partly of lecture, but mostly of in-class review and editing of students’ draft motions (displayed anonymously). Students will be asked to draft a short motion (with limited authorities, which will be supplied) before the first class, and, between the two class sessions, both to draft a second motion or an opposition, and to revise their first motion with the benefit of class suggestions. Instructor: Staff. 0.5 units.

808. Contract Drafting. Contract Drafting is an upper-level clinical course that teaches basic practical skills in contract drafting through written drafting exercises. The exercise will be done both in and outside of class, and extensive peer and instructor editing will be used draft in practice. The course will be a combination of lecture and in-class drafting and editing exercises, with an emphasis on the exercises. Instructor: Staff. 0.5 units.

809. Litigation Strategy in the Corporate Context. This course will explore the intersection of counseling and litigation, focusing on the litigator's role in broader corporate strategy and the ways in which businesses, funds, and other entities use litigation both offensively and defensively to achieve goals beyond what is set forth in the pleadings. Using recent examples from the field of mergers and acquisitions, we will identify and critique prevalent procedural devices, methods, and arguments with an eye towards understanding how clients rely on litigators for more than drafting briefs and reviewing documents. Completion of a business associations course is recommended. Instructor: Staff. 0.5 units.

811. The Real World of Civil Litigation: A View from the Plaintiff's and the Defendant's Side. Students will examine the handling of litigation, including complex cases, from the plaintiffs' side, where Len usually sits, and the defense side, which is Bo's territory. The course will focus on pretrial issues, rather than trials, and will cover some but not all of the following: (a) complaints and motions to dismiss; (b) class certification motions and defenses; (c) obtaining and avoiding summary judgment; (d) development of a case strategy; and (e) development of a discovery plan. Instructor: Staff. 0.5 units.

812. Corporate Counsel 101. Students will look at several salient issues that confront in-house counsel. Who is the client? How does one assess risks? How to work with outside counsel? What is the role of Board of Directors? Students will also engage with the key components of Sarbanes Oxley. Instructor: Staff. 0.5 units.
816. Creating an Entity. Students will learn to prepare organizational documents for business corporations and limited liability companies. Students will review, in detail, the organizational documents of a limited liability company. Instructor: Staff. 0.5 units.

820. Deposition Practice. Students will learn the basic nuts and bolts of taking and defending depositions: how to prepare for a deposition, how to formulate effective questions, what objections to raise and when, how to handle difficult witnesses, etc. Students will have the opportunity to conduct a simulated deposition and will receive constructive feedback on their performance. Instructor: Staff. 0.5 units.

821. Drafting Pleadings in International Law Disputes. Students will learn the nuts and bolts of how to draft pleadings in international law disputes. They will study the standard drafting methods employed in written pleadings before the International Court of Justice, an investor-state arbitration tribunal, and the World Trade Organization. Emphasis will be placed on developing good drafting skills and on learning what common mistakes to avoid. Instructor: Maupin. 0.5 units.

823. Introduction to India Legal Environment. This course will offer an overview to the students of the legal environment in which business is undertaken in India. We will review the fundamentals of the legal system and its origin, which will require a historical observation of India since its independence from the United Kingdom in 1947. The course will address basic tenets of market entry and establishing a legal structure for business in India. Instructor: Cutshaw. 0.5 units.

824. Doing Business in China. Students will engage the many legal issues, particularly regulatory and intellectual property-based, presented by business opportunities in China. Cultural differences, business formalities, conflicting laws, and enforcement issues will all be addressed. Instructor: Staff. 0.5 units.

825. Practice and Strategic Development of International Transactions. This course explores the fundamental issues, strategic considerations, and principles inherent in transnational business transactions and the role of the international attorney in structuring and implementing such transactions. Class time is devoted to a case study of a merger and acquisition transaction involving the purchase of a Brazilian entity by a US multinational corporation. The process of constructing an “international deal” is analyzed step by step, exploring all phases of the venture. Focus is given to recognizing and anticipating potential areas of conflict and evaluating the appropriate and legally viable measures available to address these issues. Instructor: Staff. 1 unit.

826. Constitutional Law in Latin America: Organization of Government and Comparison of Judiciaries. Students will learn about the organization of the Executive, Legislative, and Judicial Branches of the Government, with an emphasis on the judiciary, showing that it is the government branch that has sustained the most important transformation in the last 40 years and the analysis of the transformation causes. Instructor: Li Rosi. 0.5 units.

828. Drafting Discovery Requests and Motions. Students will learn to plan and draft interrogatories, requests for documents, and requests for admission, as well as typical discovery motions to quash involving privilege, work product, undue expense, etc. Students will write and turn in draft motions and requests and receive feedback from the professor and peers. Instructor: Staff. 0.5 units.

829. Neuroscience, Juries and Decision-making. This course will provide insights into the mind of the American jury. Some class time will be spent introducing the role of juries in determining liability and damages before moving on to decisional theory and its relation to the American jury. Using current models of jury decision processes, combined with cutting edge neuroscience and evolutionary biology, students will examine how and why juries reach their decisions. Three professors of Neurobiology and a leading jury consultant will join instructors in decoding the American Jury. Instructor: Staff. 0.5 units.

832. In-House Investigations. Students will study the range of legal and practical issues in the conduct of in-house investigations of potential illegality by corporate employees and officers. Students will participate in simulated exercises involving interviews of a CEO or a company employee in the course of a hypothetical investigation. Instructor: Staff. 0.5 units.

833. Pretrial Aspects of a Federal Criminal Case: A Prosecution and Defense Perspective. Students will examine the pretrial stages of a federal criminal case from the eyes of a federal prosecutor and a federal public defender. The course will focus on the pretrial stages and will cover some of the following: (a) use of the grand jury, (b) charging decisions, (c) development of a case strategy; (d) evaluating benefits of pretrial motions, including motions to suppress; (e) plea negotiations; and (f) client management. Instructors: Goulian and Dominguez. 0.5 units.

836. Human Rights Case Study. Students will examine the proliferation of biometric security data surveillance technology and its implications for human and civil rights. The course will consider what types of policy prescriptions should be in place to ensure minimum technological and electronic privacy standards; testing and evaluation protocols that may be needed to assess the efficacy and legality new technologies; whether an international convention or treaty is needed on biometric collection during military occupation; and how biometric security data surveillance used by the military abroad can ultimately impact the utilization of such technology domestically in both criminal and civil law contexts. Instructor: Staff. 0.5 units.

837. Legal and Policy Aspects of U.S. Civil-Military Relations. The seminar will address the Constitutional and statutory structure of U.S. civil-military relations, as well as contemporary issues relating to the role of the armed forces in policy debates, politics, and social issues. In addition, it will examine case studies that illustrate the tensions that can arise between the armed forces and the civilian leadership in a variety of circumstances. Methodologies and approaches for ensuring productive civil-military relations will also be discussed. Text: Course pack of several law review and other articles. Instructor: Dunlap. 0.5 units.

840. Introduction to the Bankruptcy System. Students will learn the basic framework of the commercial bankruptcy system from one of the pre-eminent bankruptcy judges in the country. Students will have the opportunity to practice certain formalities of commercial bankruptcy, including planning and filing for corporate bankruptcy. Instructor: Staff. 0.5 units.

841. International Commercial Arbitration. This course will give students a practical understanding of the process of international commercial arbitration. It will cover aspects of conducting and arbitration and enforcement options. Instructor: Staff. 0.5 units.

842. There's an App for That -- Mobile App Development & Distribution. Students will become acquainted with the basics of developing and distributing mobile software applications, including the primary mobile apps platforms and marketplaces and their differences, other distribution channels, monetization strategies, and legal developments in key areas, including privacy and location based services. Instructor: Grouse. 0.5 units.

843. Pharmaceutical and Biotech US and EU Law. Students will be exposed to the basics of pharmaceutical and biotech law in the US and the EU. In particular, they will examine examples of the development of biotechnology products, taking into account patents, data exclusivity, orphan status (with a particular focus on the differences between the US and the EU laws) and bioethical issues. Particular attention will be given to biosimilar proteins and monoclonal antibodies. Instructor: Fuller. 0.5 units.

Judicial Studies Courses

319JS. Analytical Methods. This course will focus on developing literacy in quantitative and formal analysis in the social sciences, including statistics, empirical evidence, and game theory. The course is designed for students without social science backgrounds and will provide a foundation for reading and interpreting statistics, studies, and other quantitative methods or evidence judges may encounter. Instructor De Figueiredo. 1 unit.

501JS. Administrative Law and the Course. This course will examine how judges review administrative agencies. It will focus on the major doctrines that courts apply and consider empirical evidence regarding how those doctrines are applied in practice. The course will pay particular attention to regulation focusing on science, technology, and economics. Instructor: Rai. 1 unit.

504JS. Foreign Law in U.S. Courts. U.S. judges are confronted with foreign law in a variety of situations - forum non conveniens, choice of law, recognition of foreign judgments, etc. This course serves as an introduction into how foreign law can, in these situations, be properly understood and applied. It thus serves also as an introduction to comparative law for U.S. judges. Instructor: Michaels. 1 unit.

507JS. Study of the Judiciary. This course will focus on the study of the judiciary, and will address empirical, biographical, and jurisprudential areas of inquiry. Students will read papers and evaluate studies on many aspects of the judiciary. Teaching will be divided among scholars with various perspectives on the study of the judiciary, including those who criticize certain approaches to the general field. Instructors: Gulati and Knight. 2 units.
532JS. Forensic Finance for Judges. The purpose of this course is to familiarize sitting judges with the latest developments in finance in general and corporate finance in particular. The goal is to provide judges with information that will allow them to better understand the reports and testimony of financial experts and to assess their credentials and evidence in judicial proceedings. Instructor: M. Bradley. 1 unit.

543JS. International Law in US Courts. This course considers the role of international law — both treaty-based and customary — in the federal and state courts of the United States. The course will be co-taught by two leading international law professors who have somewhat differing perspectives on the application of international law in the American legal system. Instructor: C. Bradley and Helfer. 1 unit.

545JS. Comparative Federalism. This course will explore the history and political theory of federalism, divergent models of federalism (e.g., dual federalism, process federalism, cooperative federalism), the relationship between federalism and political identity, and the role of courts in enforcing federalism, with some attention to comparisons with other federal systems in Europe, Canada, and Australia. Instructors: Lemos and Young. 1 unit.

547JS. Accuracy and Error in the Criminal Justice Process. Although most criminal defendants are properly found guilty of the crimes with which they are charged, in recent years a substantial number of persons have been found to be wrongly convicted. This course will examine decision making in the various stages of the criminal justice process: from police to prosecutors, to judges and to juries. Recent bodies of research in the social sciences provide insights about where and how decisions go right and sometimes go wrong and how errors in one stage of the process can contaminate other stages. The course will discuss research bearing on such matters as the dynamics of false confessions, eyewitness errors, tunnel vision and system justification. Instructors: Vidmar, Coleman and Newman. 1 unit.

552JS. Judges' Seminar. The purpose of this seminar is to examine how judicial institutions and individual judges approach particularly complex and interesting problems. The sessions also will present the opportunity to expand on judicial treatment of these problems in order to advance and expand conceptions and principles for the improvement of the judicial profession. Instructors: McGovern and Rosenthal. 1 unit.

553JS. Thesis Research and Design. This course will include meetings with the student's thesis adviser, as well as opportunities to discuss thesis ideas with a small group of other students. Students will prepare a short but substantial proposal/introductory investigation into their thesis topic, which will be evaluated by other students and the thesis adviser. Instructors: Knight and Gulati. 2 units.

558JS. Statutory and Constitutional Interpretation. This course will examine the interpretation of statutes and constitutions, both in theory and in practice. The first part of the course will focus on statutory interpretation. The second part of the course will focus on constitutional interpretation. Instructor: Siegel. 1 unit.

571JS. The US Supreme Court and the Constitution. This seminar will examine important constitutional issues that have arisen in recent Supreme Court cases and will use those cases as a vehicle for considering broader questions of constitutional interpretation and Supreme Court practice, such as theories of interpretation and the role of Stare Decisis. Instructor: Alito. 0.5 units.

577JS. Judicial History. This course will examine the question of what history has to teach us about law through a close reading of two short books, Grant Gilmore's The Ages of American Law and Judge John Noonan's Persons and Masks of the Law. Gilmore's approach is to sketch out broad tendencies in American legal thought and practice and relate them to the broader historical context; Noonan's is to focus on the individuals who were involved in specific legal disputes -- parties, advocates, judges -- and examine how the ways in which law shapes, and misshapes, our understanding of those disputes. Instructor: Powell. 1 unit.

581JS. Judicial Writing Workshop. Through this workshop, students will have the opportunity to study the opinion writing of judges famous for great writing. They will hear from visiting judges who are among today's best judicial writers. Finally, they will have the opportunity to submit one of their own opinions anonymously for evaluation by a workshop group in the class. Instructors: Carnes and Scalia. 0.5 units.

582JS. National Security and Foreign Relations Law. This course will explore some of the most current and controversial issues in national security law and foreign relations law. After discussing the two pivotal cases regarding presidential power, Youngstown Sheet & Tube v. Sawyer (the Steel Seizure case) and United States v. Curtiss-Wright Export Corporation, we will then focus on the detention of alleged terrorists at Guantanamo Bay and prosecution by military commissions. This course will also cover the high points of foreign relations law that is, the domestic constitutional, statutory, and common law principles that govern the interactions of the U.S. legal system with foreign actors and international law. 1 unit.

588JS. Problems in Self-Regulation. This course will examine areas of law that explore the benefits and problems with self-regulating professions. Particular attention will be paid to the medical profession, but emphasis will be on the general theme of how and when the state should delegate regulatory authority to private parties. Instructor: Richman. 1 unit.

593JS. Master's Thesis. Continuation. Instructor: Staff. 4 units.

Non-JD International LLM Courses

190. Distinctive Aspects of United States Law. This course will introduce international students to several of the distinctive aspects of U.S. law in the context of international business disputes litigated in U.S. courts. Focus of the course will be on civil litigation, the discovery process under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the use of expert witnesses by parties, class actions, the civil jury, and punitive damages. Instructor: Metzloff. 2 units.

195. Legal Analysis, Research, and Writing for International Students. A research and writing tutorial designed to introduce international students to the techniques of case and statutory analysis as well as the tools and methods of legal research. Instructor: Idzelis, Lile-King, J. Maher, Ross, or Stuart. 2 units.

212. Law, Language, and Culture. A four-week intensive course which will introduce international students to legal English, the American legal system, and the law school experience. Through small-group class interaction, encounters with lawyers, judges, and teachers, visits to classrooms, courtrooms and law firms, and interaction with popular media, students will learn to read and begin to produce good legal writing, to study and understand American law, and to make the best possible use of their American law school experiences. Instructor: Idzelis or Linnartz. 0 units.

Summer Courses

Summer Curriculum for the Duke-Geneva Institute in Transnational Law

201G. International Contracts. This course will examine the legal and contractual framework of the international delivery of goods. It will comprise a series of lectures on a broad range of international business contracts examined from the English common law perspective. Emphasis will be given to the drafting and interpretations of contracts. Instructors: Marchand and Meakin. Variable credit.

202G. The War on Terrorism: Comparative and International Security Law. This course will provide an American perspective on the legal principles formulated to deal with the War on Terrorism. The course will also explore the most relevant elements of the international humanitarian law of armed conflict and international human rights law. Instructor: Staff. Variable credit.

204G. Responding to Terrorism: Different Perspectives of Applicable Law. The first term of this course will discuss, from the American perspective, legal issues regarding the targeted killings by drone and the detention, interrogation and prosecution of alleged terrorists. The second term of the course will introduce students to international law regarding the admissibility to target, detain, interrogate and prosecute alleged terrorists, including from a European perspective according to which the fight against terrorism does not constitute an armed conflict. Both terms will use, as a pretext, the jurisprudence and controversies surrounding the treatment of members of the Taliban and Al Qaeda, in particular those held at Guantanamo Bay. Instructor: Sassoli. Variable credit.

205G. Comparative Antitrust. This course provides an introductory study of the U.S. antitrust laws (Sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act), the European Community Competition Laws (Articles 81 and 82 of the Treaty of Rome), and the policy of using competition to control private economic behavior. Topics will include the political framework in which competition policy is made, the economics underlying antitrust policy, monopolization and exclusionary practices, competitor collaboration, illegal unilateral and multilateral conduct, differences between U.S. and EC competition law, and the influence of science on the development of the law. Instructor: Richman. Variable credit.
206G. Comparative Regulation of Lawyers. This course will examine differences in how the legal profession is regulated in the United States and Europe. Comparisons to be made are differences in the training required for admission to the professions, different procedures and standards for certification, and differing approaches for creating and enforcing ethical norms, (though disciplinary systems or tort liability). The course will examine how different systems define the practice of law and how constraints are imposed on the performance of services by non-lawyers. Special attention will be given to the rules associated with multi-national practice. This course may be used to meet the ethical “rules” requirement for those seeking the J. D. degree at Duke. Faculty Metzloff. Credits variable.

207G. International Sports Law. This course will concentrate on the study of organized sport, i.e., sport practiced within the framework of the rules of international sports bodies, in particular the IOC and the international sports federations. Lectures will be presented taking into account both national and international law. The course will examine arbitration and court action. Finally, sports having become a prime economic factor, contracts pertaining to employment, sponsoring, the sale of media rights, as well as legal and contractual liabilities will be discussed. Instructor: Staff. Variable credit.

210G. Comparative Federalism. This course will examine federalism as it exists in the United States and in Europe, with an emphasis toward understanding the federal form of government more generally. Instructor: Staff. Variable credit.

211G. International Law on Trade and Environmental. This course offers a basic background to the institutions and legal rules in the sphere of international trade and investment law on one hand, and international environmental law on the other. It will examine more closely the interaction between trade and environment through a series of case studies. Instructor: Staff. Variable credit.

215G. Corporate Criminal Law. This course will cover the treatment in criminal justice systems of behavior in the corporate and business context. Topics focus on the U. S. criminal system, in which most cases are pursued in federal court and under U.S. federal law. It will deal with the procedure by which the U.S. government brings criminal cases against both individuals, and firms, considering both the doctrine by which corporations can be held criminally liable, and the constitutional rights of individual managers, and employees subject to investigation in the corporate context. Faculty. S. Buell. Variable credit.

219G. Introduction to International Taxation in the U.S. and Europe. This course is an introduction to international taxation in business transactions. After a brief explanation of basic income tax concepts, the principal rules of the United States taxation system relating to international business will be reviewed. The course will then focus on how the United States’ rules interact with taxation systems in other countries. Instructors: Schmalbeck and Lidelkyte-Huber/Naray. Variable credit.

221G. Comparative Corporate Governance Law. This course will begin by tracing the rise of global corporate actors and the international framework that makes them possible. It will discuss differences in the law and regulation of corporate governance in the United States, in contrast with European systems. Instructor: Staff. Variable credit.

222G. Taxation of Cross-Border Transactions. This course is an introduction to international taxation, and business transactions. After a brief explanation of basic income tax concepts, the principal rules of the United States taxation system relating to international business will be reviewed. The course will also give attention to the United States rules interacts with taxation systems in other countries. The course will also focus on bilateral tax treaties as a means of promoting cross-border investments, and international trade through the avoidance of double taxation. The last topic to be covered will be an overview on the indirect taxation issues linked to the international transactions, and hence explain the mechanism of VAT-based tax systems in an international context. Faculty. Schmalbeck. Variable credit.

225G. Detention, Interrogation & Prosecution of Enemy Combatants & Alleged Terrorist. This course will introduce students to issues of the origin, definition, and application of transnational principles in the interrelated fields of collective security, human rights protection, and enforcement of norms. Department consent required. Instructor: Staff. Variable credit.

226G. Law and Corruption. This course will focus on the law governing the political side of corruption, and will cover comparative criminal laws designed to limit political corruption, civil law provisions for public enforcement of corruption law, and international anti-bribery statutes. It will also cover the private law governing corruption. Instructor: Staff. Variable credit.

227G. Cross-National Insolvency. The first term of this course will focus on the insolvency of foreign states (like state owned entities or regions). This is a timely issue given the sovereign debt crisis in the Eurozone. The second part of term one will address cross-border issues. The second term of the course will focus on cross-border solvency situations. Instructors: Gulati and Marchand. Variable credit.

236G. The Rights of Racial Groups and Indigenous Peoples. This course will examine contemporary challenges faced by racial groups and indigenous peoples in the United States and internationally. It will begin by exploring the socio-political meaning of race and factors which influence group formation and group identity. It will also focus on indigenous peoples rights in the United Nations system and the regional human rights systems in Africa, Europe, and the Americas. Instructor: Jones. Variable credit.

237G. Reconciling Human Rights and Intellectual Property. This course explores the intersections between intellectual property and human rights law and policy. The first term introduces the key rules and institutions of each legal regime and the conceptual competing frameworks for analyzing their relationship. The second term examines several other interfaces between IP and human rights on the international plane, emphasizing the potentially conflicting approaches that different legal regimes adopt and that international law offers to address such conflicts. The final section of the course deals with indigenous peoples' rights. Instructors: Helfer and Ruse-Khan. Variable credit.

238G. Freedom of Expression and Its Competitors/Dignitary Torts. This course will cover the different approaches taken in Europe and the United States in resolving conflicts between freedom of expression and other basic social values and goals such as privacy, the protection of social morality and the preservation of the secular nature of civil society. Instructors: Haarscher and Christie. Variable credit.

241G. Climate Change: International and Comparative Law. This course will explore the problem of global climate change and potential legal responses. The course will also analyze, among other topics, the science and impacts of climate change (including expected impacts and potential catastrophic risks); policy response options; engaging major emerging powers such as China; sectoral approaches to climate change adaptation and mitigation; advanced energy technologies; carbon capture and storage; forestry and reducing emissions from deforestation; and human rights law. The goal of the course is to give law students a comprehensive understanding of the legal mechanisms that may be used to tackle climate change at diverse scales including international, regional, national and sub-national legal orders. Department consent required. Instructor: Wiener. Variable credit.

249G. Definition of the Family in International Law. This course deals with the international life of families and the formidable challenges posed by their spanning different and mutually independent legal orders. The main focus will be placed on how the differences between the various conceptions of, and legislations on, family are accommodated when it comes to cross-border relationships, i.e., relationships having connections with more than one State. Instructors: K. Bradley and Romano. Variable credit.

251G. Regulation of Non-Governmental Organizations. The first term of this course will examine the international legal regime applicable to international non-governmental organizations (NGOs). Topics will include the basic private international law mechanisms which enable NGOs to act outside of their jurisdiction or origin, the consultative status they enjoy with the UN and other international organizations, and their standing with international courts and tribunals (or lack thereof). In the second term of the course, the regulatory apparatus applying to NGOs- both purely domestic and international- in the United States will be examined. Included will be discussions of the process of achieving recognition of tax exempt status, and establishing eligibility to special tax benefits such as deductible charitable contributions, local property tax exemptions, and the like. Department consent is required. Instructor: Schmalbeck. Variable credit.

253G. The Law of Energy and the Environment. This course will explore the legal and policy issues regulating the ownership, production and consumption of energy, as well as efforts to address the resulting environmental impacts. The course will consider both domestic (U.S.) and international legal frameworks. The second term is intended to provide students with a firm understanding of the main legal issues related to the relationship between a foreign investment in the energy sector and the protection of the environment. The course will also explore international environmental treaties. Instructors: Salzman and Gazzini. Variable credit.
258G. Comparative Law Governing Lawyers. This course examines differences in how the legal profession is regulated in the United States and Europe. Among the comparisons to be made are differences in the training required for admissions to the professions, different procedures and standards for certification, and differing approaches for creating and enforcing ethical norms. This course meets the requirement of a course on the legal profession required for the seeking a the J.D. Degree at Duke. Instructor: Staff. Variable credit.

259G. International Issues in Biotechnology Law. This course will provide a general overview of the legal issues implicated by advances in biotechnology. It will also focus closely on the intellectual property and technology transfer implications of this scientific field. It will discuss comparative Swiss/European and U.S. patent law, and other issues. Instructor: Staff. Variable credit.

263G. Separation of Powers. This course will examine some on the principal decisions of the United States Supreme Court dealing with the separation of powers, including cases pertaining to appointment, and removal of executive officers, delegation of legislative powers, the doctrine of standing, and incursion upon, and expansion of the power of the courts. Throughout the course, comparisons will be made to the treatment of similar issues in foreign countries, particularly the countries of the European Union. Variable credit.

269G. Comparative Contract Law. This course will use a case-oriented, learn-by-doing approach to familiarize students with contract law and the comparative method. Students will be provided with specific questions to guide their work with the materials in order to solve each case under the different national laws. The solutions will then be analyzed and compared to discover if any common principles exist for the issues raised. In cases where the national solutions diverge, an analysis of the respective pros and cons of each will be conducted, culminating in a discussion of which of the solutions might be the most appropriate to resolve the problem at issue from a comparative and international perspective. Department consent required. Instructor: Michaels. Variable credit.

275G. Customary International Law in Theory and Practice. This course will consider some of the theoretical and practical issues surrounding the concept of customary international law. As will be seen, debates over the content of customary international law arise in a wide variety of areas today (sovereign immunity, law of treaties, human rights, law of armed conflicts, environmental protection, investment protection, international trade, etc.). There will also be some consideration of the relationship between customary international law and the U.S. legal system. Instructors: C. Bradley and Mbengue. Variable credit.

290G. Introduction to American Law. The course will first introduce students to some of the distinctive aspects of United States law and legal institutions, including the U.S. legal profession, legal education, admission to the Bar and regulation of lawyers. The U.S. Constitution will be introduced through the discussion of several U.S. Supreme Court cases that address issues being hotly debated in the United States today. Other unique features of the American legal system will be discussed. Common law methods of statutory interpretation will also be covered and a sequence of products liability cases will be worked through to acquaint students with techniques of case analysis as a way of understanding how the common law changes and develops over time. Instructor: J. Coleman, Haagen, Metzloff, or N. Siegel. Variable credit.

294G. Structured Finance and Securitization. The first part of this course will examine the legal and conceptual underpinnings of structured finance, securitization in an international context. The last part of the course will provide students with a firm understanding of the main legal issues related to foreign investments. Faculty. Schwarcz. Variable credit.

299G. Duke-Geneva Institute in Transnational Law. The Duke-Geneva Institute is designed to address the educational and professional needs of students and young lawyers with an interest in international and comparative law as well as those with an interest in transnational practice. Asian-American Institute in Transnational Law

202H. Terrorism, Human Rights, & International Law. The first part of this course will be dedicated to analyzing the ways legal systems perceive terror, and try to fight it. The second part of the course will examine terrorism from the perspective of international law. Instructors: Barak-Erez and Linton. 2 units.

206H. Corporate Governance in Asia: China & Common Law Jurisdictions. This course will provide an introduction to corporate governance (CG) regimes in major Asian economies, including mainland China and several important common law jurisdictions which were former British enclaves in the southern hemisphere. The first term of the course will consider CG regulations and practices in mainland China, especially regarding recent developments in the context of China’s transition to a market economy and participation in economic globalization. The course will conclude with an overview of the aftermath of the 1997-98 crisis and some implications for CG in Asian jurisdictions in light of the so-called “law matters” thesis proposed by Rafael La Porta and colleagues. Department consent required. Instructor: Staff. Variable credit.

209H. International Trade and Development. The first term of this course will introduce the fundamental principles of international trade regulation in the multilateral GATT/WTO system and in regional trade agreements, with a focus on the trade policies of Asian states and trade agreements in the region. The second term of the course will address the broad variety of dilemmas relating to the participation of developing countries in a globalized legal and economic system. The emphasis will be on understanding and critiquing the transnational legal, economic and political environment that impacts upon the contemporary goals of worldwide poverty reduction and development. This term will discuss the relationship between trade and development with an emphasis on the WTO’s “Doha Development Round,” and conclude with a consideration of the controversial role of International Financial Institutions (IFIs), development aid and its legal framework, and the participation of private actors, investors and benefactors in the development process. Department consent required. Instructor: Staff. Variable credit.

212H. International Negotiation and Arbitration. The first term of this course will focus on problems lawyers face when developing relationships and resolving disputes that transcend national boundaries. Cross-nation negotiations entail not only differences in substantive laws but also assumptions about the role of law in negotiations and about proper procedures in reaching agreements. We will survey a broad range of difference between countries around the world and provide general guidelines for coping in a foreign legal culture. The main teaching method of this term of the course will involve negotiation simulation exercises, supplemented by lectures, discussions, and assigned readings. The second term of the course will examine the practice of international arbitration in a global environment. It will cover international arbitration institutions, model rules and procedures. Department consent is required. Instructor: Vidmar. Variable credit.

213H. Constitutional Development and Democracy. This course will address constitutional development, and democracy in selected countries of Asia. Democratic constitutionalism has gradually taken root in Japan, South Korea, Taiwan, and recently Malaysia and Indonesia. Other countries such as Hong Kong, Singapore, and to some extent China. Students will be invited to examine the key factors that facilitate successful democratization, and constitutional reforms including the role played by constitutional courts. The course will then shift attention to Africa and particularly South Africa and Kenya where democratic transitions were accompanied, and intended to be sustained by substantial change. Staff. Variable credit.

214H. Contemporary Issues in the Law of the Sea and Space Law. This course will cover an introduction to the law of the sea, and examine its relevance in addressing contemporary challenges, including maritime territorial disputes, overlapping maritime claims, navigational rights, piracy, human trafficking at sea, maritime pollution, fisheries regulation, and dispute settlement. The course will also cover the study of space law to help understand the socio-economic environment of space law from the legal standpoint and provide a detailed overview of the substantive rules of law relating to the peaceful use of outer space, liability, registration, space commercialization, launching activities, remote sensing, and environmental issues. Staff. Variable credit.

215H. Tax Law and Policy in East Asia. This course will examine and contrast the taxation systems of the U.S., Japan, Singapore, Hong Kong, and Mainland China. It will also be policy oriented. Instructor: Staff. Variable credit.

216H. International Financial Transactions. This course will provide an introduction to the major types of financial instruments, and transactions in the international finance markets. Coverage will focus on risks, and structures, and major legal regulatory issues. It will deal with several cases related to legal issued in the corporate governance area including: the duty of directors to shareholders, and the company; the business judgment rule; the duty of directors to company creditors; piercing the corporate veil; the role of the company auditor to investigate, find and correct illegal conduct; anti-takeover defenses by target management, etc. After theoretical analysis, and comprehensive discussion of these topics, the class will consider the most critical question: how to hold the management of a publicly-held corporation responsive to social concerns. Faculty. Variable credit.

217H. Wrongdoing and the Recovery and Distribution of Assets. This course will explore the processes for individuals, corporations and states to obtain and distribute assets from solvent wrongdoers. The mechanisms for recovering assets include tort law, the United Nations Convention Against Corruption (UNCAC), domestic legislation and varieties of mutual legal assistance. Various forms of alternative dispute resolution, aggregate litigation and political processes will also be discussed. Instructors: McGovern and Young. Variable credit.

218H. Legal Traditions and Cultures: East and West. This course offers students an opportunity to develop an understanding of the legal and cross-cultural dimensions of resolving international business disputes through means of arbitration in a global context. It will present and introduction to the law of international commercial arbitration. It will also consider legal and cross-cultural dimensions of resolving state-to-state international business and economic law disputes. Instructors: McGovern and Young. Variable credit.

219H. Comparative Constitutional Law: Asian Constitutions under Stress. This course will be a comparative survey of constitutionalism in various Asian countries. It focuses specifically on Sri Lanka, and the constitutional issues that have contributed to exacerbation of the island’s ethnic conflict. The general themes of the course will be constitutional design in plural societies. Instructor: Staff. Variable credit.

220H. Copyright in International Law: From Inception to Implosion. This is a course in the origins and evolution, as well as the contemporary dimensions, and challenges of copyright jurisprudence, law and practice in the global environment. Students will explore the ways in which natural and positive law have struggled to keep pace with the often unanticipated, and sometimes sudden emergence of powerful new technologies in the presence of disparate political and economic contingencies. Topics will include the liability of online intermediaries, and assessment of the mounting up of protective mechanisms (such as paracopyright provisions) and erosion of defensive ones (such as the first sale doctrine) and a discussion of contemporary Western attempts to use copyright and trade to challenge value systems of the East. Faculty. Lange. Variable credit.

221H. Comparative Corporate Law. The corporation is a complex mechanism for getting together to make money and do other good things. It is bedeviled, however, by a host of problems, all of which eventually stem from what we are: social animals. While the basic structure of companies in modern economies is largely universal, different countries — with their different legal systems, market structures and other social institutions, such as norms and culture — address these issues differently. This course provides an introduction to the field of comparative corporate governance. Instructors: Licht and Shen. Variable credit.

222H. National Views of International Law. This course will consider differing national perspectives on international law. The first term of the course will focus on U.S. views of international law. This portion of the course will consider the distribution of authority within the U.S. legal system over questions relating to international law, the extent to which international law is cognizable by U.S. courts, and the U.S. position on substantive topics such as international human rights law, international criminal law, the use of force, and nuclear non-proliferation. The second term of the course will focus on views of international law in East Asia, especially in China and India, as rising powers with different identities, one democratic, the other authoritarian, but both with a colonial past and still developing countries. It will consider the approaches of India and China to the law of the United Nations Charter, attitudes about state sovereignty, self-determination and human rights, questions of territorial and maritime boundary, and efforts to address the proliferation of nuclear weapons. Department consent is required. Instructor: C. Bradley. Variable credit.

226H. Police, Prosecutors and Organized Crime. This course will examine organize crime from the perspective of it being a social and legal construct and how it is studied and responded to by various governments. The course will examine the four key transformations in how societies have viewed organize crime: 1) From the Mafia in the US as being seen as the only group that qualified as organized crime under the RICO statutes; 2) The acknowledgment of organized crime groups in Asia and the Caribbean; 3) An understanding of organized crime in Asia and other areas outside the US; 4) The connection between organized crime groups and corporate scandals, particularly in Japan. Instructors: Beare and Fenwick. Variable credit.

229H. Minorities and Territories in India and China. This course will introduce students to comparative constitutional perspectives from the emerging economies of the two most populous countries -- India and mainland China. After a brief exposure to the fundamental principles of constitutional law and governance structure in each jurisdiction, the course will explore two areas in greater detail. Instructors: Deva and Zhu. Variable credit.

230H. Rights, Remedies in the Criminal Process: China and India. This course will examine the rights and remedies in the criminal process in China. It will also examine the challenges facing the Indian criminal justice system, focusing on the last two decades. Instructor: Staff. Variable credit.
231H. Law and Governance in Southeast Asia. This course will be a comparative survey of constitutionalism in various countries in South East Asia. Instructors: Harding and Pangalangan. Variable credit.

235H. International Environment Law and Climate Control Policy. This course aims to provide students with a contextual understanding of today's key global environmental issues and the possible legal solutions. Instructor: Staff. Variable credit.

240H. The New Regime of Banking Regulation. As governments, international institutions, and the financial industry react to the calamity of the Global Financial Crisis, a new regime of global bank regulation is beginning to emerge. It is recognized by many that international and domestic systems need the protection of more effective and coordinated international efforts to preserve the safety and stability of the globalized world of banking and international finance. The course will review the characteristics of the international financial system & the causes of the GFC. The reconfiguration of the traditional international regulatory mechanisms will be examined with particular focus on the important new roles of the G-20, Financial Stability Board and the Basel Committee, and the way in which these institutions interact with domestic regulators in leading countries. The course will examine some of the high profile bank failures in the United States and Europe and look at the challenges faced in the United States, Europe and Asia. Department consent is required. Instructor: Baxter. Variable credit.

243H. Global Commerce and Freedom of the Seas. This course provides a general understanding of the fundamental issues of international maritime law and other legal issues pertinent to maritime global commerce. It will also focus on the Straits of Malacca and Singapore, the busiest and most important sea lane in the world. Instructors: Beckman and Pejovic. 2 units.

248H. Media and Entertainment Law. This course will focus on media law, regulation, and policy in Asia with emphasis on the impact of International media operating in the region. Students will spend time studying theater, motion pictures, television, the record industry, music publishing, and digital distribution. Instructor: Staff. Variable credit.

250H. Global Financial Crisis: Law and Policy. This course will examine why a problem that began in a specific asset class could have had such a profound global impact. It will provide an intro to the law relating to banking and will consider the policy issues raised by the global financial crisis. Instructor: Staff. Variable credit.

260H. Emerging Patterns of Litigation in China and Common Law Asia. Student will begin by getting acquainted with the dominant features of the civil litigation process in a few selected common law jurisdictions in Asia. The discussions will be primarily on the overriding objective of the civil procedure rules and the effect of non-compliance with the provisions of the rules of court in the jurisdictions under consideration. It will also explore the impact of traditional values, and practice of civil justice reform, and the tension between legal professionalism, and the informal institution of dispute resolution. Finally the course will bring politics back into civil justice reform , and examine the use, and abuse of civil justice in dealing with the increasing social conflict, and the potentials, and limits of courts in developing the rule of law in China. Faculty. Variable credit.

274H. International Financial Transactions. This course will provide an introduction to the major types of financial instruments and transactions in the international financial markets. Coverage will focus on risks and structures, and major legal and regulatory issues. Instructors: Arner and Itzikowitz. 2 units.

277H. Trade Law Behind Borders: The Relationship of Domestic Law to WTO Law. This course will discuss how domestic laws and regulations of a member state are implicated in the interpretation of the WTO Agreements and in the implementation of the obligation as a member of the WTO. Class discussions will include a study of how domestic laws are addressed, interpreted and applied in the WTO dispute settlement proceeding based on relevant jurisprudence established by WTO precedents. Case studies will be conducted to illustrate the entire cycle of a domestic law in the WTO regime. Issues to be discussed will include WTO rules governing domestic regulations for trade in goods, room for regulatory autonomy, and domestic regulation issues in trade in services. Instructors: Lee and Gao. Variable credit.

283H. Local Law, Global Problems: Conflict of Laws and the Challenge of Globalization. The course introduces the main doctrines of conflict of laws relevant for these questions-jurisdiction, choice of law, recognition, and enforcement of foreign judgments. Instructor: Michaels. 2 units.

284H. Globalization of the Family. The modern family is globalized. Often spouses come from different countries, have children in different countries, and have property in different countries. Moreover, globalization leads to the creation of communities of cultural minorities within nation states that demand legal autonomy over their family matters. This course will address issues in which globalization plays a role, such as marriage tourism, polygamous marriage, marriage and acquisition of citizenship, religious family law tribunals, and custody disputes across borders. It will address questions of comparative law, conflict of laws, and substantive family law. Students need no background in these areas. Instructors: Michaels and Hacker. Variable credit.

287H. The Global Financial Crisis and Bankruptcy. This course will offer a comparative approach to insolvency law with a focus on corporate insolvency systems. Given the recent worldwide financial crisis, the need for insolvency reform has been once again publicized, and many countries are in the midst of such reform. This course will consider the philosophical underpinnings of insolvency law and secured transactions. Recent and on-going insolvency law reform efforts in Asia will also be highlighted. Instructors: Booth and Kashiwagi. Variable credit.

290H. Introduction to American Law. The first term of this course will introduce students to some distinctive aspects of United States law and legal institutions. The structure of the U.S. legal profession will be discussed by examining the education, bar admission, and regulation of lawyers, as well as the means for selecting judges. The second term will continue this substantive focus on individual rights under the U.S. Constitution, including the rights relating to free speech and religion granted by the First Amendment and those of due process and equal protection bestowed by the Fourteenth Amendment. Instructors: K. Bradley/Charles. Variable credit.

292H. Law and Investment in Late-Developing Countries. The course will focus on the role of law in promoting economic development in less economically developed countries, with special emphasis on post-conflict societies. Liberia, Vietnam, and Cambodia will be discussed. The course will also focus specifically on economic law, especially financial development to support economic growth. Instructor: Staff. Variable credit.

293H. International Insolvency: Countries and Companies. The first term of this course will focus on the insolvency of sovereign states and quasi-sovereigns (like state owned entities or regions). The second half of term one will be spent examining the cross-border issues which have arisen in that context. The first half of term one will provide some historical background on state insolvencies and mechanisms to solve them. The second term will address cross-border aspects of insolvency law and Chinese bankruptcy law. The basic characteristics, principles and practice of cross-border insolvency will be presented in a comparative perspective. Recent developments to unify the proceedings of international insolvencies will be examined. Instructors: Gulati and Shi. Variable credit.

296H. White Collar Crime and Corruption in Asia: Japan and Hong Kong. This course will look at the meaning of white collar crime and its significance for criminologists and lawyers in the context of East Asia. Topics to be covered will include corporate criminal responsibility, prosecuting and defending white collar crime, sentencing white collar offenders, the use of shaming sanctions in the punishment of corporations, and legal responses to bribery, corruption, insider trading, and market abuse. Instructor: Staff. Variable credit.

297H. Market Practice and the Regulation of Stock Exchanges. Stock exchanges and other organized financial markets have undergone radical changes in the last two decades. This course will examine the institutional origins of modern exchanges, and will analyze how contemporary changes in law, regulation, and practice are affecting both exchanges, and their users. Instructor: Staff. Variable credit.

299H. Asia-America Institute in Transnational Law. The Asia-America Institute brings together participants and faculty members from around the world to study and live together in a residential college setting at the University of Hong Kong. The program is designed for students, lawyers, and others with an interest in international and comparative law and, in particular, for those who are or plan to be engaged in international practice at law firms or financial institutions. Variable credit.
Degree Programs

The Juris Doctor: The First Professional Degree in Law

Duke Law School offers a JD program that is rigorous, relevant, innovative, and interdisciplinary. First-year students begin their study of law through the traditional core courses of civil procedure, constitutional law, contracts, criminal law, property, and torts, and legal analysis, research, and writing. At least one core first-year course is a small section between thirty and thirty-five students and rarely does any first-year class exceed seventy-five students. The first-year writing course is taught in sections of fewer than thirty students.

From the first-year foundation, Duke has built an extensive upper-level curriculum that blends traditional coursework with an extensive array of practical skills courses and clinics and opportunities to study in small groups with faculty.

While the core curriculum is strong across the board, Duke has given special attention to those areas in which there is likely to be a growing demand for lawyers over the coming decades—business and finance law, international and comparative law, constitutional and public law, and fields relating to science and technology such as intellectual property and environmental law.

JD/LLM in International and Comparative Law

The JD/LLM in international and comparative law allows students to earn both the JD and LLM degrees in three years, with two summers of additional coursework. Courses for the LLM degree focus on international and comparative law and prepare students for careers in international law practice. Students in the JD/LLM program commence their studies in the summer before the first year of law school, undertaking part of the regular first-year curriculum with other dual-degree students. During the remaining six semesters of law study and in a four-week period at one of Duke’s summer programs, JD/LLM students participate in twenty credit hours of approved classes specifically for the LLM degree in addition to eighty-four credits required for the JD degree. Courses for the LLM include international law; comparative law; research methodology in international, foreign, and comparative law; and coursework or an independent study for which a significant piece of writing is required.

JD/LLM students may also earn up to six hours taken in The Graduate School or in an upper-level undergraduate class, including advanced language courses. The Duke University Area Studies Program is particularly rich in courses dealing with Canada, China, Germany, and Japan, and the political science department provides one of the world’s strongest programs in international relations. Candidates for the JD/LLM in international and comparative law must maintain a minimum grade point average of 2.5 in these courses and must also show competency in at least one foreign language.

JD/LLM in Law and Entrepreneurship

The JD/LLM in law and entrepreneurship program allows students to earn both the JD and LLM degrees in three years, with two summers of additional coursework. Courses for the LLM degree provides students with a deep understanding of the historical and current perspectives on entrepreneurship and the law; enables students to understand the business, institutional, and strategic considerations applicable to entrepreneurs; fosters an understanding of the public policy and legal frameworks that promote innovation; ensures that students master both the core substantive law and the lawyering skills that are necessary for effective representation of entrepreneurs; and provides students with an opportunity to explore their own potential for entrepreneurship.

JD/LLMLE candidates begin their course of study in the summer before the 1L fall semester in order to complete all academic requirements within three academic years: JD/LLMLE students also participate in a summer “Entrepreneurship Boot Camp” following the first year of courses. Students must complete eighty-four credits for the JD degree and an additional twenty credits in entrepreneurship, business law, and IP courses for the LLM degree, for a total of 104 credits. Upper level courses for JD/LLMLE students include advising the entrepreneurial client, law and entrepreneurship, analytical methods, business strategy, venture capital financing, innovation, and the start-up ventures clinic.

JD/MA and JD/MS Degrees

Duke offers a unique program through which students earn both a law degree and a master's degree in three years and one summer. The JD/MA and JD/MS students are part of forty to fifty students in each class who pursue a dual degree. Their motivations vary widely. For some, there is a clear and strong complementary relationship between their legal and graduate school studies. For others, the MA is an opportunity to continue pursuing an academic passion from their undergraduate years, even though it may not be as closely related to their JD studies. In either case, they find the dual-degree option an excellent opportunity for interdisciplinary study, packaged in a manageable program.

Single Application

JD/MA and JD/MS candidates do not need to apply separately to The Graduate School. For interested applicants, Duke Law School will submit the regular Duke Law School application to The Graduate School for its admission decision. In addition, The Graduate School waives the GRE requirement for JD/MA and JD/MA applicants, so applicants do not need to complete an additional standardized test.

Summer Start

JD/MA and JD/MS students (along with JD/LLM students) get a head start on their JD classmates by taking two of the first-year law school courses during the summer before their official first year of law school. This allows them to begin their graduate school studies during the fall and spring, and complete both degrees in three years, leaving their later summers free for legal employment. The summer start is also a great way to begin law school in a small-class setting and form a close bond with dual-degree classmates. For more information about applying to these dual degree programs, and links to more information about the master's degrees listed below, visit http://law.duke.edu/admis/degreeprograms/jd-mba.

JD/MBA and Accelerated JD/MBA Degrees

Students and faculty affiliated with Duke Law School and The Fuqua School of Business have many opportunities to collaborate on issues at the intersection of law and business. Students who are particularly ambitious and focused in this area may apply to both the JD and The Duke MBA through a single application that is reviewed by each school separately.

Course of Study

Students who are admitted to both degree programs may choose to begin their studies either at Duke Law School or at The Fuqua School of Business. The JD/MBA can be completed in four years, rather than the five it would take to complete each degree separately.

A typical course of study might begin with the first-year curriculum at the law school, followed by the first-year curriculum in The Duke MBA, and then two years of classes selected from both schools, with approximately two-thirds of the courses taken in the law school. However, other students may spend their first year at the business school and their second at the law school, or the first two years at the law school and the third at the business school. This flexibility is typical of the opportunities in the JD/MBA program.

Accelerated JD/MBA Option

Typically, JD/MBA students will complete both degrees in four years (eight semesters) of study. However, with careful course scheduling, some students are able to complete their JD/MBA in three and a half years (seven semesters). Students who pursue this option are attracted by the opportunity to get a head start on their entry into the job market. Students do not need to commit themselves to the accelerated JD/MBA option during the application process; one can explore the possibility during the first year of study at Duke. For more application information, visit http://law.duke.edu/admis/degreeprograms/jd-mba.

Summer Start Option

JD/MBA students who begin their program at the law school may also choose to join the JD/LLM, JD/MA, and JD/MA students who get a head start on their legal studies by starting in the summer rather than in the fall. Summer-starting students take two of the required first-year law school courses in June and July and may have an easier time scheduling classes between the two schools later in their academic careers. These students are also well-positioned to graduate earlier than those starting in the fall semester.

JD/MBA Careers

JD/MBA students have a wide range of career options, whether they choose to pursue legal practice informed by a deeper understanding of business and finance, work in finance or management drawing on their legal expertise, or some other combination of the two disciplines. Three summers for both legal and business employment and internships allow students to gain experience in both fields. And they can take full advantage of the resources and advice of both Duke Law’s Career Center and the Duke MBA Career Management Center.

Graduate Degree Programs (LLM, SJD)

LLM in Law and Entrepreneurship

The Law and Entrepreneurship LLM Program is an advanced legal studies program designed for students who want to be entrepreneurial lawyers. It provides students with a deep immersion in certain fields of business study from the perspective of a lawyer. Core courses in intellectual property, law and entrepreneurship, venture capital, and private investment help students acquire a deeper understanding of the applicable substantive law and the professional skills needed to lawyer effectively in an entrepreneurial context.

The program emphasizes the development of professional skills in a hands-on setting. To that end, the program includes an integrated externship with a private law firm, general counsel’s office, venture capital firm, trade association, government agency, or another similar setting. By combining rigorous coursework with experiential learning, the program provides students with a deep understanding of entrepreneurship and its relationship to law; the business, institutional, and strategic considerations applicable to entrepreneurs; and the public policy and legal frameworks that promote innovation. The program also ensures that students master both the core substantive law and the lawyering skills that are necessary for effective representation of entrepreneurs and provides students with an opportunity to explore their own potential for entrepreneurship.

Many students who apply to this program have practiced law for several years and wish to focus their practice on entrepreneurial ventures. Admission to the LLM in law and entrepreneurship is a separate process from that of other Duke Law degrees.

LLM for International Law Graduates

Duke's LLM program for international lawyers and law school graduates is designed to provide an introduction to the legal system and the practice of law in the United States as well as the opportunity to take advanced training in specialized areas of law. The program of study is normally completed in one academic year, which begins for all new students in late August.

Most international LLM students at Duke are professionals with two or more years of experience at well-known law firms. They also are judges, prosecutors, academics, and members of government ministries, corporations, and financial institutions. The LLM program usually includes a small number of talented, very recent law graduates, as well.

Applicants must hold a first degree in law from an accredited institution outside the United States. The law degree should be the equivalent of the JD or LLB degree. Correspondence course degrees will not be considered for admission to the LLM program.

Admission for international students to the LLM or SJD programs is separate from the JD admissions process. Prospective candidates for these programs should contact the international programs office or review the LLM and SJD application process online.

While it is not necessary, applicants are welcome to visit Duke Law School, meet staff and students, observe classes, and interview with a member of the international studies staff. Applicants are encouraged to contact Duke Law alumni for more information about the international LLM program.

Master's Degree in Judicial Studies

Through Duke's LLM program in judicial studies, judges learn the analytical skills and research approaches necessary for studying judicial institutions and apply those skills to studies of domestic and international judicial institutions, common and emerging legal issues, general judicial practices, and judicial reform efforts. Eligible candidates must have a JD or an LLM from an accredited US law school or an equivalent degree from another country, and be a current or former judge.

The degree program consists of twenty-two credits, four of which are earned through the writing of a thesis based on original research. The program consists of two 4-week terms offered over two consecutive summers. Each term features courses comprising nine credits. Courses will vary depending on faculty and current events, but will generally focus on the study of the judiciary, methods in quantitative and formal analysis, statutory and constitutional interpretation, international law, and judicial writing.

SJD for International Law Graduates

A very small number of exceptional international students who have already completed an LLM program with distinction from an American law school or from a common law program may gain entry to this program.

Applicants should submit samples of their written work and a description of their special research interest. The application file is reviewed by a faculty committee.

Students admitted to candidacy in the program are assigned a primary faculty advisor and a committee of two additional faculty members. The completion of the degree requires a minimum of two-to-three years and normally will involve at least one semester of courses in addition to those taken for the LLM degree. The student's progress is monitored through oral and written examinations before the student may proceed to the thesis stage of the degree program.

Only outstanding students preparing for careers in academia should apply to the SJD program. The entire application will be reviewed by the Faculty Committee on Comparative and International Studies. Applicants are requested not to contact individual Duke Law School faculty members. If further information is necessary, the applicant will be notified. Admissions decisions will be made starting in late March.
Beyond the Curriculum

Journals

Duke University School of Law has been innovative in publishing full text of its journals online in a fully searchable format at http://law.duke.edu/scholarship/journals. We support and encourage open access to legal scholarship. Duke Law School has eight scholarly print publications, plus one journal that is published mainly in electronic form.

Law and Contemporary Problems. Since 1933, Duke Law School has published the quarterly Law and Contemporary Problems. The journal is distinctive among professional legal publications in both format and content. Each issue is devoted to papers on a particular topic of contemporary interest. These topics often reflect an interdisciplinary perspective with contributions by lawyers, economists, social scientists, scholars in other disciplines, and public officials. The journal also publishes student notes related to past symposia.

Law and Contemporary Problems is monitored by a faculty editorial board and each issue is assembled under the guidance of a special editor. Approximately forty upper-level law students serve on the editorial staff of this publication. Fifteen to twenty rising second-year students are selected each year on the basis of academic performance during the first year at Duke Law and demonstrated writing ability in an annual writing competition. Up to three rising third-year students are selected each year on the basis of academic performance during the first two years at Duke Law.

Duke Law Journal. Established in 1951 as the Duke Bar Journal, the Duke Law Journal publishes eight issues a year. Edited by students, the journal is among the most prestigious and influential legal publications in the country. Approximately one half of the content of each issue consists of student notes dealing with current legal developments. The rest of the issue is devoted to articles and comments by professors, practitioners, and judges. The Journal also hosts an annual administrative law symposium, which celebrated its fortieth anniversary last year.

The Journal staff of approximately eighty students is chosen on the basis of academic performance in the first year of law school and/or demonstrated writing ability in the annual casenote competition. Students may also seek membership on the Journal by submitting a publishable student note.

Alaska Law Review. Since 1983, Duke Law School has published the Alaska Law Review. As Alaska has no law school but has the highest number of lawyers per capita of any American state, the Alaska Bar Association contracted with Duke Law School to provide a professional law journal responsive to the needs of Alaska's diverse legal community. Alaska has a range of cutting edge legal issues in the areas of natural resources law, environmental law, land use planning, economic development, state/federal relations, and Native American rights. Each spring, the journal sends members to Alaska for one-on-one meetings with legislators and legal professionals to garner insight into the state's unique laws.

Student editors have primary responsibility for writing, editing, and managing the Alaska Law Review. Thirteen rising second-year students are chosen as editors on the basis of academic performance during the first year of law school and demonstrated writing ability in an annual writing competition. Rising third-year students and transfer students may also be selected for membership through submission of a writing sample.
Duke Journal of Comparative and International Law. The Duke Journal of Comparative and International Law was established in 1990. The journal, which is published three times per year, publishes articles from international scholars and practitioners, and student notes.

Approximately eighteen staff members are selected annually on the basis of writing ability demonstrated by a superlative performance in the annual writing competition or the submission of a publishable note. Several international students earning the LLM degree are also selected each year on the basis of academic record and special skills or interests that indicate their likely contribution to the journal.

Duke Environmental Law and Policy Forum. Duke Law School began publishing the Duke Environmental Law and Policy Forum in 1991. The Forum is an interdisciplinary semiannual journal published through Duke Law School but with a strong connection to Duke University’s Nicholas School of the Environment. The Forum publishes legal and policy articles from academics and professionals as well as student notes. To fulfill its commitment to both legal and policy analyses of environmental issues, many of the Forum’s forty or so staff members are students from the Nicholas School of the Environment and the Sanford School of Public Policy.

Duke Forum for Law and Social Change. Established in 2008, the Duke Forum for Law and Social Change is Duke Law School’s newest journal. The Forum aims to bring concrete social issues to the forefront of the Duke Law community through its annual symposium and accompanying publication, as well as through semi-annual Town Hall Forums. Each year, the Forum focuses on one theme relating to social change. The themes cover a wide range of social issues, from poverty initiatives, to education policies, to the continuing impacts of discrimination. Approximately fifteen rising second-year students are invited to join the Forum each year. Members are selected on the basis of academic performance, strong writing ability, and an engaging personal statement.

Duke Journal of Gender Law and Policy. The Duke Journal of Gender Law and Policy was established in 1994. It is an interdisciplinary publication devoted to discussing issues of gender, race, class, and sexuality in the context of law and public policy. The journal encourages works from multiple perspectives, with particular emphasis on practical analysis, in an effort to identify the connections between social science and the law, scholarship and public policy, and academic work and professional practice. Approximately fourteen staff members are selected on an annual basis to serve on this journal.

Duke Law and Technology Review. Duke Law and Technology Review is a groundbreaking e-journal committed to publishing short, timely and accessible essays at the intersection of law and technology. Each essay, called an issue brief or iBrief is generally ten to twenty pages in length and combines the readability of a journalistic article with scholarly analysis. Keeping pace with evolving technology, Duke Law and Technology Review focuses on cutting-edge legal issues that arise in areas such as intellectual property, business law, free speech and privacy, telecommunications criminal law, and bioethics.

Duke Journal of Constitutional Law and Public Policy. The Duke Journal of Constitutional Law and Public Policy is a scholarly publication that examines legal issues at the intersection of constitutional litigation and public policy. The Journal serves both as a practical resource for lawyers, judges, and legislators who confront cutting-edge constitutional and public policy issues and as a forum for intellectual discourse surrounding these issues. The Journal aims to enhance the community’s understanding of constitutional law and public policy, and to arm practitioners with arguments and proposals for reform. To address the timeliest issues in the field, the Journal regularly publishes academic and student commentary online in addition to a print edition each spring. Approximately seventeen rising second-year students are invited to join the staff each year.

Office of Student Affairs

The goals of the Office of Student Affairs are to ensure a collegial and supportive experience for all students and to assist students in maximizing the effectiveness of their individual efforts by providing opportunities for academic, leadership, professional, and personal development. The office staff works to create a climate in which each student is encouraged to develop individual talents and strengths through means which contribute to the overall quality of the community.

The office efforts are focused on three areas: (1) support of academic work; (2) support of activities to complement student academic work; and (3) support of activities of student life unrelated to academic study. Within these areas of involvement, staff members help administer Duke Law School rules and policies, including the Honor
Duke Law Student Organizations

Student organizations at Duke Law School represent a wide variety of cultural, intellectual, social, political, athletic, religious, and artistic interests, and their activities are an important complement to the curriculum. Students participate in more than forty organizations under the umbrella of the Duke Bar Association (DBA), Duke Law’s student government. The DBA funds student groups, organizes social and community service events, and acts as a liaison between students, the faculty, and the administration. Any Duke Law student interested in starting a new organization may propose a charter to the DBA.

American Bar Association Law Student Division. The ABA/LSD promotes law student contact with the nation’s largest professional association for lawyers, the American Bar Association. Each year the student body elects ABA/LSD representatives who serve as liaisons between students and the ABA. For a small enrollment fee, any law student may join the Law Student Division and receive product discounts, a subscription to the ABA magazine, Student Lawyer, and information about the ABA’s programs and publications on specialized areas of the law. The ABA/LSD also promotes various advocacy and essay contests throughout the school year.

Admiralty and Maritime Law Society. The Duke University School of Law Admiralty and Maritime Law Society is established to raise awareness and explore various aspects of admiralty and maritime law for those who intend to enter the field or have a general interest. The Admiralty and Maritime Law Society seeks to provide a series of speakers, to discuss a range of both contemporary and historical issues in maritime law, as well as to connect members with current practitioners and other in the field.

American Civil Liberties Union. The Duke Law ACLU seeks to contribute to the academic dialogue of the Duke community by fostering intelligent and meaningful discussion of civil and individual liberties.

American Constitution Society. The American Constitution Society for Law and Policy is one of the nation’s leading progressive legal organizations. Founded in 2001, ACS is composed of law students, lawyers, scholars, judges, policymakers, activists, and other concerned individuals who are working to ensure that the fundamental principles of human dignity, individual rights and liberties, genuine equality, and access to justice are in their rightful place in American law.

Animal Legal Defense Fund. The Duke Law chapter of the Student Animal Legal Defense Fund (SALDF) is dedicated to providing a forum for education, discussion, and scholarship in the field of animal law for students at the law school. Furthermore, the SALDF is dedicated to helping Duke Law School students explore ways of incorporating the practice of animal law into their legal careers after law school.

Asian Law Students Association. ALSA provides a forum in which members of the law school community can explore issues and engage in activities of interest to American students of Asian descent, foreign students from Asia, and other students and alumni interested in Asia and law. ALSA currently belongs to the National Asian Pacific American Law Students Association. In attending the national conferences of NAPALSA, group members may engage in dialogue with other law school students and maintain contact with the National Pacific Bar Association. In addition, ALSA fosters the social interaction of its members within Duke Law School and among the graduate and professional schools by hosting events such as a welcome dinner and a Lunar New Year dumpling celebration.

Association for Social Entrepreneurship & Innovation. The Duke Law Association for Social Entrepreneurship & Innovation (ASEI) promotes entrepreneurial legal leadership in the service of society by: supporting students interested in applying legal expertise to advance positive social change; developing social entrepreneurship-related career resources and networking opportunities; increasing awareness of social entrepreneurship and innovation at Duke Law; collaborating with social entrepreneurship organizations throughout the Duke community; and facilitating opportunities for student involvement in community projects at the intersection of law and social enterprise.

Black Graduate and Professional Student Association. The Black Graduate and Professional Student Association is an organization designed to represent all minority graduate and professional students on the Duke University campus. BGPSA’s primary mission is to enhance the Duke experience for members through community service, social, and academically based programming. As an umbrella organization, members include students from the following groups: Black & Latino MBA Organization, Black Law Students Association, Black Seminarians Union, Bouchet Society, Hurston-James Society, and Student National Medical Association. Through academic forums, luncheons, community service initiatives, social events, and a spring recognition ceremony, BGPSA hopes to assist in the development of future minority leadership in the Duke community and the world at-large.

Black Law Students Association. The Black Law Students Association exists to address the unique needs and concerns of the black law students at Duke Law School, and to promote diversity within the Duke Law community and within the legal profession. Through the use of consistent social interaction and programming geared largely toward scholarship, career development, and community assistance, BLSA fosters academic achievement, community involvement, and, ultimately, the development of future black leadership in the legal profession.

Business Law Society. The Business Law Society promotes social and academic interaction among Duke Law students interested in the various aspects of business, corporate, and financial law. BLS sponsors social activities, speakers, and symposia—including its showcase event, “Esq.”—that encourage cultural exchange and academic discussion, and generally provides a forum through which members may pursue their interests in developing a career in business law. The goal of the BLS is to enhance the legal education of its members and promote an interdisciplinary curriculum in business, corporate, and financial law.

Christian Legal Society. The Duke Law School chapter of the Christian Legal Society is a multi-denominational fellowship of Christian law students working to integrate their faith in Christ with their law school experience and their legal careers. They seek to fulfill this mission through Bible study, meetings, prayer, and outreach endeavors, such as group-sponsored coffee breaks and bearing witness to the character of God individually in their other activities in the law school.

Coalition Against Gendered Violence. The group’s mission is threefold: 1) to raise awareness in the Duke Law community about domestic violence and sexual assault; 2) to foster student advocacy on behalf of domestic violence and sexual assault survivors; and 3) to identify gaps in services available to domestic violence and sexual assault victims in the Triangle area and develop projects to fill those gaps.

Court Jesters. The Court Jesters, Duke Law’s improv comedy group, aims to create a supportive and creative community of Duke Law students wishing to develop their oratory, improvisational, and interpersonal skills in a comedic and safe setting. Trust and confidence developed through improv can allow students to try new things and grow as people and advocates.

Duke Bar Association. The Duke Bar Association coordinates professional, social, and other extracurricular activities of the student body. The DBA resembles in its composition and purpose both a university student government and a professional bar association. It addresses student grievances and serves as a mediator between students, faculty, and the administration. The association oversees all student organizations, publicizes Duke Law School activities, sponsors athletic and social programs, and disburses funds to support the school’s organizations. The DBA also hosts robust soccer, bowling, and softball leagues, bringing students together from each class, both genders, and the dozens of countries represented at Duke Law, proving a popular choice for relaxing outside of law school.

Duke Education Law and Policy Society. The Duke Education Law and Policy Society is an interdisciplinary organization of students and faculty from Duke Law School and the Sanford School of Public Policy. The Society promotes dialogue, research, and professional development in the area of education law and policy by (1) creating a community of individuals engaged in educational issues; (2) engaging in education-oriented service activities; and (3) sponsoring symposia and lectures from local and national scholars and practitioners, research presentations, and other events for the social and academic enrichment of its members and the broader university community. The society addresses all issues dealing with education, including rural and urban education, higher education, judicial remedies, racial, ethnic, and gender equality, administration-labor relations, and the achievement gap.

Duke Environmental Law Society. Founded in 1988, Duke Environmental Law Society strives to promote student discussion and awareness of environmental issues. This is achieved by hosting individual speakers and panels to facilitate student discussions, participating in national competitions and conferences, and coordinating social and community service events. The goals of the DELS are to enhance legal education through the creation of a vital environmental law program at Duke Law and to promote career opportunities in environmental law in both the public and private sectors. Membership is open to all interested students.

Duke International Moot Court Society. The Duke International Moot Court Society (IMCS) supports Duke Law’s numerous international moot court teams. Every year, Duke Law sends teams around the world to participate in advocacy competitions with international subject matter, including the international law of trade (WTO), human rights (ECHR/IACHR), international crimes (ICC/ICTY/ICTR), foreign investment (ICSID/UNCITRAL), and private commercial arbitration (CISG/UNIDROIT). Past years’ teams have competed in Taiwan, Geneva, Vienna, Ottawa, the Dominican Republic, and Washington, DC. IMCS helps to sponsor Duke Law’s international moot court teams and facilitates cooperation among them. IMCS is supervised by an executive board. Membership is open to the entire student body.

Duke JD/MBA Club. The mission of the Duke JD/MBA Club is to bring together JD/MBA students to discuss topics of mutual interest, explore career options, and discuss and resolve the unique issues encountered by JD/MBA students during matriculation through the program. Specifically, the society seeks to serve as an advocate and organizational voice to both The Fuqua School of Business and Duke Law School for JD/MBAs on curricular and other issues; develop recommendations to the faculty and administrations of both schools for curricular innovation and improvement; and work with admissions offices from both schools to recruit for and expand the dual-degree programs at both schools.

Duke Law Book Club. The Duke Law Book Club gathers to read and discuss works of literature chosen by the group. A recent selection was “The Good Soldier” by Ford Madox Ford.

Duke Law Democrats. Duke Law Democrats is an organization of law students interested in democratic issues. Members promote progressive ideals by participating in the political process, exploring democratic issues in the legal profession, and providing a forum for political discussion.

Duke Law Drama Society. Whether acting on a stage or in a courtroom, many lawyers are thespians at heart. For students who like to work behind the scenes or shine in the spotlight, there’s a place in the Duke Law Drama Society. The society welcomes all potential directors, actors, playwrights, comics, musicians, dancers, and enthusiastic folk. Duke Law students are encouraged to indulge their dramatic flair by participating in student-produced works and joining the drama society.

Duke Litigators. Duke Litigators is an organization for those interested in a litigation career path. In this dynamic growing field the group focuses on both the skills a litigator would need to be successful, as well as, bringing the real world to Duke Law students. Their mission is to bridge the gap between the Duke Law community and the real world practice of litigation. They aim to achieve this through speaking events, workshops, and social events with practicing litigators.

Federalist Society. The Duke chapter of the Federalist Society is a group of conservative and libertarian students interested in the current state of legal order. The society was founded on the principles that the state exists to preserve freedom, that the separation of governmental powers is central to the United States Constitution, and that it is the province and duty of the judiciary to say what the law is, not what it should be. The society seeks both to promote an awareness of these principles and to further their application through its activities. In the past, the group has hosted distinguished judges and other speakers and has sponsored debates between members of the academic community. Membership is open to interested students.

Government and Public Service Society. The GPS Society is a support group for students interested in pursuing a public interest career. We hold social events for like-minded law students, help organize the annual GPS Symposium, and schedule speakers from the public interest field to talk to students.
Graduate and Professional Student Council. The Duke University GPSC advocates for students pursuing advanced degrees in all of the graduate and professional schools, serving as an umbrella organization for local student governments and student groups. GPSC programming aims to foster social cohesiveness and promote increased interaction across departments and schools. In addition, GPSC oversees election of the Graduate and Professional Young Trustee, appointment to the Board of Trustees standing committees, and selection of representatives to many university committees. The General Assembly's bimonthly meetings are open to all.

Haiti Legal Advocacy Project. The Haiti Legal Advocacy Project is an advocacy and interest group that focuses on legal, relief, and development issues in Haiti. This past spring the group traveled to Port au Prince to film a short advocacy piece for the Institute for Justice and Democracy in Haiti on the forced evictions of internally displaced persons from camps. Their long-term goal is to partner with public interest and pro bono lawyers in Haiti and abroad to apply their legal skills to ongoing legal efforts in Haiti, and work to improve Haitians' access to their rights and legal system.

Health Law Society. The Health Law Society is an interdisciplinary organization of students and faculty with interests in exploring professional and academic aspects of health care. The society focuses on the following general areas: curricular expansion and integration, public service and education, and professional development. HLS draws on the surrounding academic community to bring educational events to Duke Law School and to draw on other diverse resources available within its membership to build the understanding of health care issues within the law school.

Hispanic Law Students Association. The goal of HLSA is to unite Hispanic law students and to provide a support network to connect students with global alumni. The organization was created to aid new students making the transition to law school, and to encourage prospective Hispanic students to come to Duke. HLSA brings together a variety of individuals in order to discuss the issues they will face as Hispanic lawyers in the future, including the responsibility of a Hispanic lawyer in society, the need for positive role models in Hispanic communities, and the availability of inexpensive/free legal aid. These discussions are intermingled with social activities where Hispanic and other law students can experience the richness of the Hispanic culture. HLSA is also active in the University Hispanic group, MIGENTE, which sponsors salsa parties and other social events. HLSA endeavors to enhance Duke Law School's environment by sharing the richness of the Hispanic culture with the school.

Human Rights Law Society. The Human Rights Law Society works to achieve three major objectives. First, they provide a forum for students interested in human rights to share their ideas and work together to put on events and initiatives. Second, they serve the Law School and the larger Duke community by providing information and discussion about human rights. Lastly, they work to make careers in human rights law a feasible option for more law students by developing connections with human rights organizations and building networks among Duke graduates.

Immigrant Education Project. The Immigrant Education Project strives to provide immigrants in the Triangle area a sense of security and control over their lives by educating immigrant teenagers and adults about their legal rights and responsibilities in accordance with immigration law, and informing them of where they can go for low-cost immigration legal help and other services.

Innocence Project. Even innocent people can become victims of the legal system. Duke law students work in conjunction with students from other North Carolina schools and in cooperation with the North Carolina Center on Actual Innocence to identify cases of potential innocence among North Carolina prisoners. Cases move through a three-stage process: (1) identification of innocence claims from letters written to the project coordinators; (2) review of the materials and recommendation for future action; and (3) student/attorney investigation of the cases in an effort to prove actual innocence. Students can be involved at any stage of the process they choose, and many will see a case through from start to finish. Through their work on the Innocence Project, students report a greater appreciation for and sense of perspective about their importance in the US legal system.

Intellectual Property and Cyberlaw Society. The Intellectual Property and Cyberlaw Society brings together law students and scientists doing cutting-edge work in this booming field. The group sponsors speakers and panel discussions on patent, trademark, copyright, telecommunications, and other closely related areas. The group also sponsors the annual “Hot Topics” symposium, which attracts accomplished practitioners working in different aspects of intellectual property law.
International Criminal Court Student Network. The International Criminal Court Student Network helps students combine passions in criminal law and international law through education and discussion on issues and developments in the International Criminal Court. The ICCSN sponsors lectures as well as student trips to The Hague.

International Law Society. The ILS facilitates involvement in and awareness of a wide set of international legal issues by organizing thematic conferences, student presentations and debates, language tables, informal gatherings for the international law community at Duke, and by bringing in a variety of guest speakers. Past ILS events have included presentations by foreign LLM students on issues affecting their home countries, a conference on the legal and humanitarian precedent set by the US intervention in Afghanistan, film screenings, panels with professors, and trips to international law conferences. Members of the ILS recently have given outstanding performances in moot court competitions dealing with international law, such as the Jessup International Law Moot Court Competition and the WTO Moot Court Competition.

Iraqi Refugee Assistance Project. The Iraqi Refugee Assistance Project provides legal representation and policy advocacy on behalf of Iraqi refugees in the Middle East seeking resettlement and those in America who have been resettled. IRAP matches law students with pro bono supervising attorneys to help refugee applicants successfully navigate the rules and processes for resettlement in a safe third country. IRAP offers students the opportunity to do substantive legal work while helping those in dire need.

J. Reuben Clark Society. This organization is based on its members’ desire to affirm the strength brought to the law by a lawyer's personal religious conviction. It strives through public service and professional excellence to promote fairness and virtue founded upon the rule of law. The organization also represents the contingent of Latter-day Saint law students at Duke Law School, but is open to all students.

Jewish Law Students Association. JLSA is an organization of students and faculty, primarily from Duke Law School but including many nonlaw students, who share an interest in Judaism and Judaism-related issues. JLSA offers a variety of social events, such as a Hanukkah party, wine tastings, and bagel brunches. JLSA also offers educational events, such as “lunch and learns” with local rabbis, and lectures, seminars, and religious programming, such as the Graduate Student Shabbat, Breakfast, and Passover Seder.

Law & Economics Society. The Duke Law and Economics Society provides a forum for Duke Law students interested in the academic field of law and economics. We aim to further the Duke Law community experience by exposing students to emerging research in the field and by fostering discussion and thought about the interesting ways in which the fields of law and economics interact.

Law & Entrepreneurship Society. The Law & Entrepreneurship Society provides a space for law students interested in entrepreneurship to learn more about the local and national entrepreneurial community as well as ways to combine legal expertise with an entrepreneurial spirit.

Law & History Society. The Law & History Society is an interdisciplinary organization that seeks to provide a forum for law students who are interested in the study of history. Throughout the year, the Society invites scholars of history to the law school with the aim of providing engaging discourse that bridges the gap between the two disciplines.

Mock Trial Board. The Mock Trial Board is a student-run organization that seeks to promote the engagement of students in mock trial competitions at both the intra- and interscholastic levels and, in doing so, to promote the practical development of aspiring lawyers at Duke Law School. The Mock Trial Board hosts the intrascholastic Duke Mock Trial Tournament (Twiggs Beskind Cup) and sends teams to compete in interscholastic competitions, such as the American Trial Lawyers Association Competition and the National Trial Competition.

Moot Court Board. The Moot Court Board is composed of second- and third-year students who represent the highest level of oral and appellate advocacy at Duke Law School. Members are selected from the top finishers in intramural moot court competitions and represent Duke at interscholastic tournaments around the country. Board members also direct the annual Hardt Cup and Dean’s Cup intramural competitions.

National Security Law Society. National Security Law Society is a nonpartisan organization with three chief goals: exploring careers and opportunities in national security law; discussing matters in the field in forums led by professional experts and by fellow students; and promoting the involvement of Duke Law students in national security law, chiefly by facilitating summer internships and building an alumni network of graduates working in the field.
Off the Record A Capella. Off the Record, the premier co-ed a cappella group at Duke University School of Law, strives to provide a musical outlet for talented Duke Law students, promote a cheerful school environment with entertaining performances, and embody the ideals of Duke Law beyond the school’s academic excellence. Our members share great pride in our commitment to each other, in every harmony we create, and in the community for which we sing.

OutLaw. OutLaw’s goal is to both educate and become involved with the law school and surrounding community regarding legal and social issues relevant to Lesbian, Gay, Bi-sexual, and Transgender (LGBT) people, as well as to provide a fun and comfortable social network for LGBT students at Duke.

Public Interest Law Foundation. The Public Interest Law Foundation is a student-run nonprofit organization at Duke Law School that is dedicated to helping students finance their summer public interest legal internships. PILF carries out its mission by sponsoring various fundraising events throughout the year and then distributing the proceeds as fellowships to both first- and second-year law students. PILF’s signature event is a semi-formal auction, held in conjunction with a PILF-sponsored parents’ weekend. The event raises thousands of dollars for student fellowships.

Refugee Asylum Support Project. RASP was developed with the Association of the Bar for the City of New York and their refugee program. Students work with lawyers in New York to help complete research used in the asylum cases. The program offers students the opportunity not only to learn different aspects of immigration law, but also about conflict situations throughout the world from first-hand accounts of those seeking asylum.

The SJD Association. The SJD Association aims to represent the interests of the Doctor of Juridical Science (SJD) students and candidates at Duke Law School. We also welcome participation from students who are interested in pursuing careers in academia.

South Asian Law Students Association. SALSA is committed to being a forum for interaction through social and cultural events relating to South Asian Americans. SALSA works closely with Duke Diya, one of the university’s largest student organizations, composed of hundreds of undergraduate and graduate students. SALSA also serves as a network and resource for its members to advance their academic and career goals. SALSA accomplishes this by offering advice and resources on classes and exams, sharing knowledge about summer positions, and providing practicing attorneys and law clerks as mentors. SALSA is open to all law students and encourages anyone interested in South Asian culture to join.

Southern Justice Spring Break. Each year, Duke Law students have the opportunity to travel to a variety of communities around the nation, including New Orleans, Atlanta, Miami, and rural North Carolina, and partner with local organizations to assist in providing legal services to underserved and underrepresented individuals.

Sports and Entertainment Law Society. SELS introduces interested students to the diverse and complex fields of sports and entertainment law. Sports law is an amalgamation of many legal disciplines ranging from antitrust law to tax law; entertainment law is equally wide-ranging, encompassing more areas of law than most other legal disciplines. Both of these fields are dynamic and ever-changing, with new issues arising on an almost daily basis due to recent court decisions, new legislation, and regulations.

Street Law. Duke Law School's Street Law program is part of a nationwide Street Law program through which law students provide practical, participatory education about law, democracy, and human rights by teaching secondary school students about the US Constitution and Bill of Rights. Duke has two Street Law projects: Middle School Mock Trial, and the Durham Youth Home. Through the Middle School Mock Trial project, Duke Law students work with groups of middle schoolers to help them choose and play out roles in a simulated criminal or civil trial that is held at the law school, where law students serve as “jury” and a local judge presides Through the Durham Youth Home Street Law Project, Duke law students work with kids in juvenile detention, to teach them about the criminal justice system, children's rights, the political system and democracy. Through the Street Law Mock Trial Teen Court Collaborative Duke Law students assist middle school students in preparing arguments for juvenile cases in the Durham County Teen Court system. The goal of this program is to establish satellite courts to assist in alleviating the overcrowding of the current Durham County Teen Court system.
Student Organization for Legal Issues in the Middle East and North Africa. SOLIMENA is dedicated to providing educational, research, and professional development opportunities for students with an interest in the region and its peoples. The organization strives to stimulate dialogue and integrate discussion about the Middle East and North Africa into the law school curriculum and programming. SOLIMENA functions as a forum in which people can feel comfortable expressing all kinds of ideas and viewpoints, and works to promote the values of openness, tolerance, and respect. SOLIMENA aims to create a network of students, faculty, and administrators devoted to analyzing the legal, political, economic, and cultural complexities of the region through sustainable initiatives that will make a permanent mark on the law school community.

Texas Club. Chartered on March 2 (Texas Independence Day), the Texas Club represents the Lone Star State at our great law school. The purpose is to be a resource for Texans at Duke Law, as well as for those interested in practicing law in Texas after graduation.

Transfer Students Association. This organization is committed to making the integration to Duke Law School an easier process for incoming transfer students. The organization benefits both the individual transfer student and the overall Duke Law community. Prospective transfer students benefit from the opportunity to ask current transfer students about their experience at Duke and about transferring in general. Transfer students also benefit from an immediate formal support group upon arrival to allow for a quicker integration into the greater Duke Law community. Additionally, the greater Duke Law community benefits from being able to participate in TSA social events that are designed to help transfers and other students integrate and meet one another early in the semester.

Veterans Disability Assistance Project. Started in 2006, the Veterans Disability Assistance Project helps local veterans receive the benefits they deserve. Students undergo extensive training, meet and screen prospective clients during intake sessions, and prepare initial disabilities claims and appeals under the supervision of volunteer attorneys accredited by the Veterans’ Administration. The project also participates in community veteran events and holds fundraisers for groups that assist injured veterans. This group allows students to both hone their legal skills and help those who have served our country.

Video Game Law Society. The Video Game Law Society is a student-run organization dedicated to exploring the emerging legal issues in the worldwide gaming industry. They also focus on the social and competitive aspects of gaming by creating opportunities for students to connect outside of the classroom.

Volunteer Income Tax Assistance. VITA’s mission is to give back to the Durham community by filing tax returns for low-income and minority taxpayers so that they may receive the largest refund available to them without undergoing the cost of using a paid preparer.

Women Law Students Association. The mission of the Women Law Students Association is to help women thrive in our law school and to ease the transition between the academic and the work environments. WLSA strives to create a community that will raise awareness of women’s issues and move toward the betterment of women in the legal profession. We also seek to provide a forum for students to enhance their Duke University School of Law experience. All law students, male and female, may join WLSA. Additionally, our events are open to the entire Duke community.

Entertainment and Recreation

Many recreational facilities are available to students on Duke’s campus. The Bryan Center houses cafes, theaters, lounges, patios, ping pong, pool, and foosball tables, and an art gallery. The student-run Duke University Union presents cultural activities, including major speakers, musical performances, art exhibits, radio and television programs, and theatrical productions. Durham and nearby areas offer additional entertainment options. Vibrant revitalization efforts throughout downtown Durham and at the American Tobacco Campus have resulted in a wealth of diverse eateries and entertainment venues.

Duke is ideally situated to provide sports and recreation opportunities for students, both on and off campus. Law students may use the Wilson Recreation Center, as well as the university’s tennis courts, swimming pools, fitness trails, and golf course. Near campus, students enjoy woodland hiking, horseback riding, trail biking, and sailing. Law student teams participate in intramural sports such as softball, basketball, and soccer. North Carolina’s mild climate makes outdoor activities possible during most of the school year. Weekend excursions to other parts of the state can be very rewarding; several Appalachian ski slopes are less than four hours away, and Atlantic beaches are less than three hours away.
Duke is a member of the Atlantic Coast Conference, and the university’s sports teams compete on campus during the school year. In particular, Duke’s legendary men’s and women’s basketball teams have made the sport a passion for the “Dukies.” Many law students join the annual camp out and lottery for basketball tickets.

Academic Year Employment

The study of law is demanding. It is designed to occupy the full attention of students and calls for the highest level of concentration. It is unwise for students to dilute their efforts with outside work, especially during the critical first year of study. Accordingly, no first-year student shall engage in employment without permission of the associate dean, and in no case shall engage in employment for more than twenty hours per week. While students should limit their employment during the school year for academic reasons, no student may be employed for more than twenty hours per week during the academic year. This twenty-hour limitation is not only a rule of Duke Law School, but it is also an American Bar Association condition for full-time students who are seeking to graduate in three years.

For those who find some outside earnings necessary to meet the expense of studying law at Duke, arrangements have been made to provide some part-time employment at the law school. A number of positions in the law library are filled by law students, and many students are employed in their second or third years as research assistants for faculty members.

Law student spouses who seek employment will find opportunities comparable to those in most other areas of the country. Laboratory workers, computer programmers, development officers, teachers, and medical personnel are some of the positions spouses have typically held in the past. The University Human Resources, Duke Temporary Services, and the medical center personnel offices assist interested persons in locating suitable employment on campus.

Public Interest and Pro Bono Programs

Programs that supplement and enrich the curricular learning for students are sponsored by many departments at Duke Law School, including the Office of Public Interest and Pro Bono. Some of the public interest and pro bono programs and events are described here. For more information, see http://law.duke.edu/publicinterest/.

Pro Bono Project. The Pro Bono Project provides Duke Law students with an opportunity to hone their legal and professional skills and build relationships important to their future careers, while also providing an important public service to the community.

Each year, students contribute thousands of hours to organizations in the local community and nationally through pro bono projects. Students may choose individual placements supervised by community attorneys or join a student-organized group project. Group pro bono projects include: Cancer Pro Bono Project; Coalition Against Gendered Violence; Guardian ad Litem; Environmental Law Project; Immigration Education Project; Innocence Project; Iraqi Asylum Support Project (IRAP); Justice Matters (a Christian Legal Society pro bono project); Legal Aid of North Carolina (LANC) Ambassadors Project; Mediation Project; NC Wills Project; Refugee Asylum Support Project (RASP); Social Enterprise Law Project; Southern Justice Spring Break Trip; Street Law; Teen Court; Veteran’s Disability Assistance Project; and Volunteer Income Tax Assistance Project (VITA).

Public Interest Retreat. The Public Interest Retreat, started in 1998, is an annual weekend retreat for members of the Duke Law community who are interested in public interest or public service as part of their legal careers. The retreat provides an opportunity for students, faculty and administrators to reflect on their public service aspirations and career-planning. Distinguished speakers, including alumni working in public interest, are invited each year to address the participants as well as to participate in small group activities and workshops.

Summer Public Interest Fellowships. Duke Law students can avail themselves of numerous summer fellowship grants that are offered only to Duke Law students. These funds enable students to accept otherwise unpaid employment with government and nonprofit employers in the United States and abroad. Funding comes through a number of endowments set up to provide Summer Public Interest Fellowships, which are offered on a competitive basis to 1L and 2L students. The Dean’s Summer Service Grant provides guaranteed funding to any 2L student who secures summer public interest or government employment, and also completes ten hours of pro bono service during the school year. Another large source of funding for summer fellowship grants for Duke Law students is raised by the students themselves through the Public Interest Law Foundation (PILF).

Externship Program. The Office of Public Interest and Pro Bono also administers the Externship Program, through which students may engage in unpaid work for credit with a nonprofit organization, government office, or judicial organization. The Externship Program includes the Duke in DC, and Federal Public Defender integrated externship course experiences.
Library and Academic Technologies

Duke Law provides library and technological support for research and learning using an innovative approach that integrates the programs of the law library and the academic technologies department. The stated mission of Duke Law School Information Services focuses on providing an information environment to prepare Duke Law students for responsible and productive lives in the legal profession.

J. Michael Goodson Law Library

Law is a research-oriented profession, and the published sources of law, in print and electronic formats, are the basic working materials for both the practicing attorney and the legal scholar. Recognizing its place at the center of the Duke Law School community, the Goodson Law Library was fully renovated in 2008. The project expands the strengths of the library in providing a mix of spaces for study, research and reflection, encouraging both collaborative projects and individual quiet study, and integrating technology and library services. At Duke, law students have ready access to the materials of legal research through the resources of outstanding collections of print and electronic information sources and the support of highly trained librarians to help them develop research skills to last throughout their professional careers. The library offers more than 500 seats in individual study carrels, at tables, and in reservable study rooms, as well as soft seating. More information about the library can be found at http://law.duke.edu/lib. Keep up with current news and announcements by following the Goodson Blogson at http://dukelawref.blogspot.com/.

Services

The success of a law school library depends as much on the quality of the services it provides as on the strengths of its collection. At Duke, a unified service desk provides law students streamlined, one-stop assistance with circulation, reference, computing, or other technology tasks from a highly knowledgeable and skilled staff. The library staff includes eleven librarians with graduate degrees, seven of whom also hold additional degrees in law. Law-trained staff members serve as instructors in the first-year research and writing program and regularly offer seminars in topics of advanced legal research. An Empirical Research Analyst assists faculty members with statistical projects, and is available for consultation with students and journal editors. The Digital Initiatives Librarian provides support applications and offers programming for faculty scholarship, teaching and learning.

Collections

The Goodson Law Library serves as a resource for legal materials for both the law school and the university community. The law library increasingly prefers electronic sources of legal information while continuing to develop and maintain in house collections of print and other resources to support research and scholarship at all levels and time periods. With more than 520,000 volumes, 43,000 e-books and forty databases it is a major research collection of legal literature that includes the primary sources of law from courts, legislatures and administrative agencies,
The Academic Technologies department was founded on the principle of convergence—the convergence of technologies that create, store, manipulate and present digital data of all kinds, from plain text e-mails to rich multimedia. Academic Technologies provides desktop, laptop and mobile device support, and collaborates with Duke’s other IT organizations, especially the Office of Information Technology, to assure a full range of IT services is available to the school. On behalf of the law school we maintain computers and printers in the library dedicated to student use. We are responsible for the web presence of the law school and for audio-visual technologies in all classrooms. The department provides training and support directly to faculty and students who wish to use technology in all aspects of the educational experience. Services are outlined at http://law.duke.edu/actech/.

The law school website has pages for departments and most programs. All the school’\'s journals have been available online, in full text and searchable, since 1997; conferences and major addresses at the law school are usually live webcast and archived on the web. The majority of courses have Sakai course sites that provide access for students to course e-mail lists, syllabi, e-reserves and other materials.

The law school classrooms are fully networked and have built-in capabilities to project images from computers, DVDs and Blu-Ray discs. The classrooms have power at nearly every student seat, and network access for all laptops through ubiquitous Wi-Fi and ethernet cable connections available at many seats. All standard classrooms but one can be used for videoconferencing, and class sessions can be recorded either centrally or in the room. All A/V equipment can be used by students for classes, or by student groups at other times.

The Scheinman Media Lab and the Digital Initiatives Lab have video recording equipment, an all-digital production facility and knowledgeable staff, whose mission is to assist in the production of educational materials, whether faculty or student produced, and to document key events and presentations at the law school.

The school is a member of the Computer Assisted Legal Instruction consortium (CALI), and makes CALI exercises freely available to students to support the law school curriculum.

The law school strongly recommends that all entering students own notebook computers. Academic Technologies staff members can offer advice to students about computer purchases and assist law students in making productive use of computers as an integral part of their law school experience. Student computer recommendations and orientation materials can be viewed at http://law.duke.edu/actech/orientation/.

The senior staff of Information Services includes:
- Richard A. Danner, BA, MS, JD, Senior Associate Dean for Information Services and Rufty Research Professor of Law;
- Melanie J. Dunshee, BA, JD, MALS, Assistant Dean for Library Services and Senior Lecturing Fellow; and
- Wayne Miller, BA, PhD, Assistant Dean for Academic Technologies and Senior Lecturing Fellow.
International Students

International Students at Duke

Duke Law School warmly welcomes international students from countries throughout the world to all its programs of study. The presence of students from a wide variety of cultures and legal systems greatly enhances the education of all Duke Law School students. Highly qualified foreign university graduates who seek exposure to the American legal system and the legal profession are encouraged to apply to one of the following degree programs. Information about graduate programs for international students at Duke University School of Law and study abroad opportunities is also available online at http://law.duke.edu/international/.

Degree Programs for International Students

Juris Doctor (JD)

International students with excellent academic qualifications and English proficiency may seek admission to pursue the JD and joint-degree programs. Applicants should recognize that they will enter a program designed for extremely capable professional students who already possess a substantial background in American culture and familiarity with the American educational system. The burdens of a new educational system in a wholly new environment are especially demanding for students who have not previously studied in the United States.

International applicants whose first language is not English must present a high score on the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL). Applicants who already hold a university-level degree from an English medium institution may, however, inquire about exemption from this requirement. All JD applicants are required to take the Law School Admission Test (LSAT). Candidates who have earned professional law degrees in countries with a legal system not dissimilar to that found in the United States or who have extraordinary records in their first law degree may be able to receive credit for as much as one-third of the coursework required for the completion of the JD degree. All inquiries about the JD program should be directed to the Duke Law School Office of Admissions, which oversees admissions to this program. For more information, visit http://law.duke.edu/admis/.

Master of Laws in Law and Entrepreneurship (LLM)

Outstanding international applicants who hold a JD or LLM from an American law school or are a currently active member of a bar in at least one US jurisdiction may be considered for admission to this program. Please review the information about this degree in the chapter "Degree Programs" on page 102, and the admissions process in the chapter "Admissions" on page 44, or contact the admissions office or visit their website at http://law.duke.edu/admis/ for more information.

Master of Laws (LLM)

The Duke LLM degree program is designed for graduates of law faculties outside of the United States. The LLM program typically enrolls approximately ninety students from as many as thirty-five different countries. Participants in the LLM program will include practicing lawyers; judges; academicians; prosecutors; staff members from ministries, banks and corporations; and a small number of outstanding recent law graduates.
The LLM degree requires two semesters of study in residence at Duke. Students may elect to take one first-year course, which will bring them into contact with entering American JD students who are facing similar academic challenges for the first time. LLM students will also enroll in a seminar or an independent study course with a faculty member, the end product of either being the submission of a substantial piece of written work by the student. LLM students as a group undertake a two-credit introduction to American law course. The course is taught by a Duke Law faculty member and provides insight into distinctive aspects of American law. LLM students have the opportunity to visit North Carolina and Durham courts and meet attorneys practicing in a variety of areas. A two-credit legal analysis, research and writing course is required of LLM students who do not have a strong common law background. The course prepares students for the kinds of writing responsibilities expected of qualified American law practitioners. All LLM students will receive orientation to the law library and the computer system. Additional courses are individually selected by the student with the guidance of a faculty advisor. LLM students participate in classes with JD students and the same grading scale is applied. International students whose first language is not English and who meet other specified criteria, however, may receive extra time on final examinations. Students are expected to complete the degree in one year unless special alternative arrangements are made.

Doctor of Juridical Science (SJD)

International students who have already earned a degree in American law or in a common law country at the master’s level may apply for admission to the SJD program. Admission is extremely selective, and students should apply only if they have achieved exceptional academic records at both their home and their American institutions. SJD candidates are expected to be able to demonstrate that they have the capacity to conduct original research and to produce a thesis that will be a significant contribution to legal scholarship. Applicants should submit transcripts from all previous academic institutions at which they have studied; references from at least two faculty members very familiar with the applicant’s credentials, including one from a faculty member acquainted with the applicant’s studies in the United States or common law country; a sample of written work; and a written description of their research interest. Students admitted to provisional candidacy in the SJD program will be asked to complete one to two semesters of coursework at Duke before taking a qualifying exam and developing a proposal for the thesis component of the degree. The student’s research and thesis will be supervised by a faculty member highly qualified in that area of law and by two additional faculty members in the same or related fields. The successful SJD candidate must then receive formal admission to the SJD program. The SJD normally involves a minimum of three to four years. It should be noted that very few students gain admission to this program of study. For additional information, contact the international studies office.

Admission of International Students to LLM or SJD Programs

An admissions process separate from the JD admissions is maintained for foreign students applying to the LLM or SJD programs. Prospective applicants should write for forms and information to Jennifer Maher, associate dean for international studies. An application fee of $70 is charged and should accompany the application. Students from countries where English is not the principal language are required to present a high score on the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL), which is administered by the Educational Testing Service of Princeton, New Jersey. For further information, appropriate officials at the student’s university should be consulted.

Applications and supporting material should reach Duke by January 20. Students are advised that it may take up to two months for TOEFL examination results to reach Duke. Late TOEFL scores and other application materials can seriously delay or even jeopardize admissions decisions. Applicants will be notified of acceptance beginning in late January. Admissions decisions will continue until the LLM class is full. It is recommended that applicants try to apply as early as possible. Admission is for matriculation in the fall semester only. A deposit fee of $500 will be required to confirm acceptance of a position at the law school.

Financial Aid

Duke offers some financial assistance based on merit to outstanding international students. Upon admission, all non-US citizens will need to provide proof of sufficient financial support for tuition and living expenses for the degree program before the university initiates the student visa process. International students admitted to the JD program must demonstrate that they have funds available for all three years of study. Duke Law School does not award new scholarship funds on the basis of need or merit once the student matriculates.
Housing

Duke University has an abundance of well-appointed, reasonably priced housing in the area. Compared to most urban areas, the cost of living and quality of life in Durham are excellent. Most students prefer to have a car since off-campus public transportation is not readily available.

Placement with American Law Firms

International students may find that they would like to complete their legal education with an internship at an American law firm. Students are welcome to use the services of the law school’s Career and Professional Development Center, which has a counselor who works with international students and JD students seeking overseas positions. The office sponsors special sessions for international students in order to explain the placement process, to help with writing resumes and with interview techniques, and to offer other kinds of assistance as necessary. Students from Duke participate in an annual job fair held in New York at which law firms from the United States and abroad interview job applicants. The visa office at Duke will help students obtain permission to engage in a period of practical training following completion of the degree program. Duke Law School cannot guarantee that students will have success in locating a position with an American law firm. To facilitate the job search, international students are advised to make contact with American law firms, if possible, before they leave their home countries. Students who have the benefit of at least two years of legal experience before they pursue the LLM degree are often the most successful in identifying positions with American law firms. Information about taking state bar examinations is available in the Office of Career Services. Many students prepare for a state bar examination at Duke University.

Special Features of Duke for International Students

The size of the international student body at Duke Law School is large enough to make its presence felt at the school, but not so large as to be a totally separate entity. All international students are supported in their efforts to become an integral part of the Duke community. To this end, the university’s International House sponsors orientation sessions, offers the opportunity for foreign students to have a host family in Durham, and provides a number of special programs and services throughout the year. Duke Law School also conducts a week-long orientation for all new students and several separate sessions designated specifically for international student concerns. International students are selected as representatives to the Duke Bar Association. All clubs and associations, the International Law Society and Pro-Bono Program in particular, encourage the participation of international students. The Duke Journal of Comparative & International Law provides opportunities for international students to submit articles and for as many as five LLM students to participate as staff members in the production of the journal.

The Office of the Associate Dean for International Studies is responsible for the admission of international applicants, orientation, academic and adaptation counseling, and other services for international students. Each LLM student is assigned to an academic advisor who offers guidance with course selection. The legal research and writing course is carefully structured to familiarize students with the law library, legal writing techniques of a gradually more demanding nature, and the skills necessary for a beginning law office associate to function effectively. The “Distinctive Aspects of American Law” course provides an introduction to various areas of American law, the legal profession, and the judicial process. The goal of the LLM program is to provide international students with the most complete exposure to American law and culture that can be accomplished in one academic year.

All international students are welcome to attend the law school’s two summer overseas institutes, which are held during the month of July. The Duke-Geneva Institute in Transnational Law is cosponsored by the University of Geneva Faculty of Law and located in Geneva, Switzerland. The Asia-America Institute in Transnational Law is conducted in Hong Kong jointly with the University of Hong Kong law faculty.

Courses at each institute are taught in English, by American (usually Duke) and non-American faculty. One course provides an introduction to the American legal system. In addition to course instruction, both institutes offer afternoon seminars on international or comparative law topics. The Duke-Geneva Institute takes advantage of the many international organizations located in Geneva to take students to the organization for presentations on international law topics by highly placed officials. The Asia-America Institute has a strong emphasis on Asian and financial institutions, with faculty and speakers who are experts on those topics. LLM students enrolled at Duke who attend an institute may be able to earn up to six credits toward their degree.
The institutes enroll approximately sixty students each year from Duke and other American law schools, as well as students and graduates from law schools throughout the world. While the largest group of students tends to come from the United States, students enroll from a wide range of countries, including Azerbaijan, Bulgaria, China, Denmark, Estonia, France, Germany, Hungary, Japan, Korea, Kyrgyzstan, Macedonia, Mongolia, Nigeria, the Philippines, Portugal, Taiwan, and Thailand. The Asia-America Institute, in particular, typically includes judges, lawyers, faculty members, and government officials.

Brochures describing both institutes can be obtained from Duke University School of Law. For additional information on admissions, faculty, and course listings, visit http://law.duke.edu/internat/institutes.
Career and Professional Development Center

The advantages of attending a small, nationally renowned law school like Duke University School of Law are profound in the area of career and professional development. Our mission at Duke Law School is to help every graduate launches his or her career with the right job—not just any job. While data paint only a very small part of the picture, Duke Law School enjoys one of the strongest employment records among US law schools.

It is a firmly held belief within Duke Law School that the alignment of personal values and professional aspirations is at the core of a meaningful career. During students’ three years at Duke, our philosophy is to help students learn about themselves, what they value most in a career, and to introduce students to the universe of possible career opportunities. We want each graduate to leave Duke Law School with professional opportunities that match his or her unique values and goals, and to be informed decision-makers about their careers—a skill many lawyers may never develop. We structure the pursuit of the “right” job into three broad steps and collaborate with students to help them skillfully execute each one. The three steps are:

- Learn about your own strengths and values.
  - Engage in the law school beyond the classroom
  - Serve the community
  - Risk trying something new.
- Learn about the universe of job and careers.
  - Ask questions to which you don’t know the answer.
  - Build relationships with professors, classmates, and alumni.
  - Take advantage of the opportunities Duke brings you.
- Match your strengths and values with a corresponding position within the universe of careers.

Students enter Duke Law School at differing points along the career path and we are eager to support them at any stage. What is clear is that individuals who are able to determine where their passions lie and what interests them are most readily able to achieve those goals.

The Career and Professional Development Center organizes a variety of programs throughout the year aimed at increasing professionalism, job search skills, and knowledge of the legal profession, among law students. Basic skills are covered such as drafting legal resumes and cover letters. We require mock interviews, videotaped if desired, to improve communication and interpersonal skills. We also support commercial self-assessment tests and counseling conversations about goals and values. An integral part of Duke’s professional development program is the involvement of alumni and other practitioners from around the world. Recent events at the law school include the Business Law Career Symposium, the Current Issues in Intellectual Property Symposium, the Blueprint for Professional Success, the Public Interest Retreat, the International Lawyers’ Videoconference Series, and numerous other speakers. Equally important are programs where upper-level students describe their experiences to newer students.

In the summer following the first year of law school, Duke students engage in a diverse array of jobs. Many choose to work with public interest organizations such as those involved in children’s rights advocacy, Native American Rights or the development of legal systems in developing countries around the globe. Students also experience government legal work, with entities like the Securities & Exchange Commission, a US attorney’s office or the EPA. Others choose to collaborate with a Duke professor over the summer, doing research and writing and cementing a personal and professional bond with a member of our outstanding faculty. Some students decide to experience life in a law firm for the summer. Other students find jobs abroad in Europe or Asia in connection with Duke Law School’s summer programs in Geneva and Hong Kong. Our goal at the law school is to work with students starting early in their first year so they can identify a summer opportunity that they believe is in line with their personal values and objectives.

Second-year students typically begin pursuing 2L summer opportunities while simultaneously working for their 1L summer employer. Again, students engage in many different types of summer jobs, although typically a large number are interested in law firm work. Whatever one’s goals, we encourage students to work closely with us. Every student needs to pursue opportunities through multiple channels, including networking, research and letter writing to employers, contacting alumni and on-campus interviewing. We help students identify employers to contact and prepare them to meet the employers that typically interview at Duke annually. These include:

- law firms and offices from the largest legal markets such as Atlanta, California, Chicago, New York, and Washington, DC;
- firms and offices—large and small—from Boston, Charleston, Charlotte, Dallas, Denver, Florida, Houston, Phoenix, Raleigh, Seattle, and many other cities and states;
- law firms hiring students for Beijing, Hong Kong, London, Shanghai, and Tokyo;
- public interest organizations in fields ranging from environmental policy to legal aid;
- the federal government, including the Department of Justice, the Securities & Exchange Commission, as well as the EPA, FDA, IRS, and others;
- county attorneys; and
- corporations.

With hundreds of employers on campus each year and more actively soliciting Duke applicants through regional job fairs, resume collects and our Video Interview Program, Duke students are able to interview with a broad array of employers. As a point of reference, students working in law firms for the summer typically earn between $1,500 to $3,000 per week, depending on the firm and city. Students who work for public interest organizations during the summer are eligible to apply for summer public interest fellowships sponsored by the law school and other organizations. In addition, the Public Interest Law Foundation, which is comprised entirely of students, works throughout the year to raise money for fellow classmates who choose summer employment in public interest organizations. All students who want to receive funding for summer public interest work are eligible to do so.

Duke Law School graduates launch their legal careers throughout the United States and around the world. Typically, approximately one-third of Duke students choose to work in either New York or Washington, DC, following law school. Ten to 15 percent of each graduating class chooses to practice in North Carolina—from Charlotte to Raleigh and beyond—with a similar amount heading to California and cities including San Francisco, Los Angeles, and San Diego. Boston, Charleston, Chicago, Denver, Philadelphia, and Seattle, as well as cities in Florida and Texas, draw the interest of up to 10 percent of our students, too. Indeed, few law schools match the dispersion of their graduates that is found at Duke, and the law school today has more than 9,000 alumni living and practicing law in almost every state in the country. We also have a significant alumni population who live and practice law abroad. Duke’s extensive alumni network is very active and supportive of students who are seeking employment during and after law school.

The Career and Professional Development Center prides itself on introducing students to the practice of law and giving young attorneys the tools they need to make educated career decisions for years to come. We have an outstanding team of extremely dedicated and talented professionals with multiple advanced degrees and professional experience in private and public legal practice, business, consulting, counseling, and other fields.
Alumni and Development Office

Duke Law School graduates are among the most geographically dispersed of any of our peer law schools. Our alumni can be found across the country and around the world, yet their relationship with Duke Law School remains close. Every graduate of Duke Law is a member of the Law Alumni Association. The Office of Alumni & Development, working with the Duke Law Alumni Association, connect the school’s alumni with the law school and with each other. Information about alumni programs sponsored by Duke Law School is also available online at http://law.duke.edu/alumni/?q=alumni.

Law School Leadership Boards

Duke Law School has two leadership boards: the Board of Visitors and the Law Alumni Association Board of Directors. More information is available at http://law.duke.edu/alumni/connected/boards/.

Board of Visitors

The Board of Visitors serves as an advisory board to the law school’s dean and administrators, the university administration and the university Board of Trustees on matters of student development, external affairs, fundraising, and faculty and academic affairs. Membership consists of a chairperson; general, senior, and life members; international members; and parent members.

Law Alumni Association Board of Directors

The Law Alumni Association Board of Directors (LAA) consists of approximately sixty-five members. Twenty-five of the board members are a part of the New Lawyers Division (NLD). NLD members are graduates from the most recent five graduating classes. The mission of the Duke Law Alumni Association Board and the New Lawyers Division is to bring together Duke Law School alumni, students, faculty, and administrators to develop and strengthen the bonds within the greater law school community. The Board of Directors serves to achieve this mission, coordinating efforts among alumni and providing avenues of communication and cooperation among the members of the Duke Law School community.

Local Alumni Clubs

The Office of Alumni & Development coordinates and supports the activities of local Duke Law clubs in the United States and abroad, to increase both a sense of community and an awareness of the needs of the law school. These clubs organize social and educational events which are often attended by a Duke Law administrator or faculty member. Besides serving a social and networking function for local alumni and encouraging a sense of community, Duke Law clubs also provide practical assistance to the admissions and career services offices of the law school.

Duke Law School also pursues a strong alumni relations program with our growing international alumni body. The alumni and development office, in conjunction with the international studies office, sponsors programs for current international students to explain alumni relations and development programs and to encourage students to stay in touch with Duke Law School after graduation. There are several active Duke Law clubs outside the United States. Alumni events are held each year in conjunction with the transnational institutes in Europe and Asia. To learn more about our international engagement and our most recent international reunion visit http://law.duke.edu/alumni/international/.

Reunions and Alumni Weekend

The Office of Alumni & Development works with an alumni committee from each class to organize reunions by class at five-year intervals. Reunions are held in the spring of each year, and offer a full weekend of activities designed to encourage alumni to reconnect with Duke Law School, former professors, and classmates. Class committees are formed to help plan reunion activities, encourage attendance and assist in raising class gifts to benefit Duke Law. At the fiftieth reunion, alumni are inducted into the Half-Century Club. http://law.duke.edu/alumni/reunion2013/recap/

Alumni Awards

The Law Alumni Association presents five awards to outstanding graduates and friends. More information is available at http://law.duke.edu/alumni/reunion/alumniawards/.

- The Charles S. Murphy Award is presented to an alumnus or alumna whose devotion to the common welfare is manifested in public service or in dedication to education. Charles S. Murphy T’31 L’34 devoted himself to public service, serving in the administrations of presidents Truman, Kennedy, and Johnson as well as serving as a trustee of Duke University.

- The Charles S. Rhyne Award honors alumni who exemplify the highest standards of professional ability and personal integrity. Charles Rhyne T’34 L’37 served on the Boards of Trustees at Duke and George Washington universities, and was president of the American Bar Association.

- The A. Kenneth Pye Award honors the life and work of former law school dean and Duke University chancellor A. Kenneth Pye. The Pye Award is designed to recognize contributions made to the field of legal education by Duke Law alumni or other members of the Duke Law School community.

- The International Alumni Achievement Award honors an international alumnus or alumna who has given distinguished service to his or her own profession and home country and has maintained strong ties with Duke Law School.

- The Young Alumni Award recognizes a graduate of fifteen years or less who has made significant contributions of leadership and service both professionally and to Duke Law School.

Alumni Programs for Students

Alumni frequently visit Duke Law School for a variety of reasons: to recruit for their firms, to participate in panels for the Office of Career Services, to speak about their practice specialty or pro bono activities, or to be guest lecturers in particular classes. We also offer an important electronic medium for alumni and students to connect via the professional networking site, LinkedIn. The group is called STAR Student—Alumni Relationship and is a subgroup of the Duke Law Alumni group.

In addition to coordinating these activities, the staff of the Office of Alumni & Development is eager to get to know students throughout their law school careers. We are available to individual students and student organizations who wish to contact alumni. The Office of Alumni & Development, in fact, helps to usher students into alumni status by coordinating, along with the Office of Student Affairs, the law school’s Hooding Ceremony.

Fundraising

Financial strength is critical for Duke Law School to retain and build on its reputation as a global leader in legal education, to support faculty excellence, to attract the best students, and to foster innovative programs and clinics for teaching and legal research. Duke Law School has come a very long way in a few short decades—thanks largely to the support of alumni and friends. Our success is based on the dedication of our alumni who recognize the value of a world class education. As we enter the fourth year of our Duke Forward campaign, our donors have helped us achieve 56% of our $85 million fundraising goal. More information is available at http://law.duke.edu/campaign/.
Alumni Publications

The Duke Law Magazine, an award-winning publication, provides news and features about Duke Law programs, faculty research, student life, and alumni achievements.

Duke Law E-news, a monthly e-mail newsletter distributed by the communications office, is the latest way to stay current with news and events at Duke Law School. Subscribers to this free service will receive notification of speakers, conferences, alumni activities, and more.

The Advocate: An Alumni and Development Newsletter, is a biannual informational newsletter that provides alumni and friends an overview of the faculty, students and programs who have been supported by generous philanthropic support.

Learning to Practice

There is a growing importance on practice and skills courses within the law community. These types of critical experiences are possible through clinic work and centers and programs. Clinics not only offer an intense experience of practice, but they serve a public need and allow students to work with future clients and experts. Centers and programs create opportunities to combine curriculum with practice opportunities, effectively integrating the law school with other areas of the university. The ability to hire practice faculty with extensive expertise in areas of most interest to our students will not only contribute to the success of our students but help attract the brightest and most talented.
